(1) The appropriations to the Department by the acts of 1921 amount to $12,121,000. Of this amount $567,451.37 was requisitioned prior to June 1, 1921.

(2) This transfer as shown on the ledgers of the Department of Highways represents reimbursements from the local authorities which were placed in the State Bond Road Fund by the Treasury Department because the original payments were made from the State Bond Road Fund, notwithstanding the fact that the requisitions were drawn on the General Fund by the Department. This transfer reimburses the State Bond Road Fund for local authorities share of construction work.

(3) It is recommended to turn over to the Motor Fund all receipts from the gasoline tax during the next biennium. These receipts are estimated to amount to about $4,812,500 which will make available in the Motor Fund approximately $59,516,292 for the biennium 1925-1927. It is further recommended that the Highway Department then assume all obligations for principal and interest requirements and charges of all Highway bonds. The estimated requirements for this purpose for the next biennium are $10,278,257. This will leave an approximate balance in the Motor Fund of $49,238,035, which, with $39,987, 500 estimated as available in the State Bond Road Fund will approximate $89,387,035 for construction and maintenance of highways for the next biennium. In addition to this Federal and local aid, refunds to be received will amount to about $17,550,000, making a grand total of $106,775,535.

(4) Expenditures under appropriations for 1921-1923 and 1923-1925 bienniums will appear under the Department of Property and Supplies.

DEPARTMENT OF HIGHWAYS

The following are the estimated receipts, exclusive of any appropriations that may be made from the general fund, and the estimated expenditures of the Department of Highways until December 31, 1927.

MAINTENANCE

The maintenance figures are on a calendar year basis as each year's maintenance work is financed from each year's motor receipts. The basis for the estimated requirements can be readily understood from the following figures representing the general highway departmental maintenance expenditures for the year 1924:

General repairs, resurfacing, replacement, guard rail, etc.	$17,512,704.97
Grade crossing elimination, culverts, bridges etc.	1,468,585.41
General administrative expense of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles, including the equipping of the Highway Motor Patrol	1,700,000.00
Purchase of road equipment and tools, office supplies and equipment, rental of garages and offices, erection of garages, shops, etc., and general administrative and office expense of the Department of Highways	2,818,709.62
(Including estimated expenditures for December, 1924)
Total	$23,500,000.00

This figure can be compared with the estimated maintenance receipts for the succeeding years.

As a matter of fact, the Department's estimated requirements greatly exceed the estimated Motor Fund receipts, but will have to be reduced to conform more nearly to the estimated motor revenue, as shown in the following tabulation:

Year	Motor Fund Receipts	Maintenance Requirements
1925	$22,120,000	$29,135,000
1926	24,776,000	30,705,000
1927	27,253,000	31,415,000

It will be seen by the above that all of the estimated motor revenue will be badly needed to finance the maintenance work of the Department.

Of the $50,000,000 bond issue, $10,000,000 has been allocated for construction on the secondary system on the 50-50 basis,—that is, the county and the state each pay one-half the cost, thus leaving $40,000,000 of bond fund money for construction on the primary system. This $40,000,000 will be augumented by about $8,690,000 of Federal Aid and interest, making a total of $48,690,000.

When the constitutionality of the Enabling Act was questioned and the bonds could not be sold, it became necessary to finance the highway construction of 1924 from other sources. This was done from old balances that were available from Federal Aid in the amount of about $1,600,000 of the 1925 motor receipts were used to make payments up to January 15. A total of $9,000,000 of State funds will probably be required by April 1, 1925. Assuming that the motor fund will be reimbursed from the bond fund for this amount, $9,000,000, of which $8,500,000 was for primary construction and $500,000 for secondary construction, the balances available for construction on the primary system will be about $38,590,000 and the balance available for construction on the secondary system will be about $9,500,000. With the latter sum it is estimated that 410 miles can be constructed on the secondary system.

If the entire primary system is paved from the bond issue, and about 410 miles on the secondary system out of a total of 4,591 miles of unpaved roads this will still leave about 3,488 miles of unimproved roads on the highway system. To pave this mileage and thus complete the paving of the highway system will require an additional sum of about $175,000,000.

APPROPRIATION RECOMMENDED

For the payment of the salary of the Secretary of Highways, two years, the sum of twenty-four thousand dollars.

For the purpose of completing the rebuilding of any county bridge or bridges, the construction of which has been undertaken by the department under the provisions of the Act approved the eleventh day of July one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three (Pamphlet Laws one thousand seventy) entitled "An Act empowering the State Highway Department to rebuild certain inter-county bridges located on the routes of State Highways, which bridges cross rivers and have been heretofore destroyed by fire and making an appropriation" the sum of sixty thousand dollars ($60,000).

For the maintenance of inter-state bridges over the Delaware River, other than those the maintenance of which may be paid for out of the State Motor License Fund, two years, the sum of nineteen thousand three hundred and twenty-three dollars ($19,323).

PAYMENT OF HIGHWAY BOND CHARGES OUT OF MOTOR FUND.

AN ACT

Making an appropriation to the Board of Finance and Revenue out of the Motor License Fund for the payment of interest and sinking fund charges on bonds of this Commonwealth heretofore or hereafter issued for the purpose of improving and rebuilding highways and for the payment of compensation to the Commonwealth's fiscal agent.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the sum of ten million two hundred and seventy-eight thousand two hundred and fifty-seven dollars ($10,278,257) or so much thereof as may be necessary is hereby appropriated to the Board of Finance and Revenue out of the Motor License Fund for the two fiscal years beginning June first, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five for the payment of the interest and sinking fund charges on bonds of this Commonwealth heretofore or hereafter issued for the purpose of improving and rebuilding highways and for the payment of compensation to the State's fiscal agent for services in registering, transferring and paying the interest on such bonds as follows:

(a) The sum of eight million fifty-seven thousand eight hundred dollars ($8,057,800) or so much thereof as may be necessary for the payment of interest on the said bonds.

(b) The sum of two million one hundred and ninety thousand four hundred and fifty-seven dollars ($2,190,457) or so much thereof as may be necessary for making payments into the sinking fund, and

(c) The sum of thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) or so much thereof as may be necessary for the payment of compensation to the Commonwealth's loan and transfer agent. Of this loan and transfer agent shall receive the sum of seven thousand five hundred dollars ($7,500) per annum payable in semi-annual installments for services rendered in connection with the registration, transfer, and payment of interest on highway bonds issued prior to January first, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five. The remaining fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) of this item or so much thereof as may be necessary shall be paid to the said loan and transfer agent at such time, in such amounts and upon such basis as may be provided by law or agreed upon between the Board of Finance and Revenue and such loan and transfer agent.

Sestion 2. All payments out of the Motor License Fund under the provisions of this act shall be upon warrant of the Auditor General drawn upon the State Treasurer upon requisition of the State Treasurer pursuant to the resolution of the Board of Finance and Revenue. The State Treasurer shall not, however, honor any warrant for the payment of interest or sinking fund charges under the provisions of this act earlier than the fifteenth day prior to the due date of the interest or payment date of the sinking fund charge for which said warrant is drawn; and the Board of Finance and Revenue shall semi-annually notify the Secretary of Highways of the amounts which will be withdrawn from the Motor License Fund during the ensuing six months' period under the provisions of this act.

TRANSFER OF GASOLINE TAX TO MOTOR FUND

AN ACT

To amend section nine of the Act approved the fifteenth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three (Pamphlet Laws, eight hundred and thirty-four) entitled "An act imposing a State tax, including an additional emergency State tax, on liquid fuels, including all liquids ordinarily, practically and commercially usable in internal combustion engines for the generation of power, and all distillates of, and condensates from, petroleum, natural gas, coal, coal tar and vegetable ferments so usable and sold in this Commonwealth, except for the purpose of resale; providing for the collection of such tax, and for the distribution and use of the revenues derived therefrom; providing for the filing of certificates and reports of the sale of such liquid fuels to dealers; and fixing penalties", providing that the Commonwealth's share of the revenue from the said tax and said emergency tax shall be paid into the Motor License Fund and appropriating moneys paid into said Motor License Fund hereunder.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That section nine of the act approved the fifteenth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three (Pamphlet Laws eight hundred and thirty-four) entitled "An act imposing a State tax, including an additional emergency State tax on liquid fuels, including all liquids ordinarily, practically, and commercially usable in internal combustion engines for the generation of power, and all distillates of, and condensates from, petroleum, natural gas, coal, coal tar, and vegetable ferments so usable and sold in this Commonwealth, except for the purpose of resale; providing for the collection of such tax, and for the distribution and use of the revenues derived therefrom; providing for the filing of certificates and reports of the sale of such liquid fuels to dealers; and fixing penalties" be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 9. Fifty per centum of all taxes collected under the provisions of this act, except the additional emergency State tax imposed by the provisions of this act, shall be credited to the county where the tax was collected, and shall be used only for that purpose of the construction, reconstruction, maintenance, and repair of roads and highways, and for the payment of the interest on county bonds issued for road purposes, and shall be paid over to such county semi-annually on the first day of August and February of each year. The remaining fifty per centum of said tax and the whole amount of the additional emergency State tax imposed by the provisions of this act shall prior to the first day of June one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five be paid into the general fund of the State Treasury for the use of the Commonwealth. On and after the first day of June one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five fifty per centum of said tax and the whole amount of the emergency State tax imposed by the provisions of this act shall be paid into the Motor License Fund in the State Treasury. All moneys paid into the Motor License Fund hereunder specifically appropriated to the Department of Highways to be used by that Department for the purposes for which other moneys in the said Motor License Fund may be used by that Department under the provisions of the several acts of Assembly of this Commonwealth.

AN ACT

To amend sections eleven and twelve of an Act approved the thirtieth day of June one thousand nine hundred and nineteen (Pamphlet Laws six hundred and seventy-eight) entitled "An act relating to and regulating the use and operation of motor vehicles and vehicles propelled by, or trailing after motor vehicles; requiring the registration of the same, and the licensing of all operators thereof; providing for the fees therefor, and the disposition of such fees; prohibiting the unauthorized use of, and tampering with, motor vehicles; limiting and defining the powers of cities, boroughs, incorporated towns, townships, and counties, as to the regulation of the use and equipment of motor vehicles, and the taxing, registration, or licensing thereof; miposing certain duties on the State Highway Commissioners, and on proprietors of public garages; providing procedure and penalties for violations thereof: and the disposition of fines collected, and regulating the service of process and proceedings in actions for damages arising from the use of any motor vehicle", as amended.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That section eleven of the Act approved the thirtieth day of June one thousand nine hundred and nineteen (Pamphlet Laws six hundred and seventy-eight) entitled "An Act relating to and regulating the use and operation of motor vehicles and vehicles propelled by, or trailing after motor vehicles; requiring the registration of the same, and the licensing of all operators thereof; providing the fees therefor, and the disposition of such fees; prohibiting the unauthorized use of, and tampering with, motor vehicles; limiting and defining the powers of cities, boroughs, incorporated towns, townships, and counties, as to the regulation of the use and equipment of motor vehicles, and the taxing, registration, or licensing thereof; imposing certain duties on the State Highway Commissioner, and on proprietors of public garages; providing procedure and penalties for violation thereof; and disposition of fines collected, and regulating the service of process and proceedings in actions for damages arising from the use of any motor vehicle," as amended by the Act approved the fourteenth day of June one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three (Pamphlet Laws seven hundred and eighteen) entitled "An Act to amend an act, approved the thirtieth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen (Pamphlet Laws, six hundred and seventy-eight) entitled 'An act relating to and regulating the use and operation of motor vehicles and vehicles propelled by, or trailing after motor vehicles; requiring the registration of the same, and the licensing of all operators thereof; providing the fees therefor, and the disposition of such fees; prohibiting the unauthorized use of, and tampering with, motor vehicles; limiting and defining the powers of cities, boroughs, incorporated towns, townships, and counties, as to the regulation of the use and equipment of motor vehicles, and the taxing, registration, or licensing thereof; imposing certain duties on the State Highway Commissioner, and on proprietors of public garages; providing procedure and penalties for violations thereof; and the disposition of fines collected, and regulating the service of process and proceedings in actions for damages arising from the use of any motor vehicle' as amended; by further regulating the use of registration plates; prescribing fees for omnibuses, and changing other existing fees; changing the date for the licensing year; limiting the weights of certain trailers; providing for the examination of operators; authorizing the State Highway Commissioner to publish and sell lists of registrations; authorizing municipalities to enact certain ordinances; making an appropriation for refunding moneys; and providing penalties; and repealing section seventeen of said act" is hereby further amended to read as follows:

Section 11. The [Commissioner] Secretary of Highways is authorized to [make requisition on the Department of Public Printing and Binding for] order through the Department of Property and Supplies as purchasing agency the printing of necessary forms, bulletins, and other printed matter required for carrying out the provisions of this act and for the dissemination of information to the public.

Section 2. That section twelve of said act as amended by said act of the fourteenth day of June one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 12. Moneys derived under the provisions of this act from registration and license fees and from fines and penalties collected under the provisions of this act for violations of the same and forfeited bail and other miscellaneous receipts shall be paid by the [State Highway] Department of Highways into the State Treasury [and the same] there to be kept seperate and from all other moneys in the State Treasury, and to be known as the "Motor License Fund". Except to the extent that the moneys in the said Motor License Fund shall be necessary for the payment by the Board of Finance and Revenue of interest and sinking fund charges on bonds of this Commonwealth issued for the purpose of improving and rebuilding highways and for the payment of the compensation of the State's fiscal agent for services in registering, transferring and paying the interest of such bonds, the moneys which may be from time to time in the said Motor License Fund from whatever source derived are hereby specifically appropriated to the [State Highway] Department of Highways to carry out and enforce the provisions of the act to which this is an amendment, and all amendments and supplements thereto, including the penal provisions thereof, for the purpose of assisting in the maintenance, construction, replacement, reconstruction, improvement and repairs of State Highways and of State-aid Highways, for the maintenance of interstate bridges over the Delaware River between this Commonwealth and the State of New Jersey at Milford, Easton, Riegelsville, Point Pleasant, New Hope, Washington Crossing, Yardley and Norrisville, and of inter-state bridges between this Commonwealth and the State of New York at Hancock, Shohola, and Matamoras, [and] for the payment of the salaries, wages or other compensation of such deputies, directors, superintendents, bureau or division chiefs, assistant chiefs, experts, scientists, engineers, surveyors, draftsmen, accountants, secretaries, auditors, inspectors, examiners, statisticians, clerks, stenographers, bookkeepers, messengers, laborers, and other assistants as may be required for the proper conduct of the work of the Department of Highways, for the payment of the traveling and other expenses of the Secretary of Highways and the other officers and employes of the Department, for the purchase through the Department of Property and Supplies as purchasing agency of furniture, furnishings, stationery, supplies, materials, equipment, fuel, motor vehicles, and printing and binding necessary for the conduct of the work of the Department, for the payment of rentals for branch offices or any other grounds, buildings or quarters necessary for the work of the Department, for the erection and repairs of buildings, for the payment of postage, telegrams, telephone rentals and toll charges and rentals for or royalties upon leased office or other devices or machines and for any and all other expenses of every kind and description necessary to effectually carry on the work of the [State Highway] Department of Highways as described in the Act of Assembly, approved the thirty-first day of may, one thousand nine hundred and eleven, known as the State Highway Act, and the amendments and supplements thereto, and to carry out and enforce the provisions of the Act to which this is an amendment, and all amendments and supplements thereto, including the penal provisions thereof, and for that purpose the Commissioner is hereby authorized to appoint such employes as in his discretion are necessary said money to be paid from the State Treasury upon requisition of the [State Highway Commissioner] Secretary of Highways and after audit and approval by the Auditor General and State Treasurer in the usual manner. Provided, however, that it shall not be necessary for the Department of Highways to purchase through the Department of Property and Supplies as purchasing agency materials, supplies and equipment materials, supplies and equipment shall be purchased through the Department of Property and Supplies as heretofore provided.

Provided, that in case any moneys are or have been paid to the State Treasurer as provided for in this section, and to which it appears the department is not rightfully entitled, the person or persons who have paid the same may present a claim to the department for a refund. The said claim, and all evidence presented therewith, shall be presented to the Auditor General, State Treasurer, and Attorney General, who shall consider the same, and if in their opinion, the department has no valid claim to such moneys, and the same properly belong to claimant or claimants and ought in equity and good faith to be refunded to him or them, they shall so certify, under their hands and official seals, specifying the amount or amounts to be refunded and the person or persons to whom the same are to be paid respectively. The said certificate shall be filed in the office of the Auditor General, who shall thereupon draw his warrant upon the State Treasurer, payable to said claimant or claimants for the amount found to be due him or them. The said claim to be paid out of the moneys derived under the provisions of this act from registration and license fees and from fines and forfeited bail and other miscellaneous receipts.

DEPARTMENT OF PROPERTY AND SUPPLIES.

The amount recommended for salaries $816,000 is a net increase of $203,042 over the appropriation to the General Department for salaries and wages in this biennium, as $72,000 for salaries and wages in the Bureau of Publications is merely a transfer.

This increase is due to the following:

1. The budget assumes a transfer from Various Departments of custodial services now budgeted for by the various departments. This transfer will cost the State not more money but less. The total carried on the Department payrolls as now transferred amounts to about $96,000, and it is estimated that about $83,000 will carry this work when under central supervision.

2. The new South Office Building requires many new employes, mostly in the custodial service. The amount needed for this purpose as now estimated is $100,000.

3. An increase of $20,000 is due to the employment of superintendents of new construction as required by law.

The Budget assumes throughout that the Department of Property and Supplies will take over the purchasing of equipment and supplies for several departments heretofore paying for their own supplies. An increase of $150,000 is needed for this purpose, which will mean a net saving in present total expenditures by spending agencies.

The amount recommended for printing and binding for the Bureau of Publications is the same as that appropriated in this biennium. The budget assumes that self-sustaining agencies, such as highways, fish and game, will pay for their own printing, but that other agencies now paying for their printing will secure through the Department of Property and Supplies. The one will about balance the other.

An increased amount will be needed for advertising unservicable property as required by law.

The reduction of $3,000 in the recommendation for heat, light, power and water is due to vacating several offices outside of the Capitol Building.

The increase for expressage, postage and cartage is nominal only, as the sum asked for is the total spent from the different appropriations to the Department for this purpose in this biennium.

The Budget assumes that the Department of Property and Supplies will take over all office rentals now budgeted by the various departments except for self-sustaining departments and the State Police. An increase of $15,000 will be necessary for this transfer. This will mean a saving to the State in the total expenditures for rent.

The budget assumes also that this Department will pay for all telephone rentals, except for self-supporting departments, and will pay the telephone charges for the Legislature and the Judiciary. The telephone rentals recently advanced 33%. Twenty thousand dollars ($20,000) additional will be required to meet this increase in telephone rentals and to take over telephone rentals now paid by the various departments. The budget assumes that long distance calls and telegrams will be paid for by each of the spending agencies as there is no economy in the purchase of these in quantities and responsibility for economy in their use should rest upon each spending agency.

A sum of $350,000 will be needed to complete the South Office Building and install fixtures, making the total cost of that building, including fixtures, $3,250,000.

The needs of the South Office Building will require an auxiliary power plant engine and generator for relief and emergency uses, and $80,000 will be required for this purpose.

Through the cancellation of unnecessary bonds and by reduction of rates, the cost of bonding employes has been reduced $7,000 for the next biennium.

The appropriations recommended for the various memorials are necessary for their completion.

Violet Oakley had a contract for certain mural decorations in the Supreme Court Room. Money has not been available for carrying out the State's part of this contract. The $35,612 is to enable the State to meet its contract.

The appropriation of $86,000 is recommended for installing electric elevators and for changing the voltage for electric current. This will save the State $14,000 per year hereafter.

The $150,000 recommended for improvements to Capitol Park is for road-ways and for curbing and paving in front of and around the South Office Building.

A new item of $7,500 will be needed for advertising the highway road bonds authorized by the recent constitutional amendment.

Several of the Departments have carried liability insurance on their State cars. An appropriation of $10,000 is recommended for the Department of Property and Supplies in order that one department may purchase this insurance and thus save money by central purchasing, and also secure uniform contracts.

Mr. L. B. Smith, of Wellsville, made over-payment of $40 on a purchase of unserviceable property, and reimbursement can be made only through direct appropriation.

APPROPRIATION RECOMMENDED

For the payment of the salary of the Secretary of Property and Supplies, two years, the sum of sixteen thousand dollars ($16,000).

And provided further, that any department, board or commission which has the right to requisition for supplies purchased under this paragraph and also the right to purchase supplies out of its own appropriation, shall not be required to postpone purchase of supplies out of its own appropriation until the appropriation made by this paragraph shall have been exhausted; and provided further, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to alter or modify the provisions of law requiring certain departments, boards and commissions to purchase supplies through the Department of Property and Supplies as purchasing agency.

For the purchase of any emergency supplies or equipment, the want of which may not have been anticipated at the time of the making of the annual schedule for which requisition shall be made, or for the payment of the cost of emergency repairs and of temporary help for the care, maintenance and preservation of the public grounds and buildings, including the Executive Mansion, or for any other unforseen expenses of the Department, two years, the sum of seventeen thousand dollars ($17,000), which appropriation shall be known as the contingent fund.

For the payment of printing, binding, ruling, lithographing, color printing, engraving, paper, envelopes, cloth and other substances on which printing is done, plates, cuts, electrotypes, dies, stamps, and other printing and binding supplies, such printing, binding and other items to be furnished as provided by law to the Legislature, the Governor, the Judicial Department, and the several administrative departments, boards and commissions of the State government, except the Department of Highways, the Board of Game Commissioners, the Board of Fish Commissioners, the Boards of Trustees of State institutions, the State Workmen's Insurance Board, any temporary boards or commissions created by Act of Assembly, the Department of Welfare insofar as concerns printing supplies for use in printing plants in penal institutions and the Department of Labor and Industry insofar as tags and labels required to enforce the Act of June fourteenth, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three (Pamphlet Laws eight hundred and two) are concerned, two years, the sum of seven hundred eighty-nine thousand dollars ($789,000).

For the cost of advertising schedules of supplies, the sale of unservicable property, proposals for executing the State printing and binding, readvertising any schedules or proposals when necessary, and all other advertisements necessary for the proper conduct of the work of the department, two years, the sum of sixteen thousand dollars ($16,000).

For the payment of the cost of water furnished by the City of Harrisburg, and for electric current, gas and steam for the public grounds and buildings when not supplied from the Capitol power plant, two years the sum of fifty-eight thousand dollars ($58,000).

For the cost of freight, express, drayage, storage, and postage, and incidental expenses of the Department and the several boards and commissions attached thereto, two years, the sum of forty-five thousand dollars ($45,000).

For the payment of the rent of offices and rooms outside of the Capitol Building, when necessary for the accomodation of any department, board or commission of the State government except the Pennsylvania State Police, the Department of Highways, the Department of Banking, the Board of Game Commissioners, the Board of Fish Commissioners, the Board of Trustees of State Institutions, the State Workmen's Insurance Board, and any temporary boards or commissions created by Act of Assembly, two years, the sum of two hundred ninety thousand dollars ($290,000),

For the payment of telephone toll charges and telegrams for the Legislature, the Judicial Department and the Department of Property and Supplies, and the boards and commissions connected with said department, and for the payment of rental charges for telephone service and patented leased office devices, for the Legislature, the Governor, the Executive Mansion, the judicial department and the several administrative departments, boards and commissions of the State government, except the Department of Highways, the Department of Banking, the Board of Game Commissioners, the Board of Fish Commissioners, and the Boards of Trustees of State Institutions, the State Workemen's Insurance Board, any temporary boards or commissions created by Act of Assembly and excluding royalties and rentals paid by the Department of Welfare for the operation of machinery in industries in penal institutions, two years, the sum of one hundred fifty thousand dollars ($150,000).

For the purpose of carrying on the work of completing an office building in Capitol Park in accordance with the plans outlining the proposed improvements to Capitol Park and Capitol Park Extension as made by Arnold W. Brunner, architect, which plans are now on file in the office of the department, and as authorized by an Act, approved the eighteenth day of July, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen (Pamphlet Laws, one thousand and fifty-three), entitled "An act authorizing the Board of Commissioners of Public Grounds and Buildings to erect, construct, and complete an office building in the Capitol Park, and to grade and terrace the ground in connection therewith; providing for the letting of contracts therefor; authorizing the appointment of a superintendent of construction; and making an appropriation for the payment thereof", two years, the sum of three hundred fifty thousand dollars ($350,000).

For the purpose of making alterations and extensions to the Capitol power plant, the sum of eighty thousand dollars ($80,000), or so much thereof as may be necessary.

For the payment of the cost of procuring bonds required to be given to the Commonwealth by department heads and other State officers and employes, two years, the sum of twenty-three thousand dollars ($23,000).

For the payment due to A. W. Brunner, architect and enginer, for services rendered in connection with alterations to the Capitol power plant and the plans for the improvement of the Capitol grounds, the sum of five thousand dollars ($5,000).

For cost of completing the George Gordon Meade Statue at Washington, D. C., in accordance with such plans as may be adopted by the Department of Property and Supplies with the approval of the General George Gordon Meade Statue Commission, and for the reasonable expenses necessary in connection with the dedication of the said Statue, the sum of two hundred thirty-two thousand dollars ($232,000).

For the payment of amounts due or to become due by the Commonwealth to the sculptor and others on account of the erection of the Robert Morris Monument at Philadelphia, and for the expenses of dedicating the said monument, the sum of six thousand dollars ($6,000).

For the completion and dedication of the General Galushia Pennypacker Monument at Philadelphia, the sum of five thousand dollars ($5,000).

For the payment of amounts due or to become due to Violet Oakley for mural paintings in the Supreme Court room of the Capitol, as provided in contracts heretofore made for the Commonwealth by the Board of Commissioners of Public Grounds and Buildings, the sum of thirty-five thousand six hundred and twelve dollars ($35,612).

For changing motors and other equipment on Capitol elevators from hydraulic to electric, and changing the voltage of the Capitol electric plant from two hundred and twenty to one hundred and ten, the sum of eighty-six thousand dollars ($86,000).

For the improvement of the west capitol terrace and approaches, and for grading and other improvements to grounds adjacent to the South Office Building, the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000).

For necessary advertising in connection with the issuance of State bonds for the purpose of improving and rebuilding the highways of the Commonwealth, two years, the sum of seven thousand five hundred dollars ($7,500).

For payments to the several fire companies of the city of Harrisburg, said payments to be distributed among said companies in equal amounts, two years, the sum of five thousand dollars ($5,000).

For procuring automobile liability insurance covering the operation of vehicles owned by the Commonwealth or such part of them as may be deemed advisable, such insurance in all cases to protect both the Commonwealth and the employe thereof operating the same against claims for damages for injury to person or property within such amount as the Department of Property and Supplies shall deem appropriate, two years, the sum of ten thousand dollars ($10,000). Provided, however, that no part of this appropriation shall be expended in procuring such insurance for vehicles operated by the Department of Highways, the Board of Game Commissioners or the Board of Fish Commissioners.

To enable the Department to refund to Mr. L. B. Smith, Wellsville, Pennsylvania, for an erroneous overpayment made by said L. B. Smith for unserviceable property purchased from the Department at public sale, the sum of forty dollars ($40.00).

PENNSYLVANIA STATE POLICE—Concluded.

The increase of $387,000 recommended for the State Police is needed for the following purposes:

1. To provide an increase in service pay from $5.00 a month to $10.00 a month each year for the second to fifth years of service and a further increase of $5.00 per month for the sixth and seventh years of service. This will require about $80,000. The longer the service of State Police the greater their value to the State. This increased service pay is necessary to keep competent men in the service. The final salary after six years of service will then be about equal to the beginning salary of policemen in the larger cities at the present time, while of the two the beginning pay of a State policeman will still be from $400 to $500 lower.

2. The increase of $307,000 in addition to the $80,000 needed for service pay will keep the force up to about 300 men. The strength provided by Law is 421 men.

APPROPRIATION RECOMMENDED

For the payment of the salary of the Superintendent of State Police, two years, the sum of twelve thousand dollars ($12,000).

For the payment of the salaries, wages or other compensation of the State Police Force and such deputies, chiefs, statisticians, clerks, experts, and other assistants as may be necessary for the work of the Force, chemists' fees, veterinary fees, medical attendance, and hospital charges for members of the State Police Force injured in the line of duty, fees for mileage and reporting fires, inspection of property, keep of horses, rent of barracks, maintenance of substations and of motor-vehicles, transportation and traveling expenses, investigation of incendiary fires, cost of taking testimony and serving of process, removal of dangerous fire hazards, preparing and disseminating knowledge of fire protection, the purchase of suitable uniforms, arms and equipment, horses, horse equipment and motor vehicles, and any other necessary expenses including telegrams and telephone toll charges incurred in the discretion of the superintendent, in the proper operation of the Pennsylvania State Police and the State Police Force, two years, the sum of one million eight hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars ($1,875,000).

AN ACT

To amend Section seven of the act approved the third day of June one thousand nine hundred and nineteen (Pamphlet Laws three hundred and sixty-six entitled "An act reorganizing the Department of State Police; creating therein a Bureau of Fire Protection; providing for a State Police Force, and defining the powers and duties of the same, including the enforcement of laws relating to game, fish, forestry, and water supply, and certain other laws, and including the collection of information useful for the detection of crime, and the apprehension of criminals; providing for the equipment, maintenance and transportation of such police; providing for barracks and substations therefor; and prescribing penalties", as amended.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That section seven of the act approved the third day of June, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen, (Pamphlet Laws three hundred and sixty-six) entitled "An act reorganizing the Department of State Police; creating therein a Bureau of Fire Protection; providing for a State Police Force, and defining the powers and duties of the same, including the enforcement of laws relating to game, fish, forestry, and water supply and certain other laws, and including the collection of information useful for the detection of crime, and the apprehension of criminals; providing for the equipment, maintenance and transportation of such police; providing for barracks and substations therefor; and prescribing penalties" as amended by the act approved the twenty-first day of May, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-one (Pamphlet Laws one thousand and sixty-one) entitled "An act to amend section six and seven of the act, approved the third day of June, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen (Pamphlet Laws, three hundred sixty-six), entitled 'An act reorganizing the Department of State Police; creating therein a Bureau of Fire Protection; providing for a State Police Force, and defining the powers and duties of the same, including the enforcement of laws relating to game, fish, forestry, and water supply, and certain other laws, and including the collection of information useful for the detection of crime and the apprehension of criminals; providing for the equipment, maintenance, and transportation of such police; providing for barracks and substations therefor; and prescribing penalties'" be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 7. The Superintendent of the Pennsylvania State Police shall be appointed by the Governor for a term of four years from the third Tuesday of January next following the election of the Governor and until his successor shall have been appointed and qualified. The members of the State Police Force shall be enlisted for a period of two years, and the officers and enlisted men of the State Police Force shall receive an increase of [sixty] one hundred and twenty dollars per annum after one year's service and an additional increase of [sixty] one hundred and twenty dollars per annum during continuous service for each of the following [five] three years; and an additional increase of sixty dollars per annum during continuous service for each of the following two years: Provided, That this section shall not apply to the Superintendent of the Pennsylvania State Police and [deputy superintendent of the Department of State Police] the deputies, chiefs, statisticians, clerks, experts and other assistants engaged in the work of the Pennsylvania State Police who are not members of the State Police Force and whose compensation under existing law is fixed by the Superintendent of the Pennsylvania State Police with the approval of the Governor.

Per Capita Costs June 1, 1923-May 31, 1924

STATE MENTAL HOSPITALS

This table sets forth the cost per capita per week of caring for patients in State Mental Hospitals. The costs represent only the functions which have to do with the care of patients. The expense of operating the farms and productive industries is not included. The value of produce and products, however, which consumed in the care of patients is included in computing the per capita costs.

An increase of $30,000, for salaries and expenses for the general administration of the Department of Welfare is recommended in order to meet the new duties placed upon that Department and, also to meet the increase in demand made by local communities for mental health clinic service and for the supervision of the feeble minded outside of institutions and by the Directors of the Poor, Hospitals, and Children's Homes and for other types of social service.

A total increase of $1,736,900 is recommended for the maintenance of State, semi-State and County Institutions. This increase is necessary to provide for the normal increase in population in the hospitals for the Insane and Institutions for the Feeble Minded, and to meet the legal requirements as to per capita rate of compensation for State and County institutions, to meet the expenses of the increased capacity of the State-owned General Hospitals; and also in part to provide for the necessary increases to secure a better type of prison guard.

There is a total increase of $1,502,099, for repairs, alterations and equipment for State Institutions necessary to keep all existing buildings and equipment in a good state of repair and to make necessary replacements.

The State has assumed the responsibility for care for the Insane, Feeble-Minded and for the inmates of the Reformatories and Penitentiaries. The Department of Welfare estimates that at least $49,790,000 is needed in a minimum ten-year program for urgent building needs for State-owned institutions. This budget provides a total of $2,155,000 for buildings, or $1,304,263 more than was appropriated in the previous biennium. The Budget carries $225,000 for Torrance State Hospital to relieve to that extent the over-crowding in mental hospitals;$500,000, for Laurelton State Village to relieve the overcrowding in feeble-minded institutions; $1,000,000, for a new location and to start a building program for Eastern Penitentiary; $205,000 to continue necessary construction at Western Penitentiary at Rockview and to provide better housing for present inmates; $125,000 to Coaldale State Hospital; and $100,000 for Philipsburg State Hospital for increased accommodations.

The appropriation recommended to State-aided hospitals is $4,000,000, and to State-aided homes is $569.100. This is an increase of $281,700 over the amount available in this biennium for that purpose. There may be an additional $100,000 available because certain hospitals did not earn to this extent the amounts appropriated to them. Pennylsvania is the only State now undertaking to provide in any considerable amounts from State taxes for relief of private contributors to local hospitals. It would take more than $8,000,000 at a $3.00 per diem rate to relieve contributors to local hospitals entirely of all contributions for the care of the local indigent sick.

APPROPRIATIONS RECOMMENDED

AN ACT

Making an appropriation to pay for the care, treatment, removal, and maintenance of the indigent insane for two years ending the thirty-first day of May, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-seven.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the sum of five million three hundred twenty-five thousand dollars ($5,325,000), or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, specifically appropriated to pay for the care, treatment, removal, and maintenance of the indigent insane for and during the two years, beginning June first, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five, and ending May thirty-first, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-seven.

The said appropriation shall be paid on the warrant of the Auditor General, on the basis of settlement by that officer and the State Treasury; but no warrant shall be drawn or settlement made until the directors or managers of the several hospitals and asylums for the insane shall have made, on oath or affirmation, to the Auditor General, a quarterly report setting forth the actual number of indigent persons received and maintained in said hospitals and asylums for the insane, respectively, during the quarter for which the report is made, with the dates of their admission and discharge or death, respectively, and the actual time during which each of said indigent insane persons was treated, maintained, and cared for during said quarter: Provided also, That no payment shall be made on account of the care and treatment of the insane until the Secretary of Welfare shall have certified to the Auditor General that the quarterly report of the cost of such care and treatment contains no charge except for "care, treatment, removal, and maintenance," which words, as used in this act, shall be construed to mean medical and surgical treatment and nursing, food, and clothing, and absolutely necessary repairs to existing buildings of such hospitals and asylums.

Section 2. It shall be the duty of the commissioners of the several counties of the Commonwealth, or the directors or overseers of the poor of different counties or poor districts of the State, to report, under oath, to the Auditor General, on the first day of September, December, March and June of each year, the number of indigent insane persons transferred from said counties or poor districts, respectively, to the State hospitals or asylums for the insane in their respective districts. Said report shall contain the name of every indigent insane person so transferred or maintained at said hospitals or asylums, and shall set forth when he or she was admitted, the length of time cared for in said hospital or asylum, and the date of discharge or death.

AN ACT

Making an appropriation to pay for the treatment of the indigent sick or injured in medical and surgical hospitals not owned by the Commonwealth for the two years ending the thirty-first day of May, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-seven.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the sum of four million dollars, ($4,000,000) or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby specifically appropriated to pay for the treatment of the indigent sick or injured in medical and surgical hospitals not owned by the Commonwealth for and during the two years beginning June first, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five and ending May thirty-first, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-seven, payments to be made at the rate of three dollars ($3) per diem for the medical and surgical treatment rendered to, and maintenance of, each person treated in said hospitals who is entitled to free service, and for each day of part pay service such proportion of the aforesaid three dollars ($3) per diem rate as the part of the regular ward charge which the person so treated is not able to pay bears to the regular ward charge for such free service: Provided, however, That no hospital shall receive compensation at a rate exceeding the actual cost of service per capita in the public ward of said hospital.

The said appropriation shall be paid on the warrant of the Auditor General, on the basis of settlement by that officer and the State Treasurer; but no warrant shall be drawn or settlement made until the directors or managers of the several medical and surgical hospitals shall have made, on oath or affirmation, to the Auditor General, a quarterly report setting forth the names of the indigent sick or injured persons received and treated in said hospitals for the sick and injured respectively during the quarter for which the report is made with the dates of their admission and discharge or death, respectively, and the actual time during which each of said indigent sick or injured person was treated during said quarter; Provided also, That no payment shall be made on account of the treatment of said indigent sick or injured persons until the Secretary of Welfare shall have certified to the Auditor General that the quarterly report setting forth the names of said indigent sick or injured persons contains no name other than that of patients entitled to receive care and treatment at the expense, in full or in part, of the State. And further provided, That not more than one-eighth of the sum hereby appropriated shall be paid out in any one quarter and that no hospital shall during any one year receive more than seventy-five thousand dollars, ($75,000).

APPROPRIATIONS RECOMMENDED

AN ACT

Making an appropriation to carry into effect the provisions of an act approved the tenth day of July one thousand nine hundred and nineteen (Pamphlet Laws eight hundred ninety-three) entitled "An act providing for assistance to certain mothers; providing for the appointment of boards of trustees for the several counties of the Commonwealth, and for the appointment of a State Supervisor and assistants and fixing the salaries of such State Supervisor and assistants; defining the powers and duties of boards of trustees, including the power of appointing assistants and investigators, and the distribution of funds at their disposal; providing for the apportionment of the State appropriation among the several counties, and requiring counties coming under the provisions of the act to appropriate certain moneys; and providing penalties" as amended.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the sum of one million seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($1,750,000) is hereby specifically appropriated for the two fiscal years beginning June first one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of the act approved the tenth day of July one thousand nine hundred and nineteen (Pamphlet Laws eight hundred ninety-three) entitled "An act providing for assistance to certain mothers; providing for the appointment of boards of trustees for the several counties of the Commonwealth, and for the appointment of a State Supervisor and assistants, and fixing the salaries of such State Supervisor and assistants; defining the powers and duties of boards of trustees, including the power of appointing assistants and investigators, and the distribution of funds at their disposal; providing for the apportionment of the State appropriation among the several counties, and requiring counties coming under the provisions of the act to appropriate certain moneys; and providing penalties", as amended by the act approved the twenty-seventh day of May one thousand nine hundred and twenty-one (Pamphlet Laws one thousand one hundred and seventy-five) and by the act approved the twenty-second day of May, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three (Pamphlet Laws three hundred and seven).

Section 2. Upon the approval of this act the State Treasurer, after deducting from the entire amount appropriated the sums hereinafter designated for salaries and expenses, shall divide the balance into two equal parts.

The one part hereinafter referred to as the second part, shall be held intact for distribution on and after the first day of June one thousand nine hundred and twenty-six, in the manner hereinafter provided.

The other part shall, upon the approval of this act, be distributed and apportioned to the several counties of the State, according to the following classification:

First Class.—Counties with a population of more than one million five hundred thousand inhabitants, twenty-four per centum.

Second Class.—Counties with a population of more than one million and not more than one million five hundred thousand inhabitants, sixteen per centum.

Third Class.—Counties with a population of more than two hundred thousand and not more than one million inhabitants, equal parts of nineteen per centum.

Fourth Class.—Counties with a population of more than one hundred thousand and not more than two hundred thousand inhabitants, equal parts of twenty-six per centum.

Fifth Class.—Counties with a population of more than fifty thousand and not more than one hundred thousand inhabitants, equal parts of nine per centum.

Sixth Class.—Counties with a population of twenty-five thousand and not more than fifty thousand inhabitants, equal parts of four and one-fourth per centum.

Seventh Class.—Counties with a population of twenty-five thousand inhabitants or less, equal parts of one and three-fourths per centum.

Section 3. On the first day of June, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-six, the State Treasurer shall set aside out of the second part to each county then organized under the Mothers' Assistance System, a sum equal to that apportioned to it under the preceding section. Except as in section five of this act provided, the amount so set aside to any county together with the unexpended balance of the amount apportioned to the county during the first year, shall constitute the State's assistance during the second year to such county.

Section 4. No county shall receive any sum from the State, under sections two and three of this act, unless such county shall appropriate a like sum for the same purpose.

Section 5. The money set aside on the approval of this act to counties that were not at that time organized under the Mothers' Assistance System and which did not come into the system during the year ending May thirty-first one thousand nine hundred and twenty-six, together with the balance of the second part remaining after the proper amounts have been set aside as provided in section three, shall constitute a fund to be known as the surplus fund.

A county organized under the Mothers' Assistance System prior to or during the year ending May thirty-first, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-six, may receive, during the second year, out of the surplus fund, a sum additional to that apportioned and set aside to it under sections two and three.

Section 6. No county shall receive its allotment of the State appropriation available for any year under the classification appointed by this act, unless such county has accepted the provisions of the Act of July tenth, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen (Pamphlet Laws eight hundred ninety-three as amended and has placed at the disposal of the board of trustees a sum equal to the amount available from the State appropriation for such year. But a county may participate in the surplus fund if in addition to the appropriations and provisions hereinbefore required, it shall appropriate a sum equal to the amount which it desires from the surplus fund.

No county shall be permitted to participate in such surplus fund to an amount in excess of twenty-five per centum of the aggregate sum apportioned and set aside by the State Treasury to that county for the entire two year period.

Section 7. Out of the amount hereinbefore appropriated, the sum of thirty-six thousand dollars ($36,000) or so much thereof as may be necessary shall be set apart and applied for the payment of the salaries of the State Supervisor of the Mothers' Assistance Fund and of such assistants, clerks, and other employes as may be required for the proper conduct of the work of the Supervisor, for the traveling, hotel and other expenses of the Supervisor and her assistants, for the cost of making special investigations and for incidental contingent and other expenses of every kind and description necessary for the proper administration of the Mothers' Assistance System.

Making an appropriation to the Board of Managers of the Glen Mills Schools.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the sum of five hundred thousand dollars ($500,000), or so much thereof as may be necessary be, and the same is hereby specifically appropriated to the Board of Managers of the Glen Mills Schools for the two fiscal years beginning the first day of June, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five, for purpose of maintenance.

A REVOLVING FUND AND ADVANCE REQUISITIONS FOR CERTAIN STATE-OWNED INSTITUTIONS

The Eastern and Western Penitentiaries and other State-owned institutions have been forced to borrow money at 6 per cent interest in order to make advances on the payments due from Counties. In order to save the State the interest on this money and in order to put these State-owned institutions on a business basis the following bill is recommended as a means of creating a permanent revolving fund for this end.

The act following provides for necessary advanced requisitions so that Boards of Trustees will not have to borrow money at banks and pay interest thereon for moneys properly due from the State.

AN ACT

Creating by appropriation a Revolving Fund in the State Treasury to be used by certain State-owned institutions within the Department of Welfare as working capital pending the payment by counties and other agencies of amounts due to such institutions for maintenance of inmates; requiring such institutions before becoming entitled to participate in the use of moneys in said fund to pay into it certain special funds now in their possession; and appropriating the moneys from time to time in said fund.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the sum of four hundred thousand dollars ($400,000) is hereby specifically appropriated to the Department of Welfare which sum shall be set apart in the State Treasury apart from all other funds and known as the "Revolving Fund." The moneys from time to time in said fund shall be used for furnishing working capital to the boards of trustees of Eastern State Penitentiary, Western State Penitentiary, Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory, State Industrial Home for Women, and Pennsylvania Training School to enable said boards of trustees to finance the maintenance of said institutions pending the payment by the several counties or other governmental agencies of the amounts chargeable against such counties or agencies for the maintenance of inmates of such institutions. Provided, however, that before any part of said Revolving Fund shall be used for the financing of the maintenance of any of the said institutions, the board of trustees of such institution shall pay and satisfy the Department of Welfare that it has paid into said Revolving Fund in the State Treasury any and all amounts now in the possession or under the control of said board in special funds as hereinafter defined, whether the moneys in such special funds are employed as working capital or otherwise. As used in this section "special funds" shall mean any and all funds other than (a) funds advanced against State appropriations, (b) current maintenance funds, (c) funds consisting of the property of inmates, and (d) any funds donated to the institution or its board of trustees, or earned by inmates to be held or used for recreation, occupational thereby or other purposes.

Section 2. As any board of trustees which has received any money from said Revolving Fund shall receive from the several counties or other governmental agencies remittances for the amounts due by such counties or other governmental agencies to said board of trustees, said board shall pay the amounts so received into said Revolving Fund in the State Treasury, furnishing to the Auditor General a statement thereof.

Section 3. All moneys from time to time is said Revolving Fund in the State Treasury are hereby specifically appropriated to the Department of Welfare to carry out the purposes of this act. The Department of Welfare shall from time to time draw its requisition upon the Auditor General in favor of any board of trustees entitled thereto for such amount as in the judgment of the Department such board of trustees shall require to enable it to finance the maintenance of its institution pending the payment by the several counties or other governmental agencies of the amounts chargeable against them for the maintenance of inmates. Upon receiving the requisition of the Department of Welfare as herein provided, the Auditor General shall draw his warrant upon the State Treasurer for the payment out of said Revolving Fund to the Board of trustees named in such requisition of the amount specified therein.

Section 4. This act shall become effective on the first day of June, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five.

AN ACT

Providing for the payment of advances against appropriations for the maintenance of certain State-owned institutions.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the boards of trustees of State-owned institutions within the Department of Welfare which are maintained in whole or in part by appropriation from the State Treasurer, shall be entitled to receive advances against the biennial appropriations for the maintenance in whole or in part of such institutions, whether such appropriations shall have been made directly to the boards of trustees of such institutions or to the Department of Welfare. Provided, however, that the amount to which any board of trustees shall be entitled hereunder at any one time shall not exceed one-twenty-fourth of the biennial appropriation for the maintenance of the institution operated by such board, unless the Auditor General in his discretion shall believe a larger advance to be necessary and proper to enable such institution to meet its current liabilities promptly.

Section 2. The Auditor General shall upon requisition from time to time of the Secretary of Welfare, and the proper accounting for moneys already advanced to the board of trustees named in the requisition, draw his warrant upon the State Treasurer for the amount specified in such requisition if such amount be within the limitation hereinabove provided or if it be in excess of such limitation, then for such amount as the Auditor General may deem necessary and proper.

Section 3. The State Treasurer shall pay out of the appropriations for the maintenance of the institutions to which this act applies, the amounts specified in the Auditor General's warrants drawn upon the State Treasurer as hereinbefore provided.

Section 4. The Department of Welfare acting for the several boards of trustees to which this act applies, shall from time to time furnish to the Auditor General, specifically itemized vouchers in such form as the Auditor General shall prescribe, accounting for all moneys expended out of advances made under the provisions of this act.

Section 5. All unexpended balances of advances made under the provisions of this act in the hands of any boards of trustees at the end of the appropriation period, shall be returned to the State Treasurer before any advances shall be made out of any succeeding appropriations for similar purposes.

PROCEEDS FROM INSTITUTIONAL SALES AND FEES FOR NON-INDIGENT INMATES

There has been no definite provision in Law under which institutions may sell surplus produce and have the same accredited toward the maintenance of the properties under their control. It is in the interest of economy as well as orderly procedure that the institutions profit from good management and that the funds resulting from good management accrue to the institutions for the maintenance of their properties. The following act is to provide for this economy.

The next Act authorizes the Board of Trustees of certain institutions to receive moneys for the care and treatment of non-indigent patients and apply the receipts therefrom to the maintenance of that institution. It is only fair to competing private hospitals and to State taxpayers that receipts from this source be encouraged and be used to reduce the call upon the State Treasury.

AN ACT

Authorizing boards of trustees of certain state-owned institutions to treat non-indigent patients on a pay basis, and to employ moneys received under the provisions of this act for the maintenance of their institutions, subject to audit by the Auditor General.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the boards of trustees of state-owned medical or surgical hospitals, of state-owned hospitals for mental diseases and of state-owned institutions for mental defectives are hereby authorized whenever the capacity of their several institutions permit to treat on a pay basis patients who are not indigent.

Section 2. The rate of pay to be charged in such cases shall from time to time be determined by the several boards of trustees, subject to the approval of the Department of Welfare.

Section 3. All fees, charges or other moneys received by any such board of trustees from private sources shall be used by such board in paying salaries, wages or other compensation, wages or other compensation of employes, in purchasing necessary supplies or equipment or in defraying any other expenses necessary for the maintenance of the institution. Provided, however, that all such expenditures shall be approved by the Department of Welfare and that every such board of trustees shall keep an accurate account of all moneys received and disbursed under the authority of this act.

Section 4. The Auditor General is hereby authorized and directed from time to time to audit the accounts of moneys received and disbursed under the authority of this act.

AN ACT

Authorizing departmental administrative boards and commissions under certain restrictions to sell surplus products of the soil, meats, live stock, timber or other materials raised or grown upon or taken from property of this Commonwealth administered by such boards or commissions and to expend the proceeds of such sales for the maintenance of the properties under their control.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That any departmental administrative board or commission of this Commonwealth is hereby empowered, with the approval of the Department with which such board or commission is connected, to sell for the best price obtainable, but not less than the current market price for similar products, any surplus products of the soil, meats, live-stock, timber or other materials raised or grown upon or taken from property of the Commonwealth administered by such boards or commissions respectively. As used in this section "surplus" shall mean products, meats, live-stock, timber or other materials which cannot conveniently and economically be used in connection with the proper maintenance of the institution, park or other property administered by the board or commission involved. Provided, however, that under no circumstances shall live trees be cut for sale unless and until the Department of Forests and Waters has approved the cutting of such trees.

Section 2. The proceeds of the sale of any products, meats, livestock, timber or other materials sold by any departmental administrative board or commission under the provisions of this act may with the approval of the Department with which such board or commission is connected, be expended by such board or commission for the payment of salaries, wages or other compensation of employes, the purchase of supplies or equipment or any other expenses of any kind or description necessary for the proper conduct of the work of such board or commission.

Section 3. Every departmental administrative board or commission which sells any products of the soil, meats, livestock, timber or other materials under the provisions of this act shall keep an accurate record of the dates, quantities, and prices of all sales, and of the dates and purposes of all expenditures made hereunder, which record shall at all times be subject to examination and audit by the Auditor General of this Commonwealth.

Note: The following institutions have indicated a desire to serve the state in the care of indigent patients:
St. Vincents Hospial, Philadelphia.
Belvedere General Hospital, Pittsburgh.
Waynesboro Hospital, Waynesboro, Pa.

DELAWARE RIVER BRIDGE COMMISSION

The originally estimated cost of the Delaware River Bridge was $28,871,000 of which the Commonwealth's share was $8,221,000. Later it was found that there will be additional cost for condemned land and administration of $4,479,166. and for the construction of $3,861,003—a total revised estimated cost of $37,211,169. Of this amount the Commonwealth's share will be $10,784,662. To date there has been definitely appropriated a total $30,500,461., of which Pennsylvania has appropriated $8,223,000. This leaves a total to be appropriated from all sources of $6,-710,708., of which the Commonwealth's share is $2,561,662. This amount is recommended in the Budget.

AN ACT

Making an appropriation to carry into effect the provisions of an act approved the ninth day of July, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen (Pamphlet Laws eight hundred and fourteen), entitled "An act providing for the erection and construction by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey of a bridge over the Delaware River, connecting the city of Philadelphia and the City of Camden, and the approaches thereto; providing for a joint commission for the purpose, and defining its powers and duties; providing for an independent commission in this Commonwealth in relation thereto, and defining its powers and duties; providing for the payment of a part of the cost thereof by the City of Philadelphia; and providing for the acquiring, taking, and condemnation of the real estate for the site and approaches thereof; providing for the turning over of said bridge upon its completion; and making an appropriation for the purposes of this act," and its amendments.

Whereas, The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, under authority of the said act, approved the ninth day of July, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen (Pamphlet Laws, eight hundred and fourteen), and its amendments, has entered into a contract with the State of New Jersey to build a bridge across the Delaware River between the cities of Philadelphia and Camden; and

Whereas, the Board of Engineers and the Secretary have certified to the Joint Commission, composed of the Pennsylvania Commission and the New Jersey Interstate Bridge and Tunnel Commission, that eight million, three hundred and forty thousand, one hundred and sixty-nine dollars ($8,340,169) is needed to complete said bridge in the year one thousand nine hundred and twenty-six, in accordance with the revised estimates of the amount necessary to complete the construction of said bridge and pay for the land and property necessary therefor, of which amount the share of the Commonwealth is two million, five hundred and sixty-one thousand, six hundred and sixty-two dollars ($2,561,662).

Whereas, the State of New Jersey, through an additional bond issue in 1924, has made available its entire share of the cost of erecting and constructing said bridge and acquiring the land and property necessary therefor, in accordance with the revised estimates of the amount necessary to complete the bridge; and

Whereas, the City of Philadelphia through an additional bond issue in 1924, has made available two million, five hundred and sixty-one thousand, six hundred and sixty-two dollars ($2,561,662), its entire share of the cost of erecting and constructing said bridge and acquiring the land and property necessary therefor, in accordance with the revised estimates of the amount necessary to complete the bridge; and

Whereas, Said act of Assembly, providing for the erection and construction of said bridge, provides that no contract can be entered into beyond the extent of the appropriations made available for the purpose by the Commonwealth; and

Whereas, The good faith of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania has been pledged to the City of Philadelphia and to the State of New Jersey; and

Whereas, Delay in making available a sufficient appropriation will result in further increase in the cost of said bridge, caused by interest charges, over-head expenses, increased cost of materials, and deterioration of partially completed parts of the bridge, therefore,

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the sum of two million five hundred sixty-one thousand six hundred and sixty-two dollars ($2,-561,662) or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby specifically appropriated to the Joint Commission, composed of the Pennsylvania Commission and the New Jersey Inter-State Bridge and Tunnel Commission, for the payment of the remaining share of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania of the cost of erecting and constructing a bridge over the Delaware River between the cities of Philadelphia and Camden, and of acquiring the necessary land and property in conection therewith, in accordance with the provisions of the act, approved the ninth day of July, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen (Pamphlet Laws, eight hundred and fourteen), entitled "An act providing for the erection and construction by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey of a bridge over the Delaware River, connecting the city of Philadelphia and the city of Camden, and the approaches thereto; providing for a joint commission for that purpose and defining its powers and duties; providing for an independent commission in this Commonwealth in relation thereto, and defining its powers and duties; providing for the payment of a part of the cost thereof by the city of Philadelphia; and providing for the acquiring, taking, and condemnation of the real estate for the site and approaches thereof; providing for the turning over of said bridge upon its completion; and making an appropriation for the purposes of this act," and its amendments.

The moneys hereinbefore appropriated shall be available, and be expended, only for the purposes and in the manner provided in said act of Assembly of July ninth, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen.

The Giant Power Survey Board will present its report to this Legislature. The work of that Board is not completed. The future industrial and agricultural interest of this Commission are bound up intimately with the adequate expansion of the use of electrical current. To further this development in the public interest an appropriation of $150,000 is recommended for this board.

At this time this budget was under preparation the constitutionality of any appropriation for pensions to indigent persons in this State was before the Supreme Court. The Commission recommended an appropriation of $30,840. for administration and $2,000,000. for old age pensions in the coming biennium.

Because of the undecided constitutional question no provision was made for either of these purposes.

AN ACT

Consolidating into one special fund in the State Treasury all separate funds set apart in the State Treasury for the use of the Board of Fish Commissioners, formerly the Department of Fisheries, specifying the purposes for which the moneys in the said fund may be used, and appropriating such moneys to the Board of Fish Commissioners for the purposes specified.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That all moneys in the several separate funds in the State Treasury set apart to be used solely under the direction of the Board of Fish Commissioners formerly known as the Department of Fisheries, are hereby consolidated into one special fund to be known as the "Fish Fund," and all fees, fines and other moneys payable into any of said separate funds under any Act of Assembly shall hereafter be paid into the Fish Fund.

Section 2. The moneys which may be from time to time in said Fish Fund, not exceeding, four thousand dollars ($400,000) in any one fiscal year shall be used solely under the direction of the Board of Fish Commissioners for the following purposes: (a) The payment of the salaries, wages, or other compensation of the Commissioner of Fisheries and such deputies, directors, superintendents, bureau or division chiefs, experts, scientists, engineers, surveyors, draftsmen, accountants, secretaries, auditors, inspectors, examiners, statisticians, clerks, stenographers, bookkeepers, messengers, fish wardens, laborers and other assistants and employes as may be required for the work of the Board; (b) the payment of the traveling and other expenses of the members, officers and employes of the Board of Fish Commissioners; (c) the purchase through the Department of Property and Supplies as purchasing agency of such furniture, furnishings, stationery, supplies, materials, equipment, fuel, motor vehicles and printing and binding as may be necessary in the conduct of the work of the Board; (d) the payment of postage, telegrams, telephone rentals and toll charges and rentals for or royalties upon leased office or other devices or machines; (e) rentals for any offices or any other grounds, buildings or quarters leased for the Board by the Department of Property and Supplies; (f) the propagation, protection and distribution of fish and the stocking of waters within this Commonwealth as provided by law; (g) necessary repairs and improvements to fish hatcheries or other buildings, offices or quarters used in the work of the Board; (h) field work, gathering spawn, and transferring fish; (i) the purchase of necessary land and water supplied to State fish hatcheries; (j) the purchase, erection and repair of buildings, ponds and other extensions incidental to State fish hatcheries; (k) the maintenance and operation of a boat on Lake Erie and the cruiser "Anna" at Terresdale on the Delaware River; and (l) any contingent, incidental or other expenses of any kind or description reasonably necessary in carrying on the work of the Board.

Section 3. Any moneys in the said Fund at any time in excess of the amount hereinbefore limited shall be used solely under the direction of the Board of Fish Commissioners with the consent of the Governor for the purchase of lands and waters and for the impounding of waters and to make the same available for use by the citizens of the Commonwealth for fishing, hunting and forest purposes, and said lands and waters so purchased shall be under the supervision, direction and control of the Board.

Section 4. All moneys from time to time in the said Fish Fund are hereby specifically appropriated to the Board of Fish Commissioners for the purposes hereinbefore in this act enumerated. The Auditor General shall from time to time upon requisition of the Commissioner of Fisheries draw his warrant on the State Treasurer for the amount specified in such requisition not exceeding, however, the amount in such fund at the time of making such requisition.

Section 5. All Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

AN ACT

To amend section one thousand two hundred and one of an act approved the twenty-fourth day of May one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three (Pamphlet Laws three hundred and fifty-nine) entitled "An act concerning game and other wild birds and wild animals; and amending, revising consolidating, and changing the law relating thereto."

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That section one thousand two hundred and one of the act approved the twenty-fourth day of May one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three (Pamphlet Laws three hundred and fifty-nine) entitled "An act concerning game and other wild birds and wild animals; and amending, revising, consolidating, and changing the law relating thereto" is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 1201. Establishment of Game Fund. Appropriation All license fees, fines and other moneys received and collected (a) under the provisions of any law repealed and replaced by this act, and now held in the State Treasury as a fund or any part of fund, separate and apart for the various purposes designated by law, or (b) that may be hereafter paid into the State Treasury under the provisions of any act so repealed or replaced, or (c) that may be paid into the State Treasury under the provisions of this act, shall be placed in a separate fund to be known as "The Game Fund" and shall be held separately and apart solely for the purpose of the payment, under the supervision of the board, (a) of the salaries wages or other compensation and traveling and other expenses of the members and officers of the Board of Game Commissioners and of such deputies, directors, superintendents, bureau or division chiefs, assistant directors, assistant superintendents, assistant chiefs, experts, scientists, engineer, surveyors, draftsmen, accountants, secretaries, auditors inspectors, examiners, statisticians, clerks, stenographers, bookkeepers, messengers, game protectors, laborers, and other assistants and employes as may be required for the proper conduct of the work of the Board [and employes of the Board and contingent office expenses], (b) for wild bird, game, and fur-bearing animal protection and propagation, (c) for the purchase of game and fur-bearing animals for propogation and stocking purposes, (d) for feeding game and wild birds, (e) for the creation, acquisition by lease or otherwise maintenance, and administration of hunting grounds and game refuges, and the purchase of outstanding timber and mineral rights on lands purchased or being purchased, or water rights on adjoining lands wherever the Board deems such purchase desirable, (f) for the purchase of other lands and buildings, and for the erection and repair of buildings, (g) for the purchase through the Department of Property and Supplies as purchasing agency of such furniture, furnishings, stationery, supplies, materials, fuel, motor vehicles, horses, and other equipment as may be necessary for the conduct of the work of the Board, and for the maintenance of equipment, (h) for control of vermin, the payment of bounties, and expense in connection therewith, (i) for the payment of all, or any part of, the cost of any printing, lithographing, color process work, posters, notices, tags, badges, buttons, and such other like materials, as, in the opinion of the Board, may be necessary to its work, but all such printing, posters, notices, tags, badges, buttons and other materials shall be ordered through the Department of Property and Supplies as purchasing agency. (j) for the refund of fines erroneously collected and deposited, (k) for the payment of rentals of offices, grounds, buildings or other quarters leased for the Board by the Department of Property and Supplies and for telegrams and telephone rentals and toll charges and rentals on leased office or other devices. (l) for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of the act approved the second day of June, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three (Pamphlet Laws four hundred and eighty-nine) entitled "An act providing a method through which the Commonwealth may cooperate with individuals in building fences to protect farm crops and fruit orchards against damage from wild deer; and making an appropriation," not exceeding, however, the sum of ten thousand dollars ($10,000) during any one fiscal year; (m) for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of the act approved the second day of June, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three (Pamphlet Laws four hundred and ninety-two) entitled "An act providing for the payment of certain claims for damage done to live stock, poultry, or bees, by bears; providing a method for the ascertainment of such damage; and making an appropriation," not exceeding, however, the sum of three thousand dollars ($3,000) during any one fiscal year; and (n) for the payment of any contingent, incidental or other expenses of any kind or description reasonably necessary in carying on the work of the Board.

[The sum of not less than twenty per centum of the net revenue received from resident hunters' licenses shall be set aside by the Board for the purchase and distribution of game, feed for game, and for the propagation or distribution of game for stocking purposes.]

All such moneys placed in the game fund, under the provisions of this section, are hereby made available immediately, and are hereby specifically appropriated to the Board, for the purposes herein specified.

NOTE:—Exclusive of monuments and memorial sites, title to the above real estate is held by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

(1) The Erie and Torresdale hatcheries are situated on leased lands. The major portion of the lands of the Corry, Erie, Union City and Bellefonte hatcheries were donated to the State.

(2) The hatcheries were constructed by laborers in the employ of the State and no record of cost was maintained.

(3) Transferred from State Forest lands.

(4) Donated by Andrew Carnegie.

(5) Garage, arsenal and police barracks located on one plot. 5¼ acres purchased for $9,000, and title of remainder transferred to State by Harrisburg State Hospital.

(6) Acquired by purchase of toll bridges and turnpikes.

(7) Armory land holdings include only sites of armories and plots for prospective armories.

(8) Land usually donated.

(9) Sites for monuments donated.

(10) Totals are exclusive of certain items for which statistics were not available when report was made.

TRUSTEE FUNDS OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE LAND SCRIPT FUND

The Federal Government in 1863 gave $500,000 to the State from the proceeds of sale of agricultural script on condition that it be invested in securities yielding 5% and the income paid to the agriculutarl college, which is now in Pennsylvania State College. In 1872 the money was invested in a Commonwealth of Pennsylvania bond, which matured in 1922 and in 1924 was reinvested, but acceptable securities yielding 5% income were not available at that time. The difference in yield is being paid from General Fund appropriation by the Board of Finance and Revenue, and the full 5% income will continue to be paid to Pennsylvania State College.

PUBLIC SCHOOL EMPLOYES' RETIREMENT FUNDS

The Public School Employes' Retirement Board is trustee of all funds of the System. These include the payments of the State, the school districts, and the employes for underwriting the cost of future retirements. Of the total investment $9,630,700 is from payments of the school districts and the State, of which amount about $6,000,000 has been paid in by the districts. The amount of investments bought from payments by the members of the System totals $9,305,206.

STATE BOND ROAD SINKING FUND

In order to provide funds for retirements at maturity of Road Bonds issued under the Act of 1919 authorizing a $50,000,000 issue, it is necessary for the State to pay amounts currently into a sinking fund. These amounts are invested by the Board of Finance and Revenue in securities authorized by law.

STATE EMPLOYES' RETIREMENT FUND

The new State Employes' Retirement Act provides for half the cost of retirements to be paid by the employe. Deductions are made from each payroll and deposited with the State Treasurer, who is also the Treasurer of the Retirement Board. These amounts are invested currently by the Board, which acts as trustee for the funds of the System, and will also invest amounts paid in on acount of the State's share in retirement costs.

STATE SCHOOL FUND

Into the fund are paid net receipts from State forests, water powers and rights, rentals from real estate owned by the State and not used for public purposes, escheated estates, etc.

The State Council of Education is trustee of the fund and uses the income to equalize educational advantages in different parts of the state and to promote education in conservation, forestry, agriculture and industry.

STATE INSURANCE FUND

An Act of 1915 set aside one-half of the tax on the premiums of foreign fire insurance companies for the purpose of creating a fund for rebuilding, restoration and replacement of property of the Commonwealth destroyed by fire or other casualty. The remaining one-half continued to be refunded to the various cities, boroughs and townships in which the premiums were collected, and is generally appropriated for use of local volunteer fire companies.

By 1919 the fund had reached the million dollar amount prescribed by the original Act, and its source of revenue was withdrawn when the law was amended to refund the entire premium tax to cities, boroughs and townships. No means of maintaining the fund has been provided, and payments for fire and casualty damages have reduced the fund to $561,998.76 as of December 31, 1'24.

STATE WORKMEN'S INSURANCE FUND

The State Workmen's Insurance Fund maintains the surplus and reserves required by law of all insurance companies, and the funds of these are invested by the State Workmen's Insurance Board in securities authorized by law.

The estimate of the Auditor General in November, 1922, as first submitted to the Governor was $112,000,000 for receipts in the General Fund for the fiscal biennium 1923-25. In an address before the State Educational Association, at Bethlehem, December 29th, 1922, the Auditor General said: "As previously stated, I have conservatively estimated the revenues of the Commonwealth for the appropriation period from June 1, 1923, to May 31, 1925, at approximately $112,000,000."

Office of the Auditor General, Harrisburg.
Hon. William C. Sproul, Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear Governor: I have the honor to inform you that I have conservatively estimated that the revenues for the two fiscal years from December 1st, 1922, to November 30th, 1924, from sources provided by revenue acts now on the statute books, will be approximately $112,000,000.00.

To this amount, however, should be added approximately $3,000,000.00, representing anthracite coal tax assessed under the act of May 11, 1921, and which should have been paid into the Treasury and become a part of the revenues for the fiscal year ending November 30, 1922, but which was held up by litigation; thus making available for General Fund purposes $115,000,000.00.

Yours very truly,
S. S. LEWIS,
Auditor General.

TOTAL ESTIMATED REVENUES FOR THE BIENNIUM BEGINNING JUNE 1, 1923, AND ENDING MAY 31, 1925, FROM REPORT TO THE LEGISLATURE BY THE AUDITOR GENERAL, MAY 21, 1923.

In a letter under date of December 20, 1922, to Hon. William C. Sproul, then Governor of Pennsylvania, I estimated the revenues of the Commonwealth for the two fiscal years from December 1, 1922, to November 30, 1924, at $115,000,000.00. This estimate was, as stated in said letter, conservative. There is perhaps no accounting problem more difficult and hazardous than making an estimate of this kind, involving as it necessarily must a great multitude and variety of considerations and details.

The estimate now requested by your honorable body is for the biennium beginning June 1, 1923, and ending May 31, 1925.

Since the time of submitting the former estimate we have had additional experience and some new and controlling factors have entered the problem.

Exclusive of the anthracite coal tax, which is still in litigation, the collections for the first 5½ months of the present fiscal year, beginning December 1st, 1922, and reports thus far filed and examined are very gratifying, and if the increase shown in our more recent collections is maintained it will for the period mentioned in your resolutions probably net the State approximately four million dollars in excess of the estimate made December for the two fiscal year period referred to in the above letter, and will produce an approximate revenue of $119,000,000.00.

The most uncertain factor in this, as well as in our former estimate, is the resident transfer inheritance tax. The Act providing for this tax was approved May 24, 1921. Its full effect did not begin to show in the State revenues until the summer of 1922. Thus, in December, 1922, at the time of our former estimate we had practically less than a year's experience in the collection of this tax. Our records from December up to the present time taken in connection with prior figures disclose the trend of this tax with greater accuracy. Various legal questions which arose in the administration of the law have been definitely settled by the Courts; and if House Bill No. 1103, now in the Senate, becomes a law, which Bill is a proposed amendment to the resident transfer tax act of 1921, and provides more effective machinery for the collection of the tax, there is no question that the amount above mentioned will be realized.

In arriving at this estimate we have given due consideration to the effect of Acts Nos. 40 and 42, recently signed by the Governor, which facilitate the collection of delinquent taxes and will unquestionaby insure the prompt payment and collection of all corporation assessments.

I have reason to believe that if certain bills now pending in the Legislature are enacted into law, this estimate will be further increased.

These bills are—

House Bill No. 849 (now in the Senate) making bank taxes uniform on a 4 mill basis.

House Bill No. 1318 (now in the Senate) taxing the gross premiums of the Workmen's Insurance Fund.

House Bill No. 1256 (now in the Senate) amending the present gasoline tax act, which does not increase the rate of tax but broadens the definition of liquid fuels, and House Bill No. 926 (now in the House Committee on Ways and Means) amending the Gross Receipts Tax Act of June 1, 1889 by enlarging the class of public utilities subject to the assessment.

Office of the Auditor General, Harrisburg, June 11, 1923.
Hon. Gifford Pinchot, Executive Chambers, Harrisburg, Pa.

My dear Governor: As stated to you recently it is an utter impossibility in a brief period of time to gather from our records the data requisite for making anything approaching an accurate calculation of the amount of revenue which might be procured from the proposed net income tax on corporations. In order to go over our records for merely one tax year, it would require the work of almost my entire corporation force for at least one month.

Sometime ago when the Capital Stock tax on manufacturing corporations was under consideration, I had a force of clerks go over the Capital Stock reports of manufacturing corporations for the tax year 1921. This work kept us busy for two weeks. The investigation showed that there were approximately 7,500 manufacturing corporations doing business in the State and that the total net income of these corporations was approximately $400,000,000. At that time I transmitted this information to Hon. Franklin Spencer Edmunds, by telegram, a copy thereof is hereto attached.

Our records show that there are 30,666 corporations doing business in the State, exclusive of Building and Loan Associations, Transportation Companies and National Banks. The latter, although not expressly excepted in the Bill, would not as I take it be subject to the tax since they are creatures of the Federal Government and protected by the Federal Constitution.

If it is assumed that corporations subject to the tax, taken in general, would show proportionately the same amount of net income for the years 1922 and 1923 as for the year 1921, and further that the proportion of revenue for all would be approximately the same as that shown by the manufacturing corporations which have been gone over, it may be readily calculated that the total yield would amount to about four times that of the manufacturing corporations or $1,600,000,000. Tax on this amount at the rate of ½ of 1% would be approximately $8,000,000.

Without going over the reports of all the corporations, it would be impossible from our records to arrive at a closer or more accurate approximation. We have the income of coal companies for the year 1921, but this data affords us little or no assistance at this time.

Very truly yours,
S. S. LEWIS,
Auditor General.

Hon. Franklin Spencer Edmonds, 614 Franklin Building, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

George I. Woner, Butler, Pa., Chairman of Ways and Means Committee.

Butler, Pa., Dec. 26, 1924.

Honorable Gifford Pinchot, Governor.

My dear Mr. Pinchot: As per your recent request, I transmit such information as I have, from copies of statements and communications issued at the time respecting the discussion preceding the passage of the emergency tax measures by the last Assembly.

When the net profits tax proposal was placed before the Ways and Means Committee, those interested in shaping it roughly estimated the returns at $8,000,000. a year. Efforts to obtain data on which to base such an estimate were made through the medium of the Auditor General's Department, and it was my understanding that as the bill was framed and passed by the house it was calculated the revenue would reach $7,000,000. or $8,000,000. a year. In conferences held by the sub-committee in charge of this bill, the opinion was freely expressed, and such opinion seemed to be based on tangible information, that this bill and the emergency gasoline tax would produce $20,000,000. in two years. The Auditor General's Department had gone over data to be found in returns made by manufacturing corporations, the capital stock of which was exempt from taxation, and I was given to understand that, on the basis of the reports examined, the estimated revenue from the net profits tax was conservative at eight millions a year.

At the same time we discounted this materially because concerns reporting wherein tax was not to be levied would not use the same care in the report as in the case of a net profits return which means the levying of a tax. The real information on which I, as Chairman of the Committee determined the approximate return from the tax was that furnished by the Secretary of the Commonwealth on the basis of Federal income tax returns. I was advised by Dr. King, while the bill was in the House, that at the outside not over ten millions could be expected from the ½ of one per cent levy for the biennium. I proceeded on this theory and insisted that the rate should be raised from one-half to three quarters of one per cent. No heed was given to this insistence while the bill was before the House and after it went to the Senate I insisted before the sub-committee that the needed $20,000,000. could not be obtained by means of the net profits and the emergency gas tax. I urged that the most could be expected from the two tax proposals was $16,000,000 in the biennium, with the prospect that it would fall much below this figure.

When the Senate leaders inserted many amendments carrying exemptions in the net profits tax bill, I gave out a statement used by the press throughout the State, which contained this declaration, "Every House and Senate leader knows that the $20,000.000. estimated new revenue under the net profits and gasoline taxes, as passed by the House, is not enough if we are to 'come clean' and wipe out this 'fiscal mess.'" In the same statement I called attention to the positive shortage which would result in revenues should the Senate change either the net profits tax or the gasoline tax bills.

The Senate did change these bills in a way that materially affected the probable returns therefrom and the result seen now is just what I expected. Of course exemptions made by the Senate in the net profits tax bill were not opposed because they were both logical and necessary but when this was done the rate of the levy should have been increased.

That you, as Governor, had in mind the amount of money which could be expected from the two emergency tax measures is indicated by the following paragraph from a public statement made by you when the appropriation bills were being considered: "During the next two years the income of the State, according to the Auditor General's estimate, will be $10 000,000. for the emergency profits tax and $6.000,000 from the emergency gasoline tax and the $124,000,000 from the general taxation, or a total of $140,000,000."

I note from the letter sent to you by the Auditor General on June 11, 1923, that the information he transmits is in accord with that which he gave to the sub-committee when the net profits tax was being discussed, namely, that on the basis of returns from manufacturing corporations, which had been examined, the yearly net income taxable would be approximately $1,600,000,000. At the tax rate of ½ of one per cent this would bring in $8,000,000 a year or $16,000,000 for the two years.

As the net income of corporations is governed directly by business conditions, and as it was apparent that business was slowing down in 1923 as compared with 1922, the year used as a basis for the estimate, it was declared freely when the bill was considered, and understood by the leaders, that this factor also called for an increase in the tax levy above the one half per cent to insure needed returns. However, it seemed out of the question to obtain serious consideration of these things because nearly everyone was anxious to get away from Harrisburg with the least possible tax levy.

It may not be revealing an inner secret to state that very few who were dealing with the tax problem had any feeling of assurance that the revenue measures would yield even $16,000,000. I felt at the time that we were in the position of hamstringing you, as Governor, in your efforts to get enough revenue to carry the State's most needed expenditures and wipe out the $29,000,000 deficit in two years.

Very truly yours,

GEO. I. WONER.

The Governor's Office, June 28, 1923.

Hon. Samuel S. Lewis, Auditor General, Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear Sam: As I understand your recent letter, the total revenue which you anticipated for the biennium May 31, 1923, to June 1, 1925, is $124,000,000 not including the Net Profits Tax and the New Gasoline Tax. Will you kindly let me know what you estimate these two taxes will produce, if you have made figures for them? This information will be of great value in deciding what amounts I can approve in the various Appropriation Bills, and I should be glad to get it as soon as you can let me have it. As you know, I must dispose of all Bills before the 14th of July.

With many thanks in advance,

Sincerely yours,

GIFFORD PINCHOT.

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA

Office of

AUDITOR GENERAL

Harrisburg, June 29, 1923.

Hon. Gifford Pinchot, Executive Chambers, Harrisburg, Pa.

My dear Governor: Replying to the request contained in your letter of the 28th instant relative to anticipated revenues for the biennium May 31, 1923, to June 1, 1925, I wish to state that your understanding of my estimate, exclusive of the net profits tax and the new gasoline tax, namely, $124,000,000.00 is correct.

From our present calculations, based on the experience of the past six months, I would further estimate that the additional revenue which may safely be anticipated from the new gasoline tax for the biennium is approximately $6,000,000.00.

I regret exceedingly that I cannot afford you assistance in more closely determining the revenue from the net profits tax. Without burdening you with a repitition of the reasons for the inability of this Department to make an accurate approximation, I can only emphasize my previous statement that it is an utter impossibility, without very lengthly investigation and opening the individual reports of all corporations, to gather the necessary data.

I have carefully read and re-read your letter on this question addressed under date of June 12th to Hon. Frank B. Baldwin, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Finance, copy of which you kindly forwarded me, and desire to state that the methods of calculation therein followed appear to me to be logical, comprehensive and conservative; and I would therefore assume that for normal years the outcome of the calculations could be fairly adopted.

Very truly yours,

S. S. LEWIS,

Auditor General.

Governor's Office, June 12, 1923.

Hon. George I. Woner, Chairman, Committee on Ways and Means, House of Representatives Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear Mr. Woner: The amount of new taxes which will probably be raised by House Bill No. 1648 (the net Profits Tax Bill) is a question of the first importance in determining how various items of appropriations, such as hospitals, universities, etc., can be dealth with in view of my pledge to approve no appropriations beyond probable income. A request to the Auditor General for an estimate of the probable returns from this tax brought from him a reply, under date of June 11th, in which he said:

"As stated to you recently, it is an utter impossibility in a brief period of time to gather from our records the data requisite for making anything approaching an accurate calculation of the amount of revenue which might be procured from the proposed net income tax on corporations. In order to go over our records for merely one tax year, it would require the work of almost my entire corporation force for at least one month."

Accordingly the Federal returns upon which this bill is now based were examined, with the following results:

House Bill No. 1648 (File Folio 8857) provides that every corporation having capital stock, every joint stock association, and every limited partnership shall pay a tax of ½ of 1% on its net income, which is defined as the net income for the calendar or fiscal year as required to be returned to the Federal Government under the Federal Revenue Act. This means that only those corporations or partnerships which pay Federal income taxes will pay this new tax to the State.

The statistics of income issued by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue show that the net income under the Federal Revenue Act from corporations for Pennsylvania was as follows:

1919	902,728,720
1920	971,581,884

No returns are yet available for 1921 and 1922, although it is known that both these years show returns below those of 1920. The returns for 1920 can be taken as fair for 1923 and 1924, assuming a fair degree of prosperity.

Under House Bill No. 1648 interest and dividends are not deductible in arriving at net income. The interest deducted in 1920 by all corporations paying Federal income taxes totaled $2,835,269,934 out of a total gross income for the United States of $118,205,582,249, or 2.4% The percent of gross income deducted for interest paid by manufacturing corporations, however, was but 1.1% and for mining companies but 1.5%. This addition of interest will add, therefore, probably not over 2% to the gross income of Pennsylvania corporations. The gross income of Pennsylvania corporations reporting a net income in 1920 was $9,501,290,850. Two per cent of this gives $190,000,000 as the maximum of interest money in gross income of the corporations of this State. Including interest paid partnerships and personal service corporations an estimate of $200,000,000 would be the maximum added to taxable net income by this provision of the Act. The amounts added from dividends due from other corporations would be very small, so small as to be negligible.

But the exemptions allowed by the proposed law are both large and material. These are

1. All taxes paid to the United States.

Pennsylvania corporations in 1920 paid $209,770,846 in income, war profits and excess profits taxes out of a total net corporate income of $971,581,884, or 12.85%. This left a net income after the Federal taxes were deduced of $762,-811,038. The tax in 1923 and 1924 may not be so large as in 1920 because of changes in the tax rate. But inasmuch as the law now allows deductions of losses in previous years, the net income will also be lower, hence the net result will not be materially changed.

2. The net income of certain classes of corporations are entirely exempt in the proposed bill.

The bill exempts corporations paying taxes upon gross receipts. These include railroad, pipe line, steam boat, conduit, slack water navigation, transportation, street railway, telephone, telegraph, express, electric light, and palace and sleeping car companies.

3. Interest upon bonds, notes and certificates of indebtedness of the United States and of the State of Pennsylvania.

In personal returns the interest reported in 1920 on government obligations not wholly exempt from tax was less than three tenths of one per cent. Assuming this same ratio in corporate returns, the deduction in Pennsylvania would amount to about $2,500,000.

The deductions in items two above are not given separately for Pennsylvania in the published Federal reports. But out of a reported total corporate net income of $7,908,-654,813 in 1920, $829,131,000 was reported for transportation and other public utility companies. This is a little over 10% . At 10% this deduction amounts to $97,200,000 for Pennsylvania.

The proposed bill also taxes the net income of partnerships and personal service corporations which are separately reported in Federal income statistics. In 1920 the Federal net income from partnerships and personal service corporations was $167,245,912 in Pennsylvania.

The Federal returns are classified by States on the basis of the Postal address of the returning companies. This is not identical with the business done in the State as defined in the proposed Act. But that the two are close together is shown by the fact that Pennsylvania is credited in 1920 with $971,-581,884 of corporate net income out of a total net corporate income in the United States of $7,902,654,813, which is 1/8 of the whole. This is excessive, if anything, as compared with the actual net income from business done within the State as defined in the Act.

The same seems true as to partnerships and personal service corporations. The net income from Pennsylvania from these two sources in 1920 was $167,245,912 out of $1,701,-229,432, or 1/10 of the net income in the whole country. There is nothing to indicate that Pennsylvania's share is more than 1/10, if it is as much.

The net result is as follows:

Pennsylvania Net Corporate Income 1920	$971,581,884
Add interest deducted in Federal tax returns	200,000,000
Corporate income taxable under proposed law	1,171,581,884
Deduct
Government interest and Federal taxes exempt	200,000,000
Net income of companies paying gross receipt taxes	97,200,000
Corporate income taxable under proposed law	874,381,884
Add
Net income of partnerships and personal service corporations	167,245,912
Maximum taxable net income per year under proposed law	1,041,627,796

The foregoing would seem to show conculsively that the total taxable net income will not exceed $1,000,000,000. A tax of 1/2 of 1% on this sum will bring in $5,000,000 per year or $10,000,000 in two years.

If the rate in this law remains at one-half of one per cent the total amount of new taxes raised, including $6,000,000 from gasoline taxes, will be about $16,000,000. This is two millions below the amount required to meet additional costs of common schools alone. If the income of the State is left at this point it will be unavoidably necessary to cut the Universities and the Hospitals to a point at or below the amount suggested in the original budget estimates, and many other appropriations made by the Legislature, but not included in the budget will have to be eliminated. I am anxious to avoid unnecessary hardships. Hence this letter.

Sincerely yours,

GIFFORD PINCHOT.

REPORT ON ESTIMATE OF GENERAL FUND REVENUES BIENNIUM 1925-1927

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA

WM. LEWIS McGEE & COMPANY, Certified Public Accounts, 1520 Locust Street, Philadelphia.

Honorable Clyde L. King, Secretary of the Commonwealth, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

Dear Mr. Secretary: Pursuant to your request, after a study of the receipts from various sources since December 1, 1911, a period of thirteen years, we have made and present herewith our estimate of the General Fund Revenues of the Commonwealth for the biennium 1925-27.

We believe you can reasonably anticipate General Fund receipts in the amount of $132,850,000, which is an increase of $8,850,000 over the estimate prepared by the Auditor General.

This estimate is obviously based on two factors of outstanding importance:

(a) NORMAL COLLECTION OF REVENUES

These estimates are, of course, predicated upon the normal collection of taxes during the periods in which such collections would ordinarily be made.

In connection with a discussion of the collection of revenue, it was suggested by the Auditor General's Department that revenues from present assessments might be much greater if specific appropriations were made to the Attorney General or to the Auditor General for collection purposes. The possibilities of increased revenue from an investment such as this should not be overlooked by the State.

(b) INFORMATION AVAILABLE FROM PRESENT BOOKKEEPING METHODS

The most logical basis of estimating each item of income would be to study information of the following nature:

1. Total assessments by periods.
2. Total amount of unpaid assessments.
3. Amount of unpaid assessments past due.
4. Age of past due assessments.
5. Percentage of collections to assessments.
6. Periods to which collections are applicable.

Such information over a period could only have been obtained after an unwarranted amount of time had been spent in analyzing and summarizing data from hundreds of thousands of returns and divers other original sources.

Owing to the necessity of presenting this report before the convening of the next Legislature, we confined our study to the records of cash receipts as shown by Auditor General's published reports and, for the current biennium, as shown by the monthly summary of daily cash receipts from the State Treasurer's Department. This summary is controlled by the General or Control Ledger and Fund Ledger, the official records of the Auditor General's Department.

In those cases where our detailed figures do not agree with the published reports, we have used the correct figures obtained by reference to the original daily reports.

In connection with the Anthracite Coal Tax specifically and, at the same time, in connection with any item of income, we were informed that no supplementary information exists, the only records kept by the Department being the original returns and the record of cash receipts. In connection with the Anthracite Coal Tax, for example, we have in mind such information as—

1. Total production reported.
2. Values of coal reported by the companies.
3. Values used by the Auditor General in making assessments.

All of our estimates have of necessity been independently made, as the Auditor General declined to furnish us with any information which guided him in making his estimates, although assistance of this nature was specifically requested in your letter outlining the scope of the study you desired us to make.

We made no estimate of the amount of income to be anticipated from the Emergency Profits Tax for either the present biennium or for 1925-27. It is impossible to make an estimate from the available record of cash receipts and there was not sufficient time to refer to the individual returns.

We present herewith exhibits which show:

Exhibit "A"—Comparative Statement of Actual and Estimated Receipts, General Fund, June 1, 1915, to May 31, 1927.

Exhibit "B"—Comparative Statement of Increases and Decreases between Bienniums, General Fund Income, June 1, 1915, to May 31, 1927.

These tabulations begin with June 1, 1915, because information prior to that date was not available on the present fiscal year basis.

From Exhibit "A" it will be seen that our estimates of revenue agree with those of the Auditor General, except in twenty-two instances, each of which is supported by a chart and other explanatory data, and will be found following the exhibits.

COMMENTS

This is a tax at the rate of five mills on the actual value in cash of the capital stock of domestic corporations and of foreign corporations doing business in Pennsylvania. Capital employed in manufacture is exempt from this tax. (Act of June 7, 1879, P. L. 112, and amendments).

The act provides that the capital stock in any particular instance must not be appraised less than—

(1) The average price which said stock sold for during the period covered by the report.

(2) Not less than the price or value indicated or measured by the net earnings, or by the amount of profit made and either declared in dividends, expended in betterments, or carried into surplus or sinking fund.

(3) Not less than the actual value indicated or measured by the consideration of the intrinsic value of its intangible property and assets, and of the value of its good-will and franchises and privileges, as indicated by the material results of their exercises, taking also into consideration the amount of its indebtedness.

It will thus been seen that the revenue from this tax from any one company will vary from vear to year in accordance with the above factors. During the past year, business conditions have been such as to indicate a falling off in the increase of revenue from this tax. This will, of course, affect the collections assessed on the year 1924, but not 1925.

However, there are a number of factors which not only counteract part or all of this decrease of collections during 1925-26, but also will tend to make the collections for the biennium 1925-27 show at least a normal increase. Such items are—

1. Themendous increase in stock valuations since November 1, 1924.
2. New stock as indicated by the increased demand for new charters, which has already started.
3. New stock on account of expansion, which always comes with prosperous business conditions.
4. Increased earnings anticipated for 1925.
5. The railroad companies during 1924 are reported to have had one of the best years on record.

It has been stated that the very bad conditions, with particular reference to the bituminous coal business, in the past year will materially affect 1924 assessments. As the tax paid by the bituminous coal companies is less than eight percent of the total Capital Stock Tax, the decrease, even if considerable for such companies, will probably not materially affect the net result.

From the accompanying chart and figures, it will be seen that for a period of ten years the normal rate of increase has averaged slightly in excess of $2,500,000 for each biennium. The normal increase thus to be expected for two bienniums would be $5,000,000. Adding only two-thirds of this amount to the actual revenue collected from this source during the biennium 1921-23 gives $36,500,000 as an extremely conservative estimate of the expectation for the biennium 1925-27. This is an increase of $2,000,000 over the estimate of the Auditor General, but only $167,000 over the actual collections estimated by the Auditor General for the biennium 1923-25, actual figures for eighteen months to November 30, 1924, being available.

COMMENTS

This is a tax at the rate of four mills on the indebtedness of corporations on which interest is paid. (Act of June 30, 1885, P. L. 193, and Act of June 17, 1913, P. L. 507, and amendments.)

The tax is based on the nominal value of the indebtedness which includes all script, bonds, mortgages, certificates and evidences of indebtedness issued or assumed and on which interest is paid.

The tax is imposed upon resident holders of loans of domestic corporations or foreign corporations doing business in Pennsylvania.

From Exhibit "B" it will be seen that the average increase for two bienniums is, in round figures, $1,751,000. As this average for two bienniums only slightly exceeds the increase of each of the last two bienniums over that preceding, adding it to the actual receipts for 1921-23 ($8,906,000), produces an ultra conservative estimate of $10,660,000 for 1925-27.

Especially is this true when it is considered that this estimate exceeds that of the Auditor General for the current biennium by only $421,000 and that prosperity in 1925 will naturally carry with it expansion, which is always accompanied by increased borrowing.

COMMENTS

This is a tax at the rate of eight mills on the gross receipts of transportation, telegraph, telephone, electric light, express companies, etc. (Act of June 1, 1889, P. L. 420).

The tax so far as transportation companies are concerned, is imposed upon the total amount of receipts received from the transportation of frieght and passengers from points within the State to points within the State.

With respect to the other companies liable for the tax, the same is imposed upon the gross receipts from the business transacted wholly within the State.

Persons Taxable. All railroad, pipe line, steamboat, conduit, canal, slack water navigation, transportation and street railway companies, incorporated or organized under the laws of this State, or doing business in this State, and also all telephone or telegraph companies, express companies, electric light companies, palace car and sleeping car companies.

The chart and figures herewith, indicate an average increase of $2,250,000 for every two bienniums. The prosperity during 1924 of the transportation, telephone, telegraph and other companies, taxable under this heading, and the outlook for 1925 indicate that a normal increase in collections for 1925-27 is a reasonable expectation. Our estimate of $9,100,000 obtained by adding only two-thirds of the average increase for two bienniums to the actual receipts for 1921-23 would therefore seem conservative. Especially is this true when it is considered that our estimate only exceeds 1923-25 income estimated by the Auditor General by $900,000 which is only 40% of normal increase.

COMMENTS

This is a tax at the rate of eight mills on the gross amount of premiums paid domestic insurance companies for business transacted within the Commonwealth. (Act of June 1, 1889, P. L 4.20).

The tax is imposed upon the gross amount of premiums and assessments received from business transacted within the Commonwealth. All companies incorporated by or under any law of the State of Pennsylvania, excepting purely mutual companies without any capital stock or accumulated reserve, are taxable.

Statistics for the United States show that insurance premiums are increasing at a rate upwards of seven percent per annum, and that the rate of increase in Pennsylvania slightly exceeds the average. Adding only two-thirds of the average increase for the last two bienniums, which is lower than that of the full period reviewed, to the actual receipts for 1921-23 produces, therefore, a conservative estimate.

Our estimate of $645,000 exceeds by only $45,000 the estimate of the Auditor General for 1925-27, and by only $36,000 the receipts for the present biennium.

COMMENTS

This is a charge of one-third of one percent upon the capital stock of domestic corporations and the capital employed in Pennsylvania by foreign corporations. (Act of May 3, 1889, P. L. 189, also Act of May 8, 1901, P. L. 150).

The basis of the bonus on domestic corporations is the authorized capital stock of the corporation upon creation and upon the stock actually issued upon subsequent increases. On foreign corporations it is the actual value of capital employed in this State.

Domestic corporations file no bonus reports, the bonus is paid at the time of the incorporation, and at the time of each subsequent actual increase of capital stock.

Foreign corporations must file a bonus report annually, at the time of filing capital stock reports, showing capital or property employed in the State. A bonus is payable upon all increases as shown by the reports.

We agree with published statements that "Bonus Tax collections are uncertain". Our chart and figures prove that this is correct. We call attention to the very large collection in 1921-23 when the fear of an Act of Congress, taxing stock dividends, caused many corporations to increase their capital stock. We have, therefore, been conservative in making our estimate of $3,950,000 for 1925-27. This estimate exceeds by $750,000 the estimate made by the Auditor General, but is an increase of only $400,000 over the income for the current biennium, as we estimate it with figures available for eighteen months to November 30, 1924. The latest available information indicates that there is now and will continue to be an increased demand for new charters.

Had we used as low a rate of increase as fifty percent of that shown by the past four bienniums, our estimate would have been approximately $5,750,000.

COMMENTS.

This is a tax at the rate of one and one-half percent upon the value of anthracite coal when mined, washed, screened, or otherwise prepared for market. The law under which this tax is collected became operative July 1, 1921, but pending decision of the United States Supreme Court as to its constitutionality, most of this tax was withheld by the taxpayers. (Act of May 11, 1921, P. L. 479). The law was declared constitutional by the United States Supreme Court in December 1924.

The tax is an ad valorem tax upon each ton of coal mined, washed, screened or otherwise prepared for market. The tax must be assessed at the time when the coal has been mined and is ready for shipment or market. The tax is imposed upon all operators without exception, whether individual, firm, co-partnership or corporation.

We understand that the tax has been assessed on all anthracite coal produced, including coal used at the mines, and that the coal companies are protesting this assessment on their own consumption.

In making our estimate of receipts from the Anthracite Coal Tax for 1925-27, for the sake of conservatism, we have excluded coal consumed at the mines from taxable tons produced. This amounts to approximately 10% of production.

On this basis, and after giving due consideration to the fact that the present mine wage agreement will expire on September 1, 1925, we estimate that the income from this source should be $13,500,000, an increase of $1,500,000 over the $12,000,000 estimate of the Auditor General.

COMMENTS.

This is a tax of ten mills on the par value, or four mills on the actual value of the shares of the capital stock or state and national banks. (Act of July 15, 1897, P. L. 292), Trust Companies pay a five mill tax on the actual value of their shares. (Act June 13, 1907, P. L. 640).

The tax is imposed (except in the case of the following) upon the actual value of each share of stock which is to be ascertained and fixed by adding together the amount of capital stock paid in, the surplus and undivided profits, and dividing this amount by the numbers of shares.

Elections. In the case of National and State banks, one of two methods may be elected: The bank may either (1) pay 10 mills on the par value or (2) 4 mills on the actual value: In order to take advantage of the first method a bank must file report and pay tax before March 1st, of each year: if the second method is adopted the filing of the report may be delayed until June 20th, and the tax must be paid within forty days from the date of settlement. No election is given trust companies. They must pay the straight 5 mills. If, however, they pay the tax prior to March 1st, they are entitled to the exemption of tax on corporate loans held by them.

Persons Taxable. All banks, trust companies and savings fund institutions having capital stock and incorporated by or under any law of this Commonwealth, or under any law of the United States and doing business in this State.

An average of the increases for the last four bienniums is approximately $199,000. Two-thirds of this amount or $133,000 added to the receipts of the present biennium indicates a revenue of $3,080,000 for the biennium 1925-27.

Official records show that the institutions taxable under this heading are growing rapidly in both number and size and it is a matter of common knowledge that as a whole they were never in better condition.

Our estimate has been examined by the Banking Commissioner and he stated that in his opinion it is conservative.

COMMENTS.

This is a tax of four mills upon certificates or other evidences of indebtedness of Boroughs, Counties, School Districts and all municipalities. (Act of April 29, 1844, P. L. 501).

The tax is imposed upon the nominal value of the loans, and is deducted from the interest paid on such loans. The tax on county, municipal and school district loans is in all respects similar to the tax on corporate loans and subject to the same exemptions.

In determining our estimate of $2,250,000 for Borough Loans we took into consideration only two-thirds of the average increase of four bienniums. This, coupled with the fact that we had made no increase in county loans and further considering the very large loans to be made for public improvements, should be an extremely conservative estimate.

Imposition of Tax. Act of 1897, P. L. 178.

Persons Taxable. The tax is imposed on the holders of all fullpaid, prepaid and fully matured or partly matured stock of building and loan associations upon which cash dividends or interest is paid.

Rate of Tax. Four mills on each dollar.

On this item the Auditor General estimates a total collection for twenty-four months ending May 31, 1925, of $83,-739.84, whereas for the first eighteen months of this period actual collections were $86,190.64.

Estimating a collection from December 1, 1924, to May 31, 1925, of $25,000 and adding to our estimate for 1923-25 a normal increase of $10,000, gives us an estimate of $120,000 for 1925-27. This exceeds the estimate of the Auditor General by $40,000.

This is a tax at the rate of two percent upon the gross premiums received from business done within the Commonwealth by insurance companies of other states or foreign countries. It is collected by the Insurance Commissioner.

The basis of the tax is the amount of premiums received from business done in this State. One-half of the tax is returned to cities, boroughs and townships of first class.

The estimate of $8,950,000 presented by us has been checked by the Insurance Commissioner, who is responsible for the collection of this tax, and pronounced conservative.

Imposition of Tax. The tax is imposed by Section 27 of the Act of June 1, 1889.

Persons Taxable. Persons liable to this tax are only such corporations as are organized without capital stock, such as savings fund societies. The act exempts corporations paying a capital stock tax, also incorporated banks and foreign insurance companies.

Rate of Tax. Three percent on net income.

The reported condition of these institutions indicates that a normal rate of increase should be expected. In estimating revenue from Tax on Net Income for 1925-27, we added two-thirds of the average increase of four bienniums to the 1923-25 estimate, and thereby obtained $225,000 as our estimate of revenue for 1925-27. This exceeds the estimate of the Auditor General by $25,000.

Notaries Public must pay a license fee of $25 to the State Treasurer. This fee covers a period of four years.

From the records we have found that approximately $120,-000 will be collected from notaries whose commissions will expire between now and June 1, 1925. This added to the actual collections for eighteen months makes an estimated revenue of approximately $185,000 for the current biennium or nearly $85,000 more than the amount estimated by the Auditor General.

For the years 1925-27 a total of 8,800 commissions will probably be issued and renewed.

Interim commissions expiring between sessions	2,400
Four year commissions expiring end of session 1927	6,400
Total	8,800

At $25 each this would produce an income of $220,000. Our estimate of $200,000, would therefore appear to be conservative.

Using about 50% of the possible amount of tax from these prospective loans in addition to the income from the loans already in force gives $825,000 as our estimate for 1925-27.

COMMENTS

These fees represent amounts received under various Acts of Assembly for certain services performed by State officers.

After due consideration of all of the factors entering into the collection of these fees and after conferences with State officers familiar with their collection, we have estimated $1,400,000 as the probable income from this source. This exceeds the Auditor General's estimate by $100,000 and has been arrived at after adding considerably less than the normal increase.

COMMENTS

Receipts from this source represent interest on bank balances belonging to the General Fund. In making his estimate for the biennium 1923-1925 the Auditor General estimated $125,057.10. This estimate is $36,205.29 less than the amount actually received from this source for the first eighteen months of the biennium.

There is every reason to believe that from $30,000 to $40,000 additional will be collected before the end of the present biennium. Our estimate for 1925-1927 only equals the probability of the current biennium in spite of the fact that there is every reason to believe that General Fund balances will be greater than during the present period.

COMMENTS

IMPOSITION OF TAX. The tax on writs, deeds and wills is imposed by Sections 3 and 4 of Act of 1830, P. L. 272, and Section 36, Act of 1832, P. L. 135.

(a) WRITS

A tax of fifty cents is imposed and collected by the Prothonotaries of the various Courts of Common Pleas and Supreme Court on every original writ issued out of said courts (except writ of habeous corpus) and on the entry of every amicable action. A similar tax is imposed on every writ of cetiorari to remove the proceedings of a justice of the peace or alderman and also on every entry of a judgment by confession or otherwise.

A tax of twenty-five cents is imposed on every transcript of a judgment of a justice of the peace or alderman.

(b) DEEDS

A tax of fifty cents is imposed and collected by the several Recorders of Deeds on every deed and mortgage or other instrument in writing offered to be recorded.

(c) WILLS

On the probate of any will and the granting of letters testamentary thereon, also on the granting of letters of administration every Register of Wills must collect a tax for the Commonwealth of fifty cents.

The various officials collecting the above taxes on writs, deeds and wills are required to make quarterly reports of all monies received by them. They are entitled to a commission of 3% for the collection of such taxes.

The estimate on this source of income was made by adding two-thirds of the average biennial increase for four bienniums to the estimated receipts for 1923-25. The amount of our estimate for 1925-27 ($975,000) exceeds that of the Auditor General by $75,000.

Income from these sources results from the normal activities of man and is found to keep pace with the growth in population. There is every reason to believe, therefore, that any estimate made by adding an amount close to the normal rate of increase will prove to be conservative.

COMMENTS

Application must be made and a license procured to conduct a billiard or pool room, shooting gallery, bowling alley, nine or ten-pin alley, shuffle boards, etc.

$20.00 for first table or alley.
$10.00 for each additional table or alley.
$25.00 fee for season at summer resort.

After taking into consideration eighteen months' actual collections and past experience covering December 1, to May 31, the Auditor General's estimate of $361,000 for 1923-25 appears to be low by $25,000 to $30,000. Although average increases appear to be approximately $20,000 per biennium, we have estimated only $385,000 for 1925-27, which is the same as will probably be collected in the present period.

COMMENTS

These licenses are imposed at a flat rate of $2.00, together with one mill on the gross annual business for the calendar year, of dealers in, or vendors of goods, wares and merchandise at retail. (Act of May 2, 1899, P. L. 184).

Every retail vendor or dealer in goods, wares and merchandise; and also each dealer in, or vendor of, goods wares or merchandise at any exchange or board of trade is subject to this license.

We believe the Auditor General's estimate of $4,562,274 for 1923-25 to be too low. However, adding only 50% of the average increase to this estimate gives us our estimate of $4,925,000 for 1925-27.

Two things should be noted:

1. Our estimate is practically the same as the actual receipts for 1921-23.
2. The decrease of 1923-25 over 1921-23 is entirely due to the low estimate of the Auditor General for the current period.

COMMENTS

These licenses are imposed at a flat rate of $3.00, together with one-half of one mill on the gross annual business, for the calendar year, of dealers in, or vendors of goods, wares and merchandise at wholesale. (Act of May 2, 1899, P. L. 184).

Every wholesale vendor or dealer in goods, wares and merchandise: and also each dealer in, or vendor of, goods, wares or merchandise at any exchange or board of trade is subject to this license.

After consideration of all of the factors which enter into the calculation of this tax, we have added 80% of the average increase to the income for the current biennium and present what is believed to be a conservative estimate, namely $1,600,000. This is an increase of $125,000 over the estimate of the Auditor General but is only about equal to 1921-23 actual receipts.

COMMENTS

The amounts collected under this heading are fines for sundry offenses imposed under various Acts of Assembly.

The estimate of the Auditor General for 1923-25 is $38,412.75 less than the actual collections for eighteen months. ($151,404.35).

Undoubtedly a minimum of $25,000 additional will be collected during the next six months giving a total for the present biennium of $175,000. We have estimated the same amount for 1925-27.

To the Honorables, the Legislature of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and of the State of New Jersey and the Council of the City of Philadelphia.

The undersigned members of the Delaware River Bridge Joint Commission have the honor to report that in this year, the fifth since its organization, steady and gratifying progress has been made in construction of the span to link the States of Pennsylvania and New Jersey and the Cities of Philadelphia and Camden. The appended report of the Board of Engineers presents the details of this progress.

During the year contracts, in addition to those previously awarded, have been let for various phases of the work, aggregating $11,211,276. The remaining contracts will be awarded so that the bridge may be opened to traffic on schedule time, July 4th, 1926.

Of the 294 parcels of property required for the bridge pier, anchorage and approach in the City of Philadelphia, your Commissioners, with the advice and counsel of the board of appraisers, chosen because of their long and valuable experience in dealing in real estate, succeeded in negotiating for the purchase direct of 123 parcels at an aggregate cost of nearly $2,000,000. In the other cases negotiations failed because of the widely different views held by our appraisers and the owners, and those cases were taken before the Board of View of Philadelphia, in accordance with the law. Awards were made by the Board of View in the first section of properties between Delaware Avenue and Front Street and for the river front piers. Several of those awards were appealed to the Court of Common Pleas No. 1, resulting in verdicts in excess of those returned by the Board of View. One of the most important, that of Pier 11, owned by the City of Philadelphia, has been appealed to the higher Courts.

Property taken in Philadelphia for bridge purposes is paid for equally by the City of Philadelphia and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. To date settlements in the amount of $2,674,933 have been made. There remain, however, about 145 properties, including large and valuable business establishments, all of which have been condemned and nearly all demolished. Counsel for the Joint Commission and the Secretary have carefully considered each property in this list and have agreed upon an estimate of $3,526,487 as the probable cost of these properties to the Joint Commission. To this must be added $606,000 to meet the possible awards of Common Pleas Court No. 1 on cases appealed from the Board of View for additional properties demolished more than two years ago. While it is our hope that these awards may fall considerably below the amounts fixed by the Board of View, we are advised by counsel that we must establish a proper reserve.

Another item to be considered is one of $500,000 for damages arising from the change of grade of Front Street, Fourth Street, Race Street, Florist Street and other thoroughfares in Philadelphia made necessary by the building of the bridge. The damages due to the changes of grades, while often heavy, can only be approximated at this time.

In the taking of property for public purposes, the Courts often award considerable damages to tenants whose leaseholds are affected. To meet this and other possible contingencies, it has been deemed prudent to ask that $400,000 be made available.

Our estimates for real estate and land damages yet to be defrayed amounts then to $5,032,487, which with the $2,674,933 already expended makes the total $7,707,420. The original estimate of the Board of Engineers, based on 1921 assessments, plus 25 per cent., was $4,709,000 for real estate needed in Philadelphia. It is needless to draw your attention to the general rise in real estate values in Philadelphia, which was taken cognizance of by the Board of View and the Courts.

In New Jersey most of the land needed has been acquired and the owners reimbursed. Much was acquired by purchase but in recent months a number of cases were tried in court with a resulting considerable increase.

To date there has been expended $3,042,221 for property by the State of New Jersey, which under the law pays for real estate required in Camden for bridge purposes. It is estimated that the comparatively few properties for which settlement has not been made can be acquired for $300,000. This brings the total for Camden property to $3,342,221. The original estimate was $1,683,000, which was based principally upon the assessments prevailing in 1921.

It should be noted that a striking increase in real estate values has occurred since 1921. This has been paritcularly the case in Camden and was emphasized at length by all owners and their witnesses who contested the appraisals made by experts retained by the Bridge Commission. We feel that the properties purchased by the Joint Commission were acquired at fair prices and give no weight to the complaints of those who critized the Joint Commission for paying too little to the owners. Despite the care taken in the purchase of properties, the total far exceeded the original estimate.

The original estimate for administration expenses was $416,000. We do not anticipate that this amount will be required. To date our administration cost has been $208,951.

The Board of Engineers has submitted to the Joint Commission an estimate of funds needed for construction over the amounts originally estimated of $1,082,970 from the city of Philadelphia and a corresponding amount from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and $1,695,063 from the State of New Jersey.

The real estate and construction increase would make the total cost of the bridge to the City of Philadelphia and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, each of $10,784,662, and the State of New Jersey $15,641,845.

The added costs of property and unexpected advance in the cost of labor and materials, as shown in the bids received for new contracts, brought your Commissioners face to face with the problem of obtaining funds in addition to the sums already appropriated by the State of New Jersey, the State of Pennsylvania and the City of Philadelphia. Therefore, the Legislature of New Jersey, at the session of 1924, passed an act authorizing the submission to the people at the polls at the November election, a proposed further bond issue of $8,000,000 for the completion of the Delaware River Bridge and the Hudson River Vehicular Tunnel. This loan was approved by a majority of 313,600.

Likewise, the City Council of Philadelphia passed an ordinance for inclusion of an item of $2,561,662 in a loan bill for submission to the November election and this, too, was approved by an overwhelming majority. This amount becomes available when matched by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

This Commission has submitted a budget to the Secretary of the Commonwealth and Budget Officer of Pennsylvania asking for an appropriation of $2,561,662 by the Pennsylvania Legislature, in order that the work may go forward without delay and the bridge be completed on time.

Appended is a balance sheet of the Joint Commission as of November 30th, 1924.

The Important question of transit facilities on the bridge is being given careful consideration by a special committee appointed by your Commissioners. Plans for construction of tracks for trolley lines, the proposed operation of buses and all other details connected with the problem are being discussed.

That the law of New Jersey makes mandatory a policy of charging tolls on the bridge was the announcement of T. Harry Rowland, Esq., counsel for New Jersey, to the Joint Commission at the December meeting. The New Jersey members meeting as the New Jersey Interstate Bridge and Tunnel Commission, reported as follows:

December 19, 1924.

Delaware River Bridge Joint Commission,
Widener Building, Philadelphia, Penna.

Gentlemen:

At a special meeting of the members of the New Jersey Interstate Bridge and Tunnel Commission held this day it was determined that, in view of the finding of law, as reported to the Commission, it is mandatory upon the State of New Jersey to charge tolls for use of the bridge.

In the opinion of the New Jersey Commission the law permits of no other interpretation.

Very truly yours,
THEODORE BOETTGER,
Chairman.

Mr. Rowland's conclusions, in part, follow:—

"My examination convinces me that the New Jersey Legislature intended that both of these enterprises (bridge and tunnel) should be toll paying projects. In this inquiry, the Legislative intent is controlling.

"There can be no doubt as to the tunnel project. The Legislature of this State, by the ratification of the agreement with the State of New York, adopted a definite policy respecting tolls. Consider the language used in this act:

'the commissions * * * shall fix, determine and levy tolls and charges for the use of the same,' etc.

"Both of these projects (bridge and tunnel) are considered and treated by law as joint enterprises, and the necessary funds for their construction are obtained from the same bond issues, authorized under and by the same legislative enactment. It is unthinkable that the Legislature intended that the bridge project should be operated under a different revenue-producing policy than that agreed upon with the State of New York. It would be most unfair and discriminatory if the users of the tunnel should be obliged to pay a toll and the use of the bridge should be entirely free. A most unfortunate situation would be created by such a policy. Residents of New Jersey, using the tunnel, would thereby be called upon to pay a double charge for this convenience: a toll charge in one instance and real and personal property tax in the other * * *.

"A consideration of the bond issue acts of 1920 and 1924, especially the titles, Section 14 and 15 and also the wording appearing on the ballots is very helpful.

"This information appeared on the authorized ballot:

'The net revenues from the bridges and tunnels constructed under this act are devoted to the payment of the bonds.'

"To keep faith with our people, it seems to me, the broadest possible interpretation should be given to this language, because there can be no doubt but that this language was placed there not only as explanatory but as an inducement for popular support. The people who voted for the passage of these bond acts and who were told that the net revenues from the bridges and tunnels constructed under the acts were to be devoted to the payment of the bonds, might very likely have determined to vote against these bond issues if they had supposed that their payment at all times would have been provided for out of taxation, which would have fallen upon themselves * * *.

"The Legislature doubtless intended and contemplated, that at some future time, the revenues derived from the operation of these enterprises would, in a large measure, if not completely, take care of the bond requirements; and, of course, inasmuch as the bonds were sold in 1920, 1921, 1922, and 1923, and the yearly interest and amortization requirements thereby became fixed, it was quite necessary, pending the completion and operation of the projects, to provide the ways and means to pay the already fixed charges.

"I know of no other authorized revenue-producing policy that could be put into effect and which would in any manner satisfy the statutory requirements, except by toll. If the Legislature intended that these fixed charges should always be raised by taxation, it was the bounden duty of the Legislature to say so, not only in the law, but on the ballot submitted to the people and by all means, on the bonds.

"The leasing or sale of franchise rights by the Commission, assuming the Commission had the right, would produce very little revenue—so little, in fact, that it seems to me it would be idle to say that the Legislature had only this revenue-producing source in contemplation.

"It can hardly be doubted that the bond issue Act of 1920 considered in connection with the other legislation including the act ratifying the agreement with the State of New York, makes the levying of tolls and their devotion to the liquidation of interest and amortization of the bonds mandatory, and clearly contemplates the cost of construction and maintenance of the bridge and tunnel shall be liquidated as fully as may be from the revenue derived from the operation of said bridge and tunnel, and that the taxing power of the state is to be employed only, first, pending the completion of the projects and the establishment of a revenue producing policy, and secondly, to take care of the difference, if any, between such operating revenues and the payment requirements.

"Color is given to the conclusion reached by an examination of the bonds sold, where the following appears:

'The principal and interest, as each respectively falls due, will be paid under the Constitution of New Jersey, etc., from moneys derived from taxation until revenues to be received from the operation of the bridges and tunnels, etc. are sufficient to liquidate the indebtedness in due course, etc.

"It is my opinion, therefore, that the New Jersey Commission is obliged, under the law, to impose a toll charge."

The Joint Commission took no action upon the communications from the New Jersey Interstate Bridge and Tunnel Commission and counsel.

The question of use of the bridge by utility concerns is also under consideration and will be threshed out during the coming year.

Important steps in the progress of the work were begun on June 10th when the first cable wires were lifted to the towers and cable spinning was begun; and on December 12th when the corner stones of the two anchorages were laid with brief and appropriate ceremony.

Your Commissioners have held regular monthly meetings and several special meetings during the year and kept in close personal touch with all phases of the work of construction.

Respectfully submitted,

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF ENGINEERS TO THE DELAWARE RIVER BRIDGE JOINT COMMISSION 1924.

ANNUAL REPORT OF BOARD

December 19, 1924.

Delaware River Bridge Joint Commission,
Widener Building,
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Gentlemen:

We have the honor to submit the following report of the work accomplished on the Delaware River Bridge during the past year and of the status of the work at the present time.

Construction work has been in progress for three years. Each year the character of the work has changed with the progressive development of the structure. The year 1922 was occupied entirely with the construction of foundations. During 1923 the work changed in character to include the construction of the steel supporting structure for the main bridge. During 1924 the character of the work has been altered further by construction of the main cables, the first unit of the suspended portion of the bridge, and the scope of the work has been broadened by the start of work on the two approaches.

A notable volume of work has been accomplished during the past year. A total of nineteen contracts have been entered into by the Joint Commission. These contracts have provided for the clearing off of the areas required for the approaches and for the construction of the main suspended structure and of the Philadelphia and Camden approaches, excepting only the final, or "plaza", sections of each approach and the roadway paving and trackwork. The work thus contracted for during the year has an aggregate value of $11,211,276.25, distributed as follows:

*Complete schedule of bids received for the work under each construction contract awarded to date are included herewith in Appendix C.

The contract provides for the payment of this sum to the Joint Commission, the contractor receiving the materials removed by him from the demolished buildings.

The construction work during the year has included work under each of the contracts in the above schedule with the exception of Contract No. 20, which has just been awarded, and in addition the completion of work on the first section of the two anchorages and on the erection of the main towers and the anchorage bents, and the construction to an advanced degree of the main cables. A detailed report of the work under each construction contract is presented below.

COST OF BRIDGE

Until the early part of 1924 the bids on which contracts were awarded closely approximated the original estimate made in the spring of 1921 and it was thought that the total cost of construction would be within the amount of the estimate. The contracts for the suspended structure, the completion of the anchorages and the two approaches, however, have shown increases over the amounts originally estimated. This increase in cost is due largely to the advance in prices of material and labor since the original estimate was made and in part to the fact that in the design of the metalwork provisions has been made for additions to the bridge facilities that may be desired in the future. In addition to these items, the costs of construction in Camden have been increased by the necessity of extending the foundations of the Camden anchorage deeper than had been anticipated and of using concrete piles for the foundations of the Camden approach.

The provisions of reserve carrying capacity in the main bridge was considered desirable because it has invariably been the experience on large bridges that they have been compelled to carry greater loads than those for which they were designed. The reserve capacity thus provided would permit the substitution for the railway tracks of a solidly paved deck for the use of vehicles and trucks and also for the carrying of such public utility conduits as may be authorized.

With reference to the increase in the cost of materials and labor, it is to be noted that the cost of granite has increased fifty percent. since the original estimate of 1920, and a like increase has occurred in the price of granite paving. Other items of work in which labor is a large proportion of the cost have likewise increased.

We have revised our estimate of the construction costs on the basis of contract prices for the contracts already awarded and estimates at the advanced prices for the work yet to be placed under contract. The revised estimate is presented in full in Appendix A. It shows that the total construction cost of the bridge will be $25,924,003.00 or an increase of $3,861,003 over the amount of the original estimate.

The increase in construction cost, together with the increase of $4,479,166.00 in the cost of real estate required for the bridge, brings the total cost of the bridge to $37,211,169.00. The attention of the Joint Commission was called to the need of additional funds to provide for this increased cost.

INCREASING CROSS RIVER TRAFFIC

The need for opening the bridge at the earliest possible date becomes more urgent each year as the volume of cross river traffic steadily increases. In 1920 the total traffic was 2,424,846 vehicles, and a prediction made at that time, based on the rate of traffic increase up to 1920, indicated that in 1926 the total would reach 3,800,000 vehicles. So rapidly has the volume of traffic increased, however, that this figure was passed in 1923, when 4,092,653 vehicles crossed the river on the Philadelphia-Camden ferries. This figure does not include the vehicles carried by the Tacony-Palmyra ferry, which has become an important factor in the movement of traffic between Philadelphia and points in New Jersey. Figures for the full year of 1924 are not available. The traffic during the first ten months of the year has exceeded that for the entire year 1923, however, and it is expected that the total will reach 5,000,000 vehicles.

The maximum holiday traffic has increased in like measures. In 1920 the heaviest day's movement was about 10,000 vehicles. During the past summer the traffic for one Sunday totaled 24,000 vehicles.

Such great increases in the number of vehicles crossing the river emphasize the importance of the bridge to the people of both States. They also show the imperative need in Philadelphia for the provisions of thoroughfares adequate to handle the bridge traffic. The Highway Department of the State of New Jersey has already made plans for wide roads leading to the bridge which will be completed at the date that the bridge is opened. Similar provisions have been recommended to the City of Philadelphia by your Joint Commission, and their importance cannot be overestimated.

DETAIL REPORT

The following is a report in detail of the work accomplished under each contract.

CONTRACT NO. 1—TEST BORINGS

Contract No. 1, for land and river test borings, was awarded August 19, 1921, to the Pennsylvania Drilling Company. Thirty-seven holes were drilled at the sites of the main piers and anchorages in order to obtain information required for the design of the foundations. The work was completed on December 20, 1921, at a cost of $15,975.87.

CONTRACT NO. 2—MAIN PIERS

Contract No. 2, for the construction of the two main piers was awarded on December 21, 1921, to the Holbrook, Cabot and Rollins Corporation and Keystone State Construction Company, acting jointly. The pier foundations were constructed by use of compressed air caissons as described in our previous annual reports.

The caisson for the Philadelphia pier was launched on April 24th, 1922. The first concrete was placed on May 9th and the work of sinking was completed on July 1st, 1922. The caisson for the Camden pier was launched July 18th, 1922, and the work of sinking was completed on October 10, 1922.

Granite for the two main piers was quarried at Stone Mountain, Georgia. Setting was commenced on the Philadelphia pier in August, 1922, and completed in March, 1923, and the setting of the granite on the Camden pier was completed in May, 1923.

The cost of constructing the two main piers was $1,671,055.00.

CONTRACT NO. 3—DEMOLITION

Contract No. 3, for the demolition and removal of the buildings on the site of the Philadelphia anchorage was awarded January 13, 1922, to Charles D. Heavey. The work under this contract was completed on June 30, 1922, at a cost of $8,499.99

CONTRACTS NOS. 4 AND 5—FIRST SECTIONS OF PHILADELPHIA AND CAMDEN ANCHORAGES

Contracts for the work on the first sections of the two anchorages were awarded on June 2, 1922 to the Keystone State Construction Company and Holbrook, Cabot and Rollins Corporation, acting jointly. The foundations for the anchorages were constructed by the use of reinforced concrete caissons sunk by open dredging. The design and methods of construction of these caissons have been described in our annual report for last year.

The masonry structure of each anchorage above the foundations, together with steel girders and eye bars embedded in it for anchoring of the cables, has been completed during the past year with the exception of the erection of the final tier of eye bars which is being handled in connection with the construction of the main cables. The cost of the work including the amount to be paid when the eye bar erection is completed is $915,041.05 for the Philadelphia anchorage and $1,271,811.57 for the Camden anchorage.

CONTRACT NO. 6—MAIN TOWERS

Contract No. 6, for construction of the two main towers, was awarded on December 1, 1922, to the Bethlehem Steel Company. The towers are of slender outline, designed to deflect with changes in the pull of the cables. They rise to the height of 347 feet above the tops of the piers and 384 feet above the mean low water. The main sections are of silicon steel.

The towers were fabricated and assembled in sections at the Steelton shops of the Bethlehem Steel Company and were then taken apart and shipped to the sites for erection. The erection work was handled by the use of a "creeper traveller" especially designed for the purpose by the contractor. This traveler consisted of a steel frame moving along vertical I-beams bolted to the tower bracing and supporting a 60 ft. steel derrick boom. Only six different positions of the traveler were required for the entire tower erection. Power for operating the travellers was furnished by heavy duty engines originally designed and used for the erection of the Blackwell's Island, now the Queensboro bridge, in New York.

After the towers had been erected up to the last splice, accurate measurements were made on the steelwork and the final sections were then machined in accordance with the measurements to secure uniform bearing for the saddle castings at the tops of the towers.

Erecting and riveting was completed on the Philadelphia towers in April 1924, and on the Camden tower in May 1924, and the field painting and all other work under this contract was completed by July 1st. The total cost of the work under Contract No. 6 was $1,440,571.02.

CONTRACT NO. 7—ANCHORAGE CABLE BENTS

Contract No. 7, for construction of the anchorage cable bents was awarded on July 20, 1923 to the American Bridge Company. These bents provide the support over which the cables are deflected to the angle of approximately 45 degrees required for their attachment to the eyebars. They bend as do the towers to accommodate changes in the cables and as in the towers the main sections are of silicon steel. The bents rest upon concrete buttresses which are part of the first section of the anchorages and transmit to them the thrust produced by the change in direction of the cables.

The base sections of the bents are steel castings of unusual size, two castings being used beneath each leg of the bents. Each of these sections of steel castings weighs 42 tons. The steelwork of the bents was assembled complete at the shops in the same manner that the towers were handled, to secure accurate fitting, and were then taken apart and shipped for erection.

Erection of the bents was started in February 1924 and all work under the contract was completed July 8, 1924. The cost of the work was $357,247.80

CONTRACT NO. 8—CABLES

Contract No. 8, for construction of the main cables, was awarded on September 21, 1923, to the Keystone State Construction Company upon a bid of $2,546,900.00. The American Cable Company, New York, secured the sub-contract for furnishing the wire, and the wire has been manufactured for them at the Page Steel and WireCompany plant at Monnessen, Pa.

Each of the two cables will have a diameter, when completed, of 30 inches and will contain 18,666 separate wires. The wires are each 0.195 inches in diameter after galvanizing and are laid parallel. Over 25,000 miles of wire are required for the two cables.

The wire is manufactured from acid open hearth steel, the specifications for which require that it shall contain not more than 0.85 per cent. carbon, 0.04 per cent. phosphorous and 0.04 per cent. sulphur. The individual heats of steel are identified by numbers and every ingot, billet, bundle of rod and bundle of wire carries its heat number from the time it leaves the steel mill until the finished wire is delivered.

The steel billets are carefully heated to a pre-determined temperature and rolled into rods ⅜ inch diameter. Then comes a special-treating process, followed by the wire drawing. The wire drawing consists in pulling the wire through a series of five separate dies, each draft being at a carefully regulated speed. Each draft must reduce the size of the wire to a given degree in order to insure the proper amount of cold working. The structure and tensile strength of the wire are dependent almost wholly upon the care with which the heat treatment and the cold working by wire drawing are carried out. Tests have been made on each end of every coil of wire drawn, the coils being about 3000 feet long. These tests show that a high degree of uniformity has been secured throughout the work. After the final cold drawing, the bridgewire varies in gage less than 0.003 in.

The final wire operation in the wire production is galvanizing. The galvanizing consists of a coating of zinc 99.75 per cent. pure, containing not over 0.03 per cent. iron. The temperature of the zinc bath and the speed with which the wire is drawn through it are carefully regulated to prevent injury to the wire.

The specifications required that specimens cut from the wire after galvanizing should show a minimum tensile strength of 215,000 lb. per square inch, elongation of 4 per cent. in 10 inches and yield point of 144,000 lb. per square inch. The wire produced for the cables has exceeded these specified limits. The average tensile strength as shown by the tests is 223,000 lb. per square inch. Despite its hardness and high tensile strength this wire can be bent cold around a rod 1½ times its own diameter without fracture.

The coils of wire produced at Monessen have been shipped to the bridge site at Camden. There they have been spliced on reels of about 90,000 feet each. The coils are spliced by the use of a steel sleeve having right and left hand threads, with the ends of the wire mitered to lock them against twisting out. The threads are tapered and are swedged into the wire by a special threading machine striking 2400 blows per minute. Tests to destruction of splices taken frequently and at random show that the strength of the splice averages above 98 per cent. of the unspliced wire. As successive reels are incorporated into the cables, the swedged ends of each reel are threatened into similar sleeves. In the event that a splice in the field is necessary, threads are cut in the wire by ordinary screw thread dies.

To support the required construction plant and to afford access to the cables during construction, temporary timber footbridges were built across the river along the line of the cables. The footbridges are each 10 feet wide, with flooring consisting of 6 inch boards spaced two inches apart. Each footbridge is supported by six 2¼ inch steel cables, arranged in two sets of three cables each. These cables are made with a 7x7 wire rope center, surrounded by 6 strands of 37 wires each. They will be used later for suspender wires in the bridge structure, together with similar rope furnished under contract No. 13. Three crossover bridges in the main span and one in each side span, of timber truss construction, are provided to give convenient access between the two footbridges and to brace them to reduce side sway. Storm cables of 2¼ inch rope are also provided in order to reduce the vertical motion of the footbridges.

The cable wires are carried across the river by means of travelling sheaves or "spiders" attached to an endless wire cable, the "haulage rope", which moves from anchorage to anchorage. A strand is begun by fastening one end of wire from a reel to a strand shoe and passing the loop of wire around the travelling sheave. The haulage rope is then set in motion and as the sheave moves across the river the wire is unwound from the reel twice as fast as the sheave travels. The loop is thus elongated as the sheave moves across until the two wires forming the loop are finally carried to the opposite anchorage. There the loop of wire is removed from the sheave and passed around a strand shoe at that side of the river. This operation completes the laying of two wires of one strand. These wires are adjusted to correct sag and tension while the sheave travels back from the anchorage it has just reached with a loop from that side. This cycle of operations is repeated as the sheave passes from side to side of the river until the entire strand is finished.

One haulage rope is provided for the construction of each cable. Two sheaves are fastened to each haulage rope in such position that when one sheave is at the Camden anchorage the other is at the Philadelphia anchorage. At the same time that the loop of wire is started in motion from Philadelphia another loop is started from Camden. Each movement of the haulage rope thus places four wires across the river.

In order to secure the correct length and sag in the completed cables, single wires were carried across the river and accurately adjusted in the cable saddles to the correct length, before the first strands were started. These wires were then used as guide wires in the building up of each of the strands to secure the same length of wire in every strand.

Eight strands are built up at a time, four eo each cable. They are first built up at the sides of the cable saddle and are then seized into circular form and placed in position in the saddles of the towers and anchorage cable bents. Moving of the completed strands into the saddels is accomplished by hydraulic cranes moving on beams above each saddle. The strand shoes at the anchorage for attachment of the strands to the anchor eyebars are placed at right angles to their position during the construction of each strand, to facilitate the loops of wire around them and adjusting the wires. When the strands are completed the shoes are turned into vertical position and secured between the eyebars.

About five days are required for stringing the wires in each group of four strands, and from one to two days are required for seizing the completed strands and adjusting them in position in the cable saddles. Work is underway on both cables for twelve hours each day. The high record for stringing wires up to the present time is 578 wires in one day. This record represents an average rate for the travelling sheaves of slightly under 10 minutes from anchorage to anchorage. A single trip is frequently made in less than 9 minutes but the average is considerably higher because of the time required for splicing reels and because of delays and difficulties in the work.

Excellent progress has been made on the construction of the cables. Each cable is now over 75 per cent. complete and unless unforseen difficulties arise they will be completed by the first of February, 1925.

The completed cables will each have 61 strands. As the strands are laid into the saddles the cross section is a regular hexagon, with extreme diameters of 35¼ inches. For compacting the hexagonal into a circular section a special compacting machine has been developed. This machine is a hydraulic press consisting of a hexagonal steel girdle made of six pairs of channels arranged to take the reactions from six hydraulic pressure cylinders. Cast shoes machined to 15 inches circular radius are attached to the pressure pistons and squeeze the cable from hexagonal to circular shape. Pressure is applied silmultaneously to all cylinders, thus producing uniform compacting. The pressure at the pump reaches 6000 pounds per square inch and the total force brought upon the cable is about 30 tons.

Because of the unprecedented size of the cables of this bridge, a special test was made to determine the diameter to which the cables could be compacted. A model section five feet in length was prepared of wires cut from the regular wire produced for the cables. Splices were made in sufficient wires to secure the same proportion of splices in the test as will occur in the completed cables. Compacting of this model section reduced it to a diameter of 29 15/16 inches. The first 15 tons pressure reduced the cable from 35½ to 30½ inches diameter and an additional 15 tons pressure was required to secure the final 9/16 inch reduction.

When the 61 strands in each cable are completed they will be compacted with similar machines and the castings for attachment of the suspender ropes will then be bolted upon the compacted cable.

CONTRACTS NO. 9 AND 10—DEMOLITION

Contracts for the demolition and removal of the structures on the sites of the Philadelphia and Camden approaches were awarded as follows:

PHILADELPHIA APPROACH

Contract No.	Section	Contractor	Date of Award	Amount
9A	Front to Second St.	Sorrentino & Co.	1/18/24	$11,300 00
9B	Second to Third St.	Sorrentino & Co.	1/18/24	59,900 00
9C	Third to Fourth St.	J. Joseph McHugh	12/20/23	9,363 00

9E	Fifth to Sixth St.	Jump Housewrecking Co.	12/20/23	Pay 5,101 00*

CAMDEN APPROACH

Contract No.	Section	Contractor	Date of Award	Amount
10A	Delaware to Second St.	Charles D. Heavey	1/18/24	47,000 00
10B	Second to Fourth St.	Geo. A. Klinges Co.	1/18/24	7,800 00
10C	Fourth to Sixth St.	Charles D. Heavey	12/20/24	3,400 00
10D	Fifth to Seventh St.	Jump Housewrecking Co.	12/20/24	Pay 2,812 00*

*The contract provides for the payment of this sum to the Joint Commission, the contractor receiving the materials removed by him from the demolished buildings.

All work under contracts 9A, 9B, 9C, 10A, and 10B has been completed and the work under the remaining demolition contracts will be completed early in 1925.

CONTRACT NO. 11—PHILADELPHIA APPROACH PIERS

Contract No. 11 for the construction of the Philadelphia approach piers, was awarded on February 25, 1924 to the Frederick Snare Corporation. Twenty-six piers located between Front Street and Fourth Street are being constructed under this contract. The piers are of granite backed with concrete and are for support of the steel columns of the approach metalwork. All the piers have been founded on spread footings on gravel, constructed in open excavation.

Granite for the piers has been quarried at the H. E. Fletcher quarries at West Chelmford, Mass. All work under Contract No. 11 was completed on December 10 at a cost of $217,997.25.

CONTRACT NO. 12—CAMDEN APPROACH PIERS

Contract No. 12, for construction of the Camden approach piers, was awarded on February 25, 1924, to H. G. Ley and Company, upon a bid of $271,862.50. Test borings made as part of the work under this contract showed that it was necessary to use piles for the foundations of all the piers. This work has required the making and driving of 1048 reinforced concrete piles. The pile driving has been completed east of Delaware Avenue and 16 piers have been finished. Twenty-six piers are included in the work under Contract No. 12, and the piers are similar in design and function to those constructed for the Philadelphia approach under Contract No. 11.

CONTRACT NO. 13—CABLE BANDS, SUSPENDERS AND HAND ROPES

Contract No. 13, for construction of the cable bands, suspenders and hand ropes, was awarded on March 21, 1924, to the Keystone State Construction Company upon a bid of $404,850.00. The work under this contract comprises the manufacture and erection of the steel castings which are bolted to the cable for attachment of the suspender rope and hand ropes. The suspender rope furnished under Contract No. 8 and used for the footbridges will be cut to length, socketed and erected under this contract. All the cast steel sockets required for attachment of the suspender ropes to the steel work have been completed; a large number of cable bands have been cast and are being machined; and a portion of the suspender rope has been manufactured. When the main cables are completed, the footbridges will be suspended from them, and the rope now supporting the footbridges will be removed and erection under Contract No. 13 proceeded with at once.

CONTRACT NO. 14—SUSPENDED STRUCTURE

Contract No. 14, for construction of the suspended structure was awarded on March 21, 1924, to the American Bridge

Company upon a bid of $2,888,000.00. This contract covers the fabricating and erecting of the stiffening trusses, laterals and floor system of the main bridge from anchorage to anchorage. The trusses are of Warren type, 28 feet deep center to center of chords. The chord sections are all of nickel steel, with a minimum ultimate strength over 90,000 pounds per square inch and yield point 55,000 pounds per square inch. The web members and the main material of the floor system are of silicon steel of the same grade as the material used in the main towers and the anchorage cable bents.

The contractor has divided the work among several fabricating shops. The main span trusses will be fabricated at Ambridge, Pa., and the side span trusses will be fabricated at Elmira, N. Y. Other portions of the work are being handled at Pencoyd, Pa.

The entire work under contract No. 14 will require 19,000 tons of steelwork. Over 76% of this material has already been rolled, and fabrication work is under way. The trusses are assembled at the shops for fitting before any material is shipped to the work. At the Ambridge shops assembling was started on October 10, 1924. The assembly of the first sections of the main span trusses has been completed. The first train load shipment was made on Nov. 21, using a solid train of sixty cars. Assembling of the side span trusses was started November 17 at the Elmira shops. The steel as it is shipped is placed in storage in Philadelphia ready for erection. It is expected that the greater portion of the steelwork will be on hand before the erection is commenced and the erection work will progress very rapidly.

CONTRACT NO. 15—COMPLETION OF ANCHORAGES

Contract No. 15, for the completion of the anchorages, was awarded on June 20, 1924 to the Keystone State Construction Company upon a bid of $2,977,450.00. The portion of the anchorage masonry constructed under Contracts Nos. 4 and 5 provides sufficient counterweight for the dead load of the bridge. The concrete masonry being added under Contract No. 15 includes the additional mass required to take care of the live load. This contract also provides for construction of foundations for the anchorage towers, construction of the towers, containing elevator shafts, stairways, vestibules, operating and store rooms, and other construction and installation required to complete the anchorages in readiness for operation.

The foundations for the towers consist of eight cylindrical piers to rock, two under each tower. These piers have been constructed as reinforced concrete open dredged caissons. They are each 16 feet in diameter, with walls 4 feet thick and a single dredging well 8 feet in diameter. The cutting edges are of steel. The caissons are pumped out as the sinking progresses and are sealed by depositing concrete in the dry, in accordance with the practice developed in sinking the caissons of Contracts Nos. 4 and 5. Construction of these caissons was begun in September; the last caissons for the Philadelphia anchorage was sealed on Rock November 15; and the saissons for the Camden anchorage are now nearing completion. The final elevations of the cutting edges of the Philadelphia piers vary from -62 to -66 feet, and the final elevations in Camden are approximately -104 feet.

Granite setting on both anchorages was commenced early in December and the cornerstones were laid on December 12th, the fifth anniversary of the date of organization of the Delaware River Bridge Joint Commission.

On the towers of the anchorages will be carved the coats-of-arms of the two states and the two cities. The coats-of-arms of Pennsylvania and of Philadelphia will be carved on the Philadelphia anchorage and the coats-of-arms of New Jersey and of Camden on the Camden anchorages. The sculpture work will be at a height of 115 feet above the street, with figures boldly carved at heroic scale.

The treatment and expression of the sculpture work are being developed through successive models, the first of which was made one-sixth the size of the carved work. These first models have already been prepared for each of the four coats-of-arms. Half size models from which the carving in granite will be developed are now being sculptured.

Granite for the anchorage is being quarried from the Stone Mountain quarries in Georgia, the West Chelmsford and Milford quarries in Massachusetts and the Mount Airy quarries in North Carolina.

CONTRACT NO. 16—PHILADELPHIA SEWERS

Contract No. 16, for construction of sewers in Philadelphia, was awarded on June 6, 1924 to Lombardi Company, Inc., upon a bid of $173,464.25. The work under this contract includes the construction of brick and reinforced concrete sewers extending from Fourth Street to the Delaware River. Construction work was commenced immediately upon the award of the contract and the work is now nearing completion.

CONTRACT NO. 17—STRUCTURAL METALWORK, PHILADELPHIA APPROACH

Contract No. 17, for construction of the structural metalwork of the Philadelphia approach, was awarded on July 18, 1924 to the American Bridge Company upon a bid of $1,511,850.00. The work under this contract includes the construction of the supporting steel towers and the trusses, and the floor system, extending from the Philadelphia Anchorage to Fourth Street. Over 11,000 tons of steelwork are required under this contract. Heavy rollings of Steel are now being made at the mills and shopwork will be commenced early in 1925.

CONTRACT NO. 18—STRUCTURAL METALWORK, CAMDEN APPROACH

Contract No. 18, for construction of the structural metalwork of the Camden approach, was awarded on July 18, 1924 to the American Bridge Company, upon a bid of $1,793,650.00. The work under this contract is similar in character to that of Contract No. 17, and covers the portion of the approach from the Camden anchorage to Third Street. It will require more than 13,000 tons of steel. Mill rollings are under way and the work will be carried on simultaneously with that under Contract No. 17.

CONTRACT NO. 19—PHILADELPHIA APPROACH FOURTH TO FIFTH STREET AND STREET CHANGES INCIDENTAL THERETO

Contract No. 19, for construction of the masonry and structural metalwork of the Philadelphia approach between Fourth Street and Fifth Street and the grading, paving, sewers and other work in adjacent streets, was awarded on September 19, 1924, to Mazzola and Marano, upon a bid of $401,238.50. This contract provides for the construction of the foundations and the masonry and metalwork of the Philadelphia approach from the point where Contract No. 17 reaches ground level east of Fifth Street. It also includes lowering the grade of Fourth Street required to permit passage under the approach structure and the adjustment of adjacent streets and sewers. The foundations are spread footings of concrete on gravel foundations similar to the foundations for the piers constructed under Contract No. 11. The masonry work will be faced with granite. The foundations have been completed and masonry and granite facing are being constructed and the street changes are under way.

CONTRACT NO. 20—CAMDEN APPROACH, THIRD STREET TO EAST OF FIFTH STREET

Contract No. 20, for construction of the masonry and structural metalwork of the Camden approach from Third Street to east of Fifth Street, was awarded on December 19, 1924, to the O'Neill Company upon a bid of $408,161.00. Under this contract the Camden approach will be constructed from the end of the metalwork built under Contract No. 18 to ground level east of Fifth Street.

FUTURE CONTRACTS

The following contracts remain to be let in order to complete the bridge according to the approved plans:

Contract No. 21—Floor slabs on main spans and approaches.
Contract No. 25—Grading, paving and construction of sewers in Front and other streets in Philadelphia.
Contract No. 26—Camden Plaza.
Contract No. 28—Final painting.

These contracts will provide for all work necessary to complete the bridge ready for operation, excepting track work. The progress made on contracts already under way gives every assurance that, if the remaining work to be done can be placed under contract by the middle of 1925, the bridge will be ready for traffic on July 4, 1926.

Respectfully submitted,

RALPH MODJESKI,
Chairman and Chief Engineer.

GEORGE S. WEBSTER,
LAURENCE A. BALL,
Board of Engineers.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSION APPOINTED TO STUDY AND REVISE THE STATUTES OF PENNSYLVANIA RELATING TO CHILDREN.

PART I

CHILDREN'S COMMISSION

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

February 2, 1925.

To Honorable Thomas Bluett, Speaker, House of Representatives of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

Sir: We have the honor to transmit herewith a report prepared in accordance with the instructions contained in the act passed by the General Assembly of 1923. P. L. 994, authorizing the creation of a commission to study the statutes relating to, and the conditions and practices for conserving the welfare of the children of this state. This report is now in process of being printed. It is hoped that copies of it will be available for distribution very soon to the members of the General Assembly.

It is the unanimous opinion of this Commission, which has now been in existence fourteeen months, that to complete the task assigned to it within the period of time allotted would have been quite impossible even had it begun functioning a few months earlier and that the completion of this task will require two more years. This conclusion will be the more clear as the facts contained in this report of the Commission are reviewed. The situation in Pennsylvania, like that in New York and several other states, is such that wise recommendations for revision of the laws relating to the various aspects of child welfare require the amassing and study of an enormous body of fact, as well as of both statute and common law. Your Commission has tried to lay solid foundations for its own and further studies in the publication of the compilation of laws relating to children and in the methods which it has followed in its study of the practice of adoption.

The recommendations of the Commission for changes in the statutes relating to adoption and to those providing for the licensing of infant boarding houses will be found in the body of the report.

REPORT OF THE CHILDREN'S COMMISSION OF PENNSYLVANIA TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY MEETING IN 1925

I. HISTORY OF THE ACTIVITIES OF THE CHILDREN'S COMMISSION.

The Children's Commission of Pennsylvania.

The act creating the Children's Commission of Pennsylvania became effective on July 11, 1923. It provides for the appointment by the Governor of seven members who are to study the laws, conditions and practice of this state relating to child welfare and to suggest revisions and amendments to the statutes of Pennsylvania which relate to children, especially those which relate to the dependent, defective, delinquent, neglected, incorrigible or illegitimate children. The Commissioners are to serve without compensation but they are empowered to employ and to fix the salaries of the necessary persons to enable the Commission to perform its duties properly. It is given access to the documents, records and papers of all agencies, public and private, dealing with children where it is necessary for the Commission to get facts which may be of use and value in its work. Five thousand dollars were appropriated and the Legislative Reference Bureau was directed to render such service as the Commission might request.

The Commission was directed to submit its report to the General Assembly on or before the first day of February, 1925.

All recommendations are to be accompanied by concise statements of the reasons therefor.

The Commissioners were appointed in November, 1923. The following persons accepted the appointment to serve without compensation as members of the Children's Commission: Charles Edwin Fox, Esq., of Philadelphia, Chairman; Mrs. John W. Lawrence, of Pittsburgh, Vice Chairman; Mrs. J. H. Bovaird, of Bradford; Mr. J. Rogers Flannery, of Pittsburgh; Hon. Edward Lindsey, of Warren; Mr. J. Prentice Murphy and Miss Florence Sibley, of Philadelphia.

Organization of the Work of the Pennsylvania Children's Commission.

On March 1, 1924 the appointment of the Executive Secretary, Neva R. Deardorff, was announced. On account of her contract with Bryn Mawr College, she could not assume her duties until May 15, 1924.

Office space for the use of the Commission was generously donated by the Big Brother Association of Philadelphia in its building at 25 South Van Pelt Street, Philadelphia.

Meetings of the Commission with an average attendance of five members have been held as follows:

Harrisburg	November 21, 1923
Philadelphia	January 24, 1924
Pittsburgh	March 14, 1924
Scranton	April 25, 1924
York	May 9, 1924
Erie	May 23, 1924
Philadelphia	September 26, 1924
Philadelphia	November 14, 1924
Philadelphia	December 12, 1924
Philadelphia	January 7, 1925

Public Hearings and Adoption of Program.

The time specified by the law, within which the Children's Commission was to examine the laws and their operation and was to find out the conditions which required amendments or new laws, was obviously so short, in view of the resources available for making these inquiries, that it was evident that only a few phases of the situation could be satisfactorily covered before the 1925 meeting of the General Assembly. It seemed wise, therefore, to consult public officials, child welfare workers and interested citizens regarding the immediate points of approach. Accordingly four public hearings were held during the spring of 1924, at which suggestions were solicited and received. These hearings, held in Pittsburgh, Scranton, York and Erie, brought the Commission into direct personal contact with several hundred Pennsylvanians, many of whom submitted suggestions both in written and in oral form to the Commission.

All suggestions made to the Commission were carefully recorded and formed the basis upon which selection of matters for immediate investigation was made. These subjects are as follows: procedure in adoption, state supervision of the care of dependent children, the identure and apprenticeship laws, the re-classification of the different types of needy children coming before public and private agencies in the state, the operation of the juvenile court and house of detention laws, certain aspects of the illegitimacy laws, common law marriages, and the rights of children and parents in all separation proceedings.

A public hearing held in Philadelphia on September 27, 1924 confirmed the judgment of the Commission based on previous hearings, that these laws and their operation should be chosen as the first objects of study.

Two thousand copies of a small leaflet announcing the immediate program of the Commission were printed in July 1924 and distributed widely throughout the state.

Co-operation with Other Public and Private Agencies.

As has been noted, the law creating the Commission permitted it to call upon the State Legislative Reference Bureau for services. The commission very promptly availed itself of this permission and the Legislative Reference Bureau during the spring and summer of 1924 prepared a comprehensive digest of the statutes relating to children and the important court decisions bearing upon the constitutionality of these measures. The special phases of this project will be discussed a little later. The Legislative Reference Bureau has been of the utmost help to the Commission.

The United States Children's Bureau, which has from time to time since its creation in 1912, conducted important studies in child welfare in Pennsylvania communities, at the request of this Commission, consented to make surveys of the child welfare resources of several Pennsylvania counties. Since the appropriation to the Commission permitted of little or no expenditure for field investigation throughout the state this assistance was of very material value. The plan of the studies to be carried on was worked out in co-operation with members of the Commission and its staff. The Commission selected and recommended the counties to be covered. They are: Blair, Bradford, Clearfield, Erie, Lancaster, Lycoming, and Susquehanna. The investigators put into the field had had experience in making somewhat similar studies for children's commissions in several other states, notably Connecticut, Kentucky and Georgia. These field investigations began in June 1924 and are nearing completion as this report goes to press.

The State Department of Public Welfare, which had had a study of adoption practice in contemplation for some time, offered to conduct its study in such way that the statistical and other findings would combine with a study of this subject to be conducted by the staff of the Children's Commission. It was arranged that the Commission should study adoptions in Philadelphia County over a period of years while the investigator for the State Department should survey adoptions in a number of counties for the years 1922 and 1923. A summary of this very valuable survey will be found printed as appendix II of this volume.

Other state departments and local educational and other authorities have promptly and cheerfully accorded whatever information the Children's Commission has asked of them even when this required an appreciable amount of work in assembling and recasting it. Numerous private agencies such as the Public Charities Association, children's institutions and agencies and the Philadelphia Housing Association, have assisted in compiling information, in arranging for hearings and in other ways.

On the whole, your Commission has found everywhere appreciation of the need for its services, interest in its immediate task and its activities, willingness to lend assistance of all kinds and thus far an amazing absence of selfish or partisan efforts either to influence or to obstruct its work. This assistance has made it possible for the Commission to base its recommendations upon an accumulation of facts which, the Commission feels sure, will commend itself to your honorable bodies.

Commissions for the Revision of Child Welfare Laws in Other States.

The creation of a Pennsylvania Commission to study the laws which relate to children, especially those suffering from physical, mental and social handicaps, comes after a twelve year period of experiment and achievement in other states and after long period of agitation in Pennsylvania.

One state after another has realized that laws relating to children have a tendency to four kinds of defects:

1. They are apt to lag behind the social conscience and intelligence of the time, largely because they relate to persons who, in the nature of the case, cannot bring the impact of an organized group on legislative and judicial machinery. Pennsylvania still has indenture laws of 1770, 1799 and 1836 on its statute books which strongly savor of the old rules for indentured servants. Adoption by deed provided for by the Pennsylvania statutes is repugnant to the modern ideas of the care which should be exercised when the custody of a child is to be transferred.

2. The body of legislation tends to become chaotic. Hasty and premature enactment of statutes intended to solve some local or special difficulty or to meet some immediate situation cause a part of this confusion. The adoption law of May 4, 1855, for instance, has been so carelessly amended that considerable uncertainty now exists regarding the legality of some of the older amendments, ignored when later ones were passed.

3. Laws of good intent often fail in greater or less degree to accomplish their purpose because their provisions for administration are vague and provide for no accounting, supervision or review by which it can be determined whether or not they are functioning. The Pennsylvania juvenile court laws and the statute relating to children in almshouses suffer more or less from these defects.

4. The whole field of child welfare is so broad, so many factors affect the lives of children that it is difficult and sometimes almost impossible to harmonize all of the elements that enter into the situation. Long established principles relating to the rights and duties of parents have to be brought into relationship with the new efforts to protect children from neglect, cruelty and abuse and to foster health and education. Some of the legislative experiments of the past have not afforded the expected solutions and need modification.

As this situation has been realized in other states, they have undertaken on their initiative, each to review the whole mass of its statutes and judicial decisions relating to children as they have worked out in practice, to weed out, as far as can be done, their defects and to substitute measures better designed to bring into being the desire of the people of the state that every child should be insured a minimum of protection and opportunity. Pennsylvania was the twenty-ninth state to undertake such a review. Ohio, New York, Minnesota, Connecticut, Delaware, the District of Columbia and twenty-three other states in all parts of the country have provided for commissions to undertake this work.

The task which confronted the New York State Commission to Examine Laws Relating to Child Welfare, upon its creation in 1920, is perhaps the closest parallel to that which confronts this Commission. Three successive New York legislatures have continued the Commission there with annual appropriations of $5,000, $7,500, $7,500 and $15,000 for each of four years activity.

The Connecticut legislature provided $22,000 to finance the activities of its Commission for four years. Other states have likewise provided for the continuance of their commissions.

The reports of many of these state children's commissions are notable for their broad and penetrating studies of children's laws, not only of their own state, but of other states. New York and Connecticut have made excellent studies of their particular state conditions and have accomplished and indicated programs of legislation which lay the foundations for effective child welfare work of every legitimate type. Minnesota has received wide recognition for the thorough work which has been done there. Massachusetts, which has achieved a high rank in the field of child welfare, may with justice say that her present record rests on the careful work done in the past in the development of a body of wise and comprehensive laws for the full protection and education of her children. In no single instance has the solution come—any more than it will in Pennsylvania—through the passage of many laws, but rather through agreement on certain basic conceptions and rules. This has come about largely through a painstaking revision of existing laws and the filling in here and there of gaps, the existence of which has been generally unknown.

The United States Children's Bureau in its Bureau Publication 131, reveals the extent of the so-called child welfare legislative movement throughout the country and the very solid reasons for its development.

Research Studies and the Canvass of Public Opinion as a Basis of Suggestions in Pennsylvania.

It has been the conclusion of this Commission that its recommendations to your honorable bodies should be founded, not only upon a thorough examination of the laws and court decisions bearing upon the situation, but also upon careful examination of the practices in the state based upon these laws. The study of the adoption laws and their operation, published as an appendix to this report is an example of the type and extent of inquiry which your Commission is convinced should underlie suggestions for revisions and amendments. Your Commission is also of the belief that, in all cases when there is time to make this feasible, all suggestions to the General Assembly should be preceded by a series of public conferences throughout the state at which the tentatively proposed measures of the Commission should be thoroughly examined and subjected to the criticisms of all persons who are interested in child welfare. This year such formal conferences could not be held. The Children's Commission has, however, made an effort to put its conclusions before the people of the Commonwealth through as many informal meetings as could be reached by its members and its staff and through materials released to the press of the state.

Financial Situation.

At the initial meeting of the Commission it was decided that under the conditions prevailing in this state and in view of the experience of other states with commissions of this character and of organizations conducting studies similar to those described above as necessary for well considered recommendations, a minimum budget of $10,000 per year would be required. It was therefore necessary to supplement the state appropriation with funds raised privately.

In addition to the gifts of money the Children's Commission has received volunteer services the value of which, conservatively computed at $125 per month, is as follows:

Dorothy Tomlinson	$100.00
Rebecca Smaltz	40.00

The two attorneys who have assisted on special pieces of legal research would have been very modestly compensated had the Commission been able to pay them for their services as follows:

Tillie Sara Thompson	$100.00
Leonard Schwartz	100.00

The monetary value of the field work of the United States Children's Bureau can be roughly estimated as:

Salaries of two investigators for 8 months at $150 per month each	$2,400.00
Travelling expenses and per diem allowance	1,800.00
Total	$4,200.00

This takes no account of the overhead costs for supervision or for any clerical or statistical service at the Washington office of the Federal Children's Bureau.

Several organizations and hotels have generously given the use of their auditoriums without charge to the Commission for its public hearings. On several occasions members of the Commission have been able to combine business for the Children's Commission with other missions in such a way as to save the Commission travel expense.

The expenditures from the funds, both state and private of the Children's Commission to December 31, 1924 are as follows:

Salaries—regular	$4,191.30
Remuneration for special work on study of adoptions	412.88
Substitute stenographer	10.00
Mimeographing	152.05
Office equipment	204.35
Office supplies	127.79
Stationery—letter heads	25.00
Postage	129.82
Telephone and telegraph	59.23
Travelling expenses	693.15
Printing leaflets	31.25
Total	$6,339.82

II. COMPILATION OF STATUTES AND JUDICIAL DECISIONS RELATING TO CHILDREN.

As has been said, the work of compiling the statutes relating to children has been done by the Legislative Reference Bureau. Citations of judicial decisions bearing on the constitutionality of the statutes which have thus been challenged are given in this compilation.

Members of the Commission have co-operated with the Bureau in working out the classification and arrangement of material and in deciding numerous questions of minor detail referred by the Bureau to the Commission. The compilation includes 640 sections and covers hundreds of enactments dating from 1713 to the present. It is printed as Volume II of this report. The indexing was provided by the Children's Commission.

Next in importance to the compilation of the statutes for a clear presentation of the law relating to children is the interpretation of the various phrases and words of the statutes through judicial decisions and opinions of Attorneys General. It is hoped eventually to publish an annotated edition of the statutes but time and the resources at the command of the Commission did not permit of undertaking a labor of such magnitude now.

In the meantime it is necessary to set forth the material in decisions and opinions with reference to those sections of the law taken up for special study and recommendation. Your Commission decided, therefore, to combine the compilation of that material with an effort at presentation adapted to the needs of laymen. Accordingly it has experimented with a question and answer form of presentation of the law as developed through statutes, decisions and opinions. A sample of an analysis of this kind as applied to the subject of adoption will be found in the appendix of this report. An edition of two thousand copies of the questions and answers on adoption has been printed separately and distributed to the agencies, public and private, which are in contact directly and constantly with the procedure in adoption cases. Your Commission has found that the question and answer method of anlysis, used so effectively some years ago by the commission appointed to revise the intestate laws, is admirably suited to bring out the strong and the weak points of the laws relating to children. It is planned therefore, to apply it further wherever a somewhat complicated situation is to be reviewed.

III. RECOMMENDATIONS OF LEGISLATION.

Your Commission wishes to offer for the consideration of your honorable bodies at their present session the two following measures:

1. An act defining the procedure in the adoption of children and adults.
2. An act providing for the issuance of licenses for infant boarding houses.

In accordance with the instructions in the law creating this Commission, the reasons for these recommendations will be briefly set forth in connection with a draft of each proposed measure.

An Act Defining the Procedure in the Adoption of Children and Adults.

The complete results of the Commission's study of the practice of adoption in Pennsylvania will be found in appendix I of this report. The following were found to be the outstanding features of the situation:

1. The present laws providing for adoption through the courts contain no adequate safeguards in the procedure which they specify against the adoption of young and helpless children by people wholly unfit to be entrusted by the community with their custody. Your Commission found that this inadequate provision for investigation had resulted in many adoptions of a grossly undesirable character.

2. Adoption by deed, legalized by the Act of April 2, 1872, has opened the way for grave and serious abuse and your Commission has reason to believe that such abuse now exists. Moreover, this law furnishes a recourse for effecting adoptions which have been refused by the courts.

3. The provisions in the present laws providing for parental consent in adoption cases are lacking in clarity. This results both in faulty adoptions made in good faith by conscientious adopting parents and in the jeopardizing of parental rights in certain classes of cases by unscrupulous people wishing to secure the child.

4. The present adoption laws specify no procedure to insure the truth of the statements made in adoption petitions. Your Commission found that adoptions were being decreed on the basis of adoption petitions in which perjury concealment and evasion had been practiced, and not always by otherwise unscrupulous people.

5. Your Commission found that adoption records, containing statements material to the adoption proceeding, but of a nature to bring sorrow and unhappiness to the adopted child if widely disseminated or if improperly used later in the child's life were open to the inspection of the general public.

6. Your Commission found that there was such looseness in the residence requirements for persons presenting adoption petitions, that everyone, even though he be an alien or a non-resident, is now eligible to present such a petition to the courts of Pennsylvania. The validity of adoptions so decreed, if tested outside Pennsylvania, is a matter of grave question. Moreover, it would seem unwise to open the courts of Pennsylvania to hear petitions of non-residents ineligible to adopt in their own communities.

7. Even though adoption is one of the most radical steps that can be taken before the law to change domestic and inheritance relationships, a married person may now adopt without the consent of his spouse. Your Commission found adoption petitions in appreciable numbers which gave no information regarding the material status of the adopting person.

8. The present law makes no provision for the consent of a minor to his own adoption.

9. The present adoption law gives the father who has acknowledged paternity of an illegitimate child no right to withhold consent to its adoption.

10. Owing to defective drafting of the amending Act of May 28, 1915, the validity of two previous amendments is uncertain.

To clarify the procedure in adoption and better to protect the child himself and the interests of all parties concerned, your Commission offers for your consideration the following draft of a new adoption statute. This would replace all existing legislation on the subject of adoption except the inheritance provisions of the Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 429, Section 16.

AN ACT

Relating to Adoption.

Section 1. Petitions in Adoption Proceedings. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That it shall be lawful for any adult citizen of this Commonwealth, residing therein, desirous of adopting any person, either a minor or an adult, as his or her heir, or as one of his or her heirs, to present his or her petition to the Orphans' Court or to a law judge thereof of the county where he or she may be resident, declaring such desire and that he or she will perform all the duties of a parent to such person. Such petition shall also set forth the name, age, date and place of birth of the person proposed to be adopted; the name, residence and marital status of the adopting parents; or parents; the name and place of residence of each of the natural parents or of the surviving parent or of any other person whose consent to the proposed adoption is necessary as hereinafter provided and shall embody or have attached thereto the consents in writing of the person or persons whose consent to the proposed adoption is necessary as hereinafter provided.

Section 2. Consents Necessary to Adoption. Consent to the adoption is necessary as follows:

(a) Of the person proposed to be adopted if over twelve years of age, and of said person's husband or wife if any;

(b) Of the adopting parent's husband or wife unless they jointly adopt such person;

(c) Of the parents or surviving parent of the person proposed to be adopted except that in the case of an illegitimate child the consent of the mother only is necessary unless the father has acknowledged such child; but the consent of a parent who has been adjudged a lunatic or habitual drunkard or who has abandoned the child is unnecessary provided such fact is proven to the satisfaction of the court or judge hearing the petition in which case such court or judge shall so find as a fact;

(d) If the person proposed to be adopted has no father or mother living or whose consent is necessary hereunder then of the legal guardian if any there be and of the persons having the legal custody of such child if any such person can be found; but if such child has no father or mother living or whose consent is necessary hereunder and no legal guardian and no person can be found who has the legal custody of such child and the same be proven to the satisfaction of the court or judge hearing the petition the said court or judge shall so find as a fact.

Section 3. Hearings. Upon presentation of any such petition as aforesaid a time for hearing thereon shall be fixed not less than ten days from said presentation which said hearing may be before the said court or any law judge thereof at chambers and may be adjourned from time to time if the nature of the case should so require. At said hearing the adopting parents or parent, the person proposed to be adopted and all the persons whose consent is necessary hereunder must appear in person and be examined under oath by such court or judge; but the personal appearance of the natural parents or other persons whose consent is necessary hereunder may be dispensed with in the discretion of the court or judge hearing the petition if such persons reside without the jurisdiction of the court or if any other reason the said court or judge deem it unnecessary, provided the duly executed consents of such persons in writing have been filed with the petition; and the said court or judge may in his discretion require the personal appearance of the natural parents of the child at a different time and separate and apart from that of the other parties in interest. The said court or judge shall also hear any other testimony as to the facts set forth in the petition or necessary to inform the court as to the desirability of the proposed adoption and may also make or cause to be made an investigation by some person or agency specifically designated by said court or judge to verify the statements of the petition and such other facts as will give the court full knowledge as to the desirability of the proposed adoption.

Section 4. Decrees of Court. Records. If satisfied that the statements made in the petition are true and that the welfare of the person proposed to be adopted will be promoted by such adoption and that all the requirements of this act have been complied with the court or judge shall make a decree so finding and reciting the facts at length and directing that the person proposed to be adopted shall have all the rights of a child and heir of such adopting parent or parents and be subject to the duties of such child; but otherwise shall make a decree refusing the adoption and dismissing the petition. If desired by the parties the decree may also provide that the person adopted shall assume the name of the adopting parent or parents. Such decree shall be filed and spread at length upon the records of said court and shall be sufficient evidence of the adoption and shall be open to the public. All other papers pertaining to the case and the testimony if written out shall be kept in the files of said court as a permanent record thereof and may in the discretion of said court or judge be withheld from inspection by a proper order, in which case no person shall be allowed access thereto except upon an order of court granted upon cause shown.

Section 5. Repeals. The following acts and parts of acts of Assembly are hereby repealed absolutely:

Section seven af an act approved the fourth day of May, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five (P. L. 430) entitled "An act relating to certain duties and rights of husband and wife and parents and children";

An act approved the second day of April, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two (P. L. 31) entitled "An act relating to rights of adopted children, being a supplement to an act entitled 'An act relating to certain duties and rights of husband and wife and parents and children' approved the fourth day of May, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five";

Section ten of an act, approved the eleventh day of June, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine (P. L. 142) entitled "An act to protect children from neglect and cruelty and relating to their employment, protection and adoption";

An act approved the nineteenth day of May, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven (P. L. 125) entitled, "An act amending section seven of an act entitled 'An act relating to certain duties and rights of husband and wife and parents and children' aproved the fourth day of May Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, providing that married men or women, in case of drunkenness or profligacy of husbands or wives, may consent to the adoption of their children";

An act approved the ninth day of May, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine (P. L. 168) entitled, "An act relating to adoption of any person as an heir";

An act approved the second day of July, one thousand nine hundred and one (P. L. 606) entitled, "An act conferring jurisdiction upon the courts of common pleas of the counties of this Commonwealth to authorize the adoption of children in the said county by a person living in another state upon petition of either parent of such child";

An act approved the twenty-second day of April, one thousand nine hundred and five (P. L. 297) entitled, "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act amending section seven of an act entitled "An act relating to certain duties and rights of husband and wife and parents and children", approved the fourth day of May Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, providing that married men or women, in case of drunkenness or profligacy of husbands or wives, may consent to the adoption of their children' ";

An act approved the first day of June, one thousand nine hundred and eleven (P. L. 539) entitled, "An act relating to the adoption of adult persons as heirs";

An act approved the twenty-eighth day of May, one thousand nine hundred and fifteen (P. L. 580) entitled "An act amending section one of an act entitled 'An act amending section seven of an act entitled "An act relating to certain duties and rights of husband and wife and parents and children," approved the fourth day of May, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five; providing that married men or women, in case of drunkenness or profligacy of husbands or wives, may consent to the adoption of their children,' approved the nineteenth day of May Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven;"

All other acts of Assembly, or parts thereof, that are in any in conflict or inconsistent with this act or any part thereof, are hereby repealed.

Section 6. Effective Date. This act shall take effect and be in force on the first day of July, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five.

An Act Providing for the Issuance of Licenses for Infant Boarding Houses.

The abuses arising from the unregulated operation of infant boarding houses, popularly called "baby farms," have been so well known for forty years that your Commission did not deem it necessary to make a special, detailed inquiry into the subject, such as was done in the case of adoption procedure, to demonstrate the need for a thorough revision of the Pennsylvania legislation on this subject. This legislation consists of three statutes: the Act of May 28, 1885, P. L. 27; the Act of April 27, 1909, P. L. 211; and the Act of June 9, 1911, P. L. 854 referring to "the business of boarding and keeping infant children." Since 1885 the person boarding infants for hire or reward under certain circumstances has been required to secure a license. Taken together the three acts provide for the following system:

1. The acts define a baby farm so that the keeper is exempt under the following circumstances from the necessity of securing a license:
   a. If less than three children are kept.
   b. Any number may be received on commitment from a court.
   c. In cities of the first and third class, any number of children if accompanied by "an adult caretaker" may be received.

   The definition of a keeper of an infant boarding house makes no exception of those boarding children who are near relatives.

2. The licensing power is lodged in a peculiarly diverse and unorganized body of public officials. In Philadelphia the Department of Health issues the licenses. In cities of the third class, that power is lodged with the mayor. In all other parts of the state licenses may be issued by the mayors of cities and towns and by any justice of the peace or magistrate of the locality.

3. Revocation of these licenses can only be effected upon the order of the Court of Quarter Sessions or any judge thereof on cause shown.

4. Officers of the State Board of Charities (now the State Department of Welfare), of the local health authorities and of societies to protect children from cruelty are given the right to enter and inspect the premises. With the exception of Philadelphia, these authorities have nothing to do with the issuance of the license.

5. In cities of the first class licenses are issued annually and all of them expire by law on August 31 of each year.

6. In cities of the first class the director of the department of health has the power to make additional rules and regulations.

7. In cities of the third class, rules and regulations for the guidance of the mayor in issuing the licenses and the penalties for violation must be prescribed by general ordinance.

Thus it can be seen that uniformity in the control of this "business," as it is called in these laws, is impossible at present. A keeper of a baby farm can easily evade the rules and regulations specified for cities of the first and third class by moving over the municipal corporation line.

Justice of the peace and magistrates of the locality can hardly, without more specific directions, be expected to create a licensing system of any effect.

In the control of this business where the neglect of a young baby can, and often does, prove so swiftly fatal, there should be no question of the allocation of responsibility and the necessary power to move promptly in the revocation of a license and the removal of children.

To provide the legal basis for building up the necessary controls of this situation, your Commission offers the following act:

AN ACT

Relating to Boarding Houses for Infants, providing for the licensing thereof, and the adoption of rules and regulations for the maintenance, operation and conduct thereof by the Department of Welfare; and fixing penalties.

Section 1. Boarding House for Infants Defined. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the term "Boarding House for Infants," as used in this act, shall mean any place, other than institutions duly incorporated for the purpose, maintained, operated and conducted for hire, gain or reward, for the reception of more than one infant child under three years of age unaccompanied by parent or guardian, for the purpose of providing such children with care, food and lodging, unless such children are related to the person or persons maintaining and conducting such place, by blood or marriage within the second degree.

Section 2. Maintenance of, Without License, Prohibited. No person or persons shall maintain, operate or conduct any Boarding House for Infants without having a license therefor issued by the Department of Welfare of the Commonwealth.

Section 3. Application for License. Any person or persons desiring to secure a license for maintaining, operating and conducting a Boarding House for Infants shall make application therefor to the said Department of Welfare upon blanks to be furnished by the said Department.

Section 4. Approval of Local Health Authorities. All applications for licenses to maintain, operate and conduct Boarding Houses for Infants within cities of the first, second or third class shall, before being submitted to the said Department of Welfare, first be approved by the health authorities of such city, and for licenses for maintaining, operating and conducting such Boarding Houses for Infants, in boroughs, towns and townships, the application shall first be approved by such person or persons or public or private agency as may be designated by the said Department of Welfare.

Section 5. Issuance of License. The Department of Welfare shall, when satisfied that the applicant or applicants for such license are proper persons and that the place sought to be used as a Boarding House for Infants is a fit and suitable place for such purpose, and when all the requirements of this act and the rules and regulations of the Department have been complied with, issue such license and keep a record thereof and of the application therefor.

Section 6. Term and Contents of License. All licenses granted by the Department shall be for a period of not more than one year. The license shall state the name of the licensee or licensees, the particular premises where such boarding house may be maintained, operated and conducted, and the number of infants which may be boarded therein at one time.

Section 7. Number of Infants to be Kept. Posting License. No greater number of infants than is authorized by the license therefor shall be kept at any one time in any Boarding House for Infants, and when required by the Department of Welfare said license shall be posted in a conspicuous place on the premises wherein such Boarding House for Infants is to be maintained.

Section 8. Department of Welfare to Adopt Rules and Regulations. The Department of Welfare may, with the approval of the State Welfare Commission, make and adopt rules and regulations not inconsistent with this act, for the issuance and renewal of such licenses and the proper maintenance, operation and conduct of such Boarding Houses for Infants and for the effective enforcement thereof.

Section 9. Revocation of Licenses. The Department of Welfare may revoke such license and shall note such revocation upon the fact of the record thereof, and shall give written notice of such revocation to the licensee or licensees by delivering the said notice to him or them in person or by leaving it on the licensed premises.

Section 10. Right to Enter and Inspect the Premises. The Department of Welfare and the health authorities in cities of the first, second and third class and the agents designated by the Department of Welfare to receive and approve licenses in boroughs, towns and townships, shall have the right at any time to enter, visit and inspect the premises of Boarding Houses for Infants within their respective jurisdictions.

Section 11. Records to be Kept by Licensee. Every person licensed to maintain, operate, and conduct a Boarding House for Infants shall keep a record in a form prescribed by the Department of Welfare of every infant received, the date of its reception, the name and address of the person from whom received, the date of its discharge, and the name and address of the person to whom delivered or discharged.

Section 12. Registration of Infants. The Department of Welfare shall prescribe for the registration and record of infants cared for in Boarding Houses for Infants, and shall furnish to the licensees of such Boarding Houses for Infants the forms upon which such registration and record shall be made, together with such instructions as may be required to secure the complete registration of all infants received by said Boarding Houses for Infants, or released therefrom.

Section 13. Penalty. Any person violating any of the provisions of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or to undergo imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

Section 14. Burden of Proof. In any prosecution arising out of the violation of this act or the rules and regulations of the Department of Welfare pertaining to the maintenance, operation and conduct of Boarding Houses for Infants, where a defendant relies in defense upon the relationship of any infant to himself, he shall have the burden of proof thereof.

Section 15. Acts Repealed. The following acts are hereby repealed absolutely:

An act approved the twenty-eighth day of May, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five, (P. L. 27), entitled "An act supplementary to an act entiteld 'An act to protect children from neglect and cruelty, and relating to their employment, protection and adoption' approved the eleventh day of June, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, providing for the further protection of minors, and regulating the boarding and maintaining of infant children for hire."

An act approved the twenty-seventh day of April, one thousand nine hundred and nine, (P. L. 211), entitled "An act regulating the licensing of persons engaged in the business of receiving, boarding, or keeping infant children, under the age of three years, for hire or reward, in cities of the first class; providing that such licenses shall be granted annually by the Director of the Department of Public Health and Charities in such cities; authorizing the making of rules and regulations for the issuing and registering of such licenses for the conduct of such business, and for the inspection of the premises in which said business is conducted; making the violation of the act and of the rules and regulations made thereunder a misdemeanor, and prescribing the penalty therefor."

An act approved the ninth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and eleven, (P. L. 854), entitled "An act providing for and regulating the licensing of persons engaged in the business of receiving, boarding, or keeping of infant children, under the age of three years, for hire, reward, or otherwise, in cities of the third class; and authorizing the passing of general ordinances providing for and regulating the issuing of said licenses and imposing penalties."

All other acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

IV. MEMORANDUM ON THE CARE OF DEPENDENT CHILDREN IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Although your Commission has not been able in the time at its disposal to make a detailed and comprehensive examination of the activities of public and private agencies in the care of dependent children, it has been able to make a somewhat general survey of this field, to indicate what are some of the outstanding problems, what are some of the ways in which the present system should be tested, and to compare some of the features of the Pennsylvania system, or systems, with the practices of other states.

Social and Economic Backgrounds of Child Dependency.

Under the present organization of society the primary responsibility for the parental care and the financial support of children under sixteen years of age is lodged with the natural parents and grandparents. All but a little over three per cent of Pennsylvania's 2,947,611 children under sixteen years of age get support and training in that way. The law has built upon the natural relationship of parent and child certain legally defined rights and responsibilities; juvenile, domestic relations and quarter sessions courts are empowered to compel people to fulfill parental and filial obligations. Where, for various reasons, the parents fail to meet their responsibilities, but the child has property resources, the orphans' court is empowered to appoint a person to administer its property in such a way as to support it. There remains, however, a group of children in the community without support from their parents and relatives and without property. These are dependent children within the meaning of this report.

Workmen's Compensation.

As the operation of some of the causes of dependency has been studied, many instances have come to light where it has been possible to say that had this particular hardship not been put upon the parents, in all probability this child or this family of children would not have become dependent upon public or private resources for support. Such is the case with dependency due to accidental death or injury of the bread winner in industrial employment.

The Pennsylvania State Dependents Commission reporting to the Governor in February 1915, made as one of its most important recommendations, a plea for a law providing for compensation for industrial accidents. Happily the Legislature of that year passed a Workmen's Compensation Act, which went into effect on Jenuary 1, 1916. Thus was created a powerful incentive for the employer to eliminate needless accidents and thereby to reduce his costs of production.

To find out whether or not compensation has "worked," one need only look at the charts showing the number of fatalities in the coal mines of Pennsylvania from 1891 to 1922.[1] Whereas for the years from 1891 to 1908 one fatality occurred per 120,000 to 145,000 tons of anthracite coal mined, in the period from 1917 to 1922 one fatality has occurred per 160,000 to 175,000 tons mined. In the bituminous mines during the years from 1900 to 1911 one fatality occurred per 270,000 to 300,000 tons mined, while from 1917 to 1922 one fatality occurred per 350,000 to 410,000 tons. While no one would ascribe this improvement wholly to the influence exerted by the workmen's compensation law, on the other hand, no one would deny the power of this incentive.

[1] Statistical Analysis of Coal Mine Accidents in Pennsylvania, 1916 to 1922 inclusive,—complied by the Coal Mine Section of the Pennsylvania Compensation Rating and Inspection Bureau.

In March 1920 C. W. Price, then general manager of the National Safety Council wrote in the American Labor Legislation Review: "State compensation laws have played a most important part in stimulating Safety because they more definitely define the cause of accidents and place burden squarely on the shoulders of the employers without recourse to the courts. During the five years that I was connected with the Wisconsin Industrial Commission, accidental deaths were reduced 61 per cent. Judging from this experience, it is, I think, fair to say that one half of the credit for this accomplishment must be given to the stimulus which the compensation law gave to the whole safety movement."[2]

One of the important aspects of the workmen's compensation system is the fact that the price in human life which certain forms of industry now exact, is distributed over the great body of consumers in all parts of the country who can better afford to carry it than can the individual family or the tax payers of the county or state.

The Bureau of Workmen's Compensation of the Department of Labor and Industry after a special inquiry for the Children's Commission reports a total of 13,767 fatal compensable cases involving dependent children for the period from January 1, 1916, to October 23, 1924, or an average of 128.5 per month. The victims of these fatal accidents left a total of 22,442 child dependents, an average of 1.63 children per person fatally injured or about 207 children per month. The support of this body of children, which exceeds the population of any one of eleven counties of the state, has thus been removed at least partially from the field of charity and established on a more sound and just basis.

Besides the large number of children involved in the fatal accidents, there is the vastly greater number involved in the 13,551 permanent disability and the 581,087 temporary disability cases in which compensation was awarded from January 1, 1916, to December 31, 1924. The compensation awards which take place, even to the limited extent now provided by law, of the wages of the injured bread winner have lifted out of the ranks of the dependent classes great numbers of children, as well as of adults. Further study is necessary before a fairly exact estimate of the number of children thus cared for each year who could otherwise be dependent upon the public can be made. Certainly the $10,300,000 compensation paid during the year 1924 and the $60,000,000 paid since the inception of the act have had a far-reaching influence on the dependency situation in Pennsylvania.

Mother's Assistance.

Other immediate causes of child dependency which have been isolated and met are; first, the premature death of the father resulting from other causes beside compensable injury in industry or in war: and second, the permanent incurable insanity of the father. This method has been through the public provision of assistance to mothers to keep their young children in their own homes. This also acts two ways. It serves to bring before the public the extent and cost of child dependency created by preventable causes and it puts upon the public, which is able to carry the load, the cost of at least partially maintaining these children. By virtue of legislation beginning in 1913 Pennsylvania in May 1924 was assisting 12,060 children at an annual cost to the state treasury of $875,000 with a similar amount raised through local taxation.

The movement to assist widows in their own homes was a protest both against separating needy children from their mothers and also against the inflexible administration and inadequate provisions of outdoor relief.

Both in the case of workmen's compensation and of mothers' assistance experience has shown that they are, short of actual prevention of death and injury, the most efficient and economical forms of care and maintenance for these children. Without such forms of aid to children in their own homes, three alternatives remain: (1) Either the community must provide for the family through poor relief or private charity: or (2) It must provide for the children away from their mothers through public or private charity; or (3) It may let the situation drift and later reap the fruits of neglect in the form of greater demands upon hospitals, insane asylums, reformatories, jails, and police protection from lawlessness and vice. The presence in any community of widows and children without sources of support represents the onset of social breakdown extending in many directions. If the first of these three alternatives is followed the Pennsylvania public pays the bill through public or private charity and pays at least as much as compensation or mothers' assistance costs, without securing the benefits which accure from the pressure put upon employers and the community to reduce the number of preventable injuries and deaths. In the case of industrial accident, that method also fails to add the cost of unavoidable accidents to the bill of the consumer, who is, after all, the beneficiary of the industry in which life was sacrificed. The second alternative has the same disadvantage and is far more costly than leaving children with their mothers. Many widows are now keeping a family of two or three children at a cost to the public not in excess of what it is necessary to pay to keep one child away from home under conditions which approximate decent home life. The third alternative costs the members of the community as tax payers very large sums and as individual members incalculable amounts not only of money but of sorrow and unhappiness as well.

[2] See Bulletin No. 339 of the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, "Statistics of Industrial Accidents in the United States." On pages 37-60 there are given tables containing accident frequency rates in various industries for a series of years, showing a decided general downward trend after the introduction of compensation laws.

Workmen's Compensation and Mothers' Assistance Should be Developed Further.

Your Commission wishes to stress, therefore, that these two methods, namely, workmen's compensation and mothers' assistance, which have been adopted in Pennsylvania should not only be continued, but should be developed so that every case of child dependency properly chargeable to these two categories should be cared for by these methods.

It is, therefore, desirable, and in harmony with the state's trend of development, to examine in detail the provisions for workmen's compensation and to make sure that the compensation principle is being thoroughly applied. This would seem to imply the necessity for careful study of the results now being achieved in compensable cases where children have been left full orphans or half orphans when the surviving has been mentally or physically incapacitated or is failing for any other reason to exercise a proper custodianship. It would also seem to imply necessity for an examination of the compensation rates to make sure that they make adequate provisions and efficiently accomplish the purpose of child care and education which the general principle contemplates.

After twelve years on trial of the principle of assistance to fatherless children in their own homes a thorough-going application of it is in order. In this, as in compensation, it would seem to be the state's duty to reach out and provide for every eligible child. It must be recognized that under the present day conditions in Pennsylvania, it can hardly be assumed that these most satisfactory and economical forms of support for dependent children will, without initiative exercised on the part of the state find their way to all of the eligible children. Moreover, appropriations adequate to take care of them when they are found, must be made. Inasmuch as mothers' assistance can be provided at a lower per capita cost than any other form of child care, it is reasonable to predict that with the provision for all eligible children, the legitimate demands for expenditure in other forms will be correspondingly reduced in number and very favorably reduced in amount and a real saving in the total of the state's and the counties' public funds effected. The extent of such savings can perhaps be realized more clearly if a few typical costs for the different types of care are analyzed.

In Allegheny County the Juvenile Court is paying $5.60 per week, or $291.20 per child per year, to board it in a foster home. While this rate is very modest, for a family of four children that cost in a year amounts to $1,164.80. The Mothers' Assistance Fund now allows a maximum grant of $600.00 per year for a family of four. The difference between these two amounts consists of two margins, one the inherently higher cost of care outside the natural family, the other the deficit between the maximum grant now permissible under mothers' assistance and an adequate family budget. This latter margin is covered now very largely by resources which come from the family itself.

To maintain children in good institutions which attempt to provide anything in the nature of home life and individual care, results in heavy costs. To keep children in barracks is fairly cheap, but even then when the investment costs are counted, the bill is far in excess of the $240.00 for the first child and the $120.00 for each additional child allowed to mothers for the support of their children at home. The orphanage at Hastings-on-Hudson, an institution famous for its accomplishments in providing good care for children at minimum costs, found in 1922 that, exclusive of depreciation and the cost of schooling, $493.54 represented the annual cost of keeping each child. This includes $119.05 of capital costs. For a family of four the annual cost in this institution is $1,974.16 or $1,497.96 if interest on the investment is disregarded. It is true that by careful follow up work of parents and relatives, a part of this cost can be met by the child's parents or relatives. If they are, however, able to pay any very substantial sums, they can usually make private arrangements for the care of their children and the children are not to be classed as even semi-dependent.

In view of the high costs of caring for children away from their own homes, it would appear to be the part of wisdom to consider ways and means to develop mothers' assistance in three ways: first, to make financial provision to care for all eligible families; second, to introduce an element of flexibility so that the maximum grants may be increased; and third, to revise the eligibility requirements in such a way as to enable additional families to be kept together.

Other Measures of Prevention and Better Social Organization.

With the development of insurance whether under public or private auspices to meet the emergencies of sickness and non-industrial accident there is again set in motion those forces which operate to bring these general causes of child dependency under control and to spread over a larger group the cost of maintaining children made dependent through those forms of illness and accident which are as yet uncontrolled.

Unemployment likewise is one of those basic conditions which lie back of child dependency and which are in some degree at least amenable to preventive measures.

The failure of parents to perform the normally assumed function results from a number of causes beside death, sickness, injury and unemployment. Mental incompetency, disruption of the family and several other causes operate to produce child dependency. Some of these causes can in large measure be, and are now being, greatly influenced by preventive social measures.

Ordinarily each generation secures its attitudes toward parental obligations from its own parents, but great social movements, such as that for public schools, have their influence on family customs. Whatever results in the raising of individual efficiency, the refinement of feelings, the cultivation of a sense of parental and social obligation and good standards of conduct undoubtedly lays the foundations for some people for a discharge of these responsibilities better than was accorded them in childhood.

The distribution of wealth so that a minimum "health and decency" standard of living is possible for all wage earners and other measures such as the control of disease and the promotion of health, the improvement of housing, and the provision of public recreation, furnish the fundamental approaches to the protection and education of parents so that they can, and will, carry the responsibilities which our social and legal system assumes that they will carry when they bring children into the world. Vocational rehabilitation and provision for adult probation and parole also have their relationship to the support of children of the persons involved.

The Residuum of Children Now Thrown on Charity for Support.

We have not, however, reached that state of society, nor are we likely soon to reach it, in which all children receive the necessary care from their natural parents, helped by cooperative social measures to tide over crises. The community is still faced with a residuum of children who must be provided for through public and private assistance. These children represent those whose parents are dead or insane, but who are ineligible for compensation or mothers' assistance; or who, in the latter case, are eligible but who are on the waiting lists; whose parents are in prison; whose parents are unable to support them because of unemployment or sickness. Mental incompetency and that deficient sense of parental responsibility which leads to desertion or abuse or neglect account for others now composing this residuum. There is also the child dependency which results from illegitimacy.

This residuum of children should in a well ordered state represent a constantly decreasing number. As society organizes itself better to cope with problems of unemployment, of the control of the feeble minded, of dealing with criminals, of the protection of health and safety, of education in parenthood and its responsibilities, of the discouragement of hasty and ill advised marriages, of the more efficient administration of the laws compelling support from parents and relatives able to provide, of the adjustment of distribution in such a way as to yield an income to wage earners which enables them to carry the growing responsibilities for better child care, of the social organiaztion which, through insurance, distributes the burden of unusual calamities, there should be fewer and fewer children in the community who are thrown upon charity for partial or total support.

Relation of Charity to Measures of Prevention, Social Justice and Child Welfare.

Assuming that the residuum of dependent children is decreasing through increasing control of these factors, it will still represent a sufficient number to make it worth while to study closely the operation of charitable enterprises. In the administration of all public and private charity three prime considerations appear: first, to make sure that it is actually dealing with a residuum not otherwise provided for; second, to ascertain and analyze the facts regarding that residuum to find out what further causes lying back of its condition can be reached; and third, so to take care of its beneficiaries that both parents and children having physical handicaps or mental attitudes and habits which have contributed to the dependent condition of the family are, so far as can be, re-educated in a way that makes for personal independence and efficiency and the prevention of further dependency in parents and children. None of these jobs is simple or easy of accomplishment. Investigation, analysis, skilled case work with individuals and with families are necessary.

In making provisions for the permanent care of dependent children it is coming more and more to be realized that only by making sure in each individual case that parents and responsible relatives are not able and cannot be enabled to function, can such efforts be carried out in harmony with the social development of our time. More and more is it being realized that the assumption of responsibility by an outsider for the care of children is a step which is not necessarily and invariably in the best interests of the child or of society, and that it is good only if taken with a thorough understanding of its relationship to these large community concerns and to the situation and circumstances of the individual family.

To provide otherwise than through aid in their own homes for children who have good homes, but with insufficient income, is to waste a natural resource, to confuse social issues, retard the development of society, to interfere with the normal functioning of parents, and in some instances to destroy the most precious possession of the child, the intimate concern of the parent for its welfare. To create forms of care for dependent children which fail to relate themselves to our general social and legal system and to the great economic issues of our times has come to be regarded as of questionable value, if not of definitely detrimental character. Moreover, to take a child away from those legally responsible for its support, without being able and willing at the same time to assume responsibility for its education and training, which often extend over a long period of time, is a hazardous proceeding which in some cases is a disservice to the child and the state.

When, after examination into the family situation in the light of these considerations, it seems necessary and advisable for the public or private agency to assume the responsibilities of a parent, there still remain many serious and important decisions. It is manifestly impossible for a public or private agency to take the place of good parents. At best for a large number of children only a substitute for a good home can be achieved. At worst the child's situation can be made definitely more demoralizing than it was even in its own poor home. It is, therefore, of utmost importance that both public and private agencies should know quite definitely before accepting or removing a child from his own family; first, that the child's parents are failing to perform their natural functions and the reasons therefor; second, that there is no way by which they can be helped or compelled to perform at least a part of these functions; and third that the plans made for the child will actually do what his home seems to be failing to do.

Since workmen's compensation and mothers' assistance are administered largely as matters of justice and the conditions of their availability usually rule out the necessity for deciding whether a child should be left with its parent or not, these measures may be looked upon as making very definitely toward maintaining the integrity of the family relationship and as such deserve to be developed further.

Charity and the Parental Relationship.

With public and private charity the case is different. The administering officers may assist children in their own homes, or they may accept children for care away from their families, or they may even stipulate that the child must be taken out of the home and the parental relationship broken before any aid will be extended. The officers administering public relief in Pennsylvania are empowered to make these decisions and to help children in all of these ways. Private charities, frequently offer forms of assistance which weaken or even break entirely parental and filial ties. While it is true that parents are sometimes so depraved as to require that their children should be taken from them, it is equally true that in many cases when this is done, it does not guarantee that the child's condition will be improved. It also is frequently true that children are separated from parents who are not depraved in any sense. They are separated from their children merely because they are poor. They are persuaded to part with them as the only apparent means of securing advantages for the children which otherwise they could not have. The alternative presented to the parents, particularly widows and unmarried mothers, is help only at the price of giving up the child. This conception of charity belongs to a bygone generation.

In this connection it must be recognized that there is an insistent demand for children from childless people. The motives which lie back of this desire for children range from the highest altruism in wishing to share with some unfortunate child the love, care and privileges of unusual social advantages to the desire for a child to serve a selfish personal end. Childless couples disappointed and drifting toward marital unhappiness think a child in the home will bind them together anew. Bored people looking for a new thrill, neurotic people with various unwholesame attitudes towards life and the gratifications of their egoistic impulses, people who want children as servants or farm laborers, all form a part of the public which sees a justification in the separation of parents and children. This desire of people for children undoubtedly conditions the procedures of many public and private charities. One has only to visit an agency placing children for adoption and see the long lists of would-be foster parents to feel the pressure which is exerted upon those in charge of these agencies. Only a deep sense of reverence for the rights of every parent and a keen sense that true charity would bind, not loosen natural relationships can withstand that pressure.

At the other extreme from these agencies are those which are now earnestly seeking ways by which they can modify the limitations set by bequests and charters to help children stay with their own mothers. Pensylvania now has several notable examples of orphanages which are extending mothers' assistance instead of taking children away from their homes to fill impressive looking institutions.

Administration of Poor Relief.

How is public charity administered in Pennsylvania? The laws underlying public outdoor relief, while technically the concern of another commission, are so intimately involved in the whole system of provision for the care of dependent children that the Children's Commission could not ignore them under its mandate to look into the provision and practices for dependent children. Outdoor relief is historically the oldest form of public child care, and financially of great importance in Pennsylvania.

Of the total of 56,000 persons who according to the State Department of Welfare, received outdoor relief in 1922, about 35,000 persons were classed as "children," i.e. under sixteen years of age. It is thus apparent that public outdoor relief is one of the major operators in this field.

Whatever faults may be found with it, it should be said for public outdoor relief that it does in the main, help children in their families rather than as individuals, and as such it embodies one fundamentally good principle of modern philanthropic work. In its adherence to this principle it may be said to reflect what the great mass of people regard as the form that public charity should take.

Broadly speaking, the principal defect of the administration of the poor law lies in its extreme diffusion of responsibility. The administration of outdoor relief at present is lodged in the authorities of nearly 600 poor districts in the 67 counties of the state. Inasmuch as there are usually several overseers or guardians of the poor in each district the number of officials commissioned to make provision for dependent children through poor relief numbers approximately 1,250. This evil is found in its most aggravated form in those parts of the state where the township system prevails. The number of officials in one county exceeds 100. In every instance these officials administer the law without active and continuous supervision from any higher source. This means that those crucial decisions in each individual case: first, as to whether there is genuine need; second, as to whether the resources of the state, such as workmen's compensation, mothers' assistance, etc., are being utilized; third, as to the best plan for expending poor relief funds to provide care for the child;—these crucial decisions are left to an unsupervised, unstandardized group of personnel. The inspectional powers of the State Board of Charities, and lately the State Department of Welfare, which will be discussed later, are not broad enough at present to enable the Department to supervise constantly and to enforce standards of work.

The problem of poor relief in Pensylvania involves finding a form of organization that will make possible the employment of people competent to make decisions in individual cases which will be in harmony with broad, general public policies for the reduction of dependency, and with the technical requirements of providing a form of child care, when children must be taken away from their own families, that will ensure the kind of up-bringing upon which good citizenship is based. It is thinkable that with the more thoroughgoing application of preventive measures and of the measures of social justice, such as workmens' compensation, that the volume of poor relief will be materially reduced, and can be organized easily on a county basis with the employment of specially trained and highly qualified personnel.

It is understood by the Children's Commission that the Commission to Codify and Revise the Poor Laws will offer suggestions at this session of the Legislature which seek to remedy the larger defects of the system. When this has been accomplished, the problems involved in the particular methods of child care employed by poor relief officers can better be submitted to examination and study.

Judicial Provisions for Dependent Children.

Beside the channels which have been enumerated for meeting the needs of dependent children, i.e. compensation, mother's assistance and outdoor relief, there is another public provision for caring for dependent children. This is through the juvenile courts.

It is a well established fact that juvenile delinquency is closely related to those adverse conditions of childhood which attend extreme poverty and dependency. There was, therefore, a desire to recognize this close relationship when the early juvenile court legislation was enacted. The Pennsylvania Act of 1903 states that the juvenile court is to have "full and exclusive jurisdiction in all proceedings affecting the treatment and control of dependent, neglected, incorrigible and delinquent children, under the age of sixteen years;" and for the purpose of this act the words "dependent child" and "neglected child" "shall mean any child who is destitute, homeless, abandoned or dependent upon the public for support, or who has not proper parental care and guardianship". Any citizen, resident of the county may present a petition setting forth that a child is neglected, dependent or delinquent and is in need of the care and protection of the court. If the court so decides, the child henceforth assumes the status of a dependent child and provision is made for his maintenance. This cost is borne from public funds either appropriated by or to the county commissioners or through the use of the power of mandamus by the courts.

Private charities overburdened with appeals have turned to the courts as a way of securing help from public resources. Appeals to the courts are often made by the child's own parents or relatives. In Philadelphia and many other counties of the state these children are committed to institutions and child placing agencies with orders on the county for their board. One juvenile court has followed the procedure at times of declaring the child a public dependent and committing him back to his parents and relatives, with an order on the county for the child's suport. The Allegheny County Juvenile Court places children in families and pays their board. Its home finding department has as many as 1,100 children in foster homes.

The extent of these operations may be better seen when it is known that in Allegheny County the cost of maintaining the juvenile court charges amounts to more than $300,000 per year and in Philadelphia County to more than $700,000. For 1925 Philadelphia appropriated $800,000 and Allegheny County $340,000. This amount for two counties alone exceeds the state's entire appropriation for mothers' assistance for a year by several hundred thousand dollars.

Thus there has come into existence through the judicial system another large public agency for child care which duplicates at many points the duties of other constituted authorities for the care of dependent children and involve the courts in administrative functions which have little or no relationship to the primary function of the court, namely the determining of custody and status. A confusion of government has resulted which has interfered with the development of the administrative agencies as well as with the primary function of the judicial process. Some courts in Pennsylvania maintain for the limited number of children who come before them what amounts to a separate system of mothers' pension, a separate system of child placement, and a separate system of poor relief to board children in institutions.

The way in which people are availing themselves of this new route to the public treasury is seen in the following figures. In 1922 there were 1,023 petitions to the Philadelphia Juvenile Court to declare children public dependents. Of these, 601 petitions were filed by the father, mother, or relative of the child; 380 were filed by social agencies and the remainder by other officials and persons. Thus it will be seen that nearly 60% of these petitions came straight from the families themselves. More interesting even than these are new petitions in neglect cases. Of 885 new petitions in neglect cases in 1922, nearly half (415) were filed by fathers, mothers and relatives, while 392 were filed by social agencies. (Municipal Court Report 1922 p. 125)

Thus it can and does happen that applicants for assistance can go from one public agency to another to tap the public treasury. Without careful and painstaking investigation some can be securing public aid from several sources, while others more in need suffer while they await their turn. It is well known that in some communities, families in need are well aware of the situation and go where the most is to be obtained.

The supposition that a relaxation from the rigorous forms of the criminal law in the treatment of Juvenile delinquency and a jurisdiction which takes a parental attitude toward the child necessarily implies a growth of administrative machinery equipped actually and directly to meet every exigency in child care, would seem to be unwarranted and not in harmony with the orderly development of public administration. The problems of poverty are vast and intricate. The multiplication of uncoordinated agencies doling out money has never been found to furnish any clues to their solution.

Other Public Provisions for the Care of Dependent Children.

In addition to the public activities for the care of dependent children which have been here reviewed, there remain the publicly supported children's institutions under county commissioners; the publicly subsidized private institutions, and the publicly subsidized child placing agencies, all of which on their own initiative are free to admit children to care. Private institutions and private child placing agencies may accept the child for care away from his own people. Later they may put a part of the burden of his support on the public through court orders for this board made upon the counties or through agreement with the poor relief officials. As a result of this multiplicity of institutions and agencies which may accept a child for care and secure public funds for at least part of its support, it will be immediately seen that at no point in our social system, is the stream of children coming upon the public for total or partial support viewed as a whole.

It is estimated that the agencies and institutions caring for dependent children away from their families in 1923 cost the community $10,000,000. Public funds filter out in many ways and nowhere is there a totalling of these expenditures. Only through the most elaborate research would it be possible to split accurately the $10,000,000 into the amount of money spent annually from public funds and that from private sources for the care of dependent children in this state.

Thus we find a heterogeneous mass of activities, which are by no means uniformly pointed towards the objectives: first, of maintaining and strengthening the relationship of parent and child upon which our legal and social system is based; and second, where these relationships are broken, of providing for those children in a way which insures, so far as that can now be accomplished, the welfare of the children. The first great need of Pennsylvania is for some magnetizing force which will have sufficient power to prevent grave abuses and which will exercise a wise leadership in bringing all child caring institutions, especially those in whole or in part supported by the public, into a position where their activities will be focused upon these principal objectives.

Supervision of Admission Necessary.

The crux of the whole question of care for dependent, and for that matter, for other types of children, rests on the wisdom exercised and arrangements made at the time of their admission to the agency. In the absence of a wise and thorough study and understanding of the child and its family in the instance of each application, many costly mistakes are bound to occur and the most misleading theories as to what is the actual situation are bound to be advanced.

From the experience gained through study of intake on the part of agencies caring for dependent children, such as have been made in cities like Cleveland and New York and recently in Harrisburg, it is safe to infer that a large number of children are separated from their own families for reasons which will not bear examination. Frequently those separations cover long periods of time, and in instance after instance at an expenditure of charitable funds amounting to thousands of dollars.

Where the separation of children from their families, known as admission work by child placing agencies, is done carelessly there ensues a series of very evil consequences. The family, which is much more effective as a means of giving children all that they need, than any substitute which we have as yet devised, is thereby endangered, if not actually destroyed. Children are removed from home influences and placed under foster care influences, which in many cases, are at the best negative, and at the worst, intellectually and morally degrading. Funds coming both from public and private sources are expended without real achievement, without thought as to the ultimate results, and in disregard of the fact that certain welfare agencies, both public or private, whose objective is an efficient protection of family life, have wholly inadequate resources to meet their almost overwhelming demands.

Although under Article XX, Section 2002, of the Revised Code 1923, the State Department of Welfare has authority to supervise all institutions and agencies except juvenile courts caring for dependent as well as other types of children, it has no power to deal in a broad general way with this large problem of dependency.

There is a distinct need in this state for a legal requirement that all institutions, public and private, incorporated and unincorporated, keep a record showing at least a minimum of information regarding the admission and disposition of children accepted by them.

Your Commission would consider it an achievement if it could in any way convey to the public an understanding of the danger to the children and of the waste of the charitable resources of the community which result from indiscriminate acceptance of children for care by agencies unequipped or disinclined to investigate and study the real situation which lies back of the immediate appeal for assistance.

Care of Dependent Children no Longer a Matter of Private Charity.

To give a certain perspective to the view of present conditions in the care of dependent children it is necessary to refer to the findings of the report of the State Dependent's Commission of 1915. Regarding dependent and delinquent children, that report sets forth that "the dependents, who are not delinquent, are cared for chiefly by private charities aided by certain public and semi-public bodies with jurisdiction and authority to act in the premises. The methods of commitment, care and maintenance differ, as do the methods of more permanent treatment for support until the children reach the age of employment. The private institutions which care for dependent children are numerous, their aims are most praiseworthy, but their means of support are very uncertain. They are, however, managed in a humane manner and certainly without undue extravagance, so far as salaries are concerned." "There are at least twenty thousand dependent and delinquent children in Pennsylvania, and their present care and future development are matters of pressing and grave concern to the Commonwealth from a financial, moral and economic standpoint. The state should make provision for its management under a system of supervision that would not discourage private philanthropy from carrying on the good and necessary work it has done so generously for many years, but so standardize and supervise it as to promote efficiency and economy and produce better permanent results."

Do the conditions implied in these statements still prevail? Can it still be said that the care of dependent children rests largely on private charity? And is the principal method of care still assumed to be in institutions?

Your Commission is of the opinion that a board and comprehensive view of the present situation will reveal that great changes have occurred within the last ten years which give an entirely different complexion to the problem. This view can be obtained by canvassing and listing the known facts regarding the present sources of support of dependent and semi-dependent children and the methods of their care.

Although your Commission was not able to make either a census or a survey of the dependent or semi-dependent children of the state, a body of information is available which, while it leaves much to be desired from the standpoint of statistical completeness and absolute accuracy, is nevertheless, in the opinion of your Commission, indicative of the real situation in the state.

Number of Dependent Children Receiving Assistance in their own Homes.

Enough has already been said to indicate the extent of mothers' assistance now helping 12,060 children through its county units, outdoor relief which reaches an estimated 35,000 children in the course of a year and the unknown, but undoubtedly large number of families who would be charges on the community were it not for workmen's compensation.

In addition to those forms of aid there is the assistance extended by the societies, formerly known as associated charities, now generally referred to as family welfare societies and home service sections of the American Red Cross. Your Commission has communicated with these private agencies, in so far as it could secure a list of them, and inquired regarding the number of families, together with the number of children involved, receiving financial assistance on July 1, 1924. Replies to these inquiries indicate that not less than 5,000 families and 15,000 children are thus helped each year.

For Philadelphia and Pittsburgh with a combined population in 1920 of 2,412,122 of the state's total of 8,720,017 there were reported 2,210 families with a total of 7,578 children receiving assistance in July 1924—a time of year when calls upon relief agencies are comparatively light. Information received from Scranton, Erie, Uniontown and other places indicate that the smaller communities also have in their proportion the families who must have some form of assistance to tide them over the crises and misfortunes that befall them.

In addition to these other forms of aid, there are the day nurseries which care for children while their mothers are at work. Sixty-one nurseries in the state were helping 2,300 children in July 1924.

While there is undoubtedly some overlapping in these various groups, there seems to be no question but that at least 47,000 children are receiving mothers' assistance and outdoor relief, and that at least 15,000 are receiving help through the private charitable societies, and the day nurseries. These 62,000 children should be grouped together with the many thousands either receiving compensation directly upon the death of the parent or through the fathers or mothers who have been injured as those receiving assistance in their own homes.

The size of this group of children is sobering in the light of the necessity for reaching more effectively the causes of dependency. It is gratifying that in so large a number of instances ways and means have been developed for helping children in and through their families.

That institutions are the principal method of care can no longer be assumed.

That private charity is carrying the load likewise no longer is true.

Number of Dependent Children away from Their Own Homes; in Institutional Care.

The Bureau of Children, State Department of Welfare, on July 10, 1924, secured a census from 212 public and private institutions of the state caring for children. The results showed a total population of about 16,300. Of these, 14,100 were in 162 institutions maintained solely under private auspices, 200 were in 8 county children's homes, 1,882 were in 38 state aided institutions for dependent children and 206 were in 4 state aided institutions caring for both adults and children. State aid to the 38 institutions taking only children amounts to about $125,000 a year. These figures do not include the institutions for the dependent blind and deaf and the 200 children in the Scotland School for Soldiers' Orphans. Thus it becomes apparent that the state subsidies to children's institutions reached institutions caring for only about 12.7 per cent of the children now receiving institutional care.

The 14,100 children in the non-state aided private children's homes must by no means be considered as maintained solely by private charity. The contributions of the relatives and the families of some of these children amount to appreciable sums in the aggregate. Some children are placed in these institutions by the poor law authorities and their board is paid from poor relief funds. In 1922 reports from the poor boards show an expenditure of $175,000 for the board of children. In other cases the children are committed by juvenile courts and orders are made upon the counties for their board. A large proportion of the $800,000 appropriated in Philadelphia for 1925 for juvenile court charges will be paid as board for the institutional care of children. It is therefore, apparent that, were it possible to analyze carefully the sources of support for the 14,000 children in private institutions, it would undoubtedly be found that private charity, especially that secured currently and not supplied by endowment, no longer ranks in importance as a factor even in the institutional care of dependent children as it did apparently ten years ago.

Number of Dependent Children in Foster Homes.

The census of the wards of child placing societies made by the Bureau of Children, State Department of Welfare, July 10, 1924, together with some additional facts gathered elsewhere shows that at least 9,618 children are receiving foster home care.

The accurate division of the placed out chidlren into the group under the state aided agencies and those under the private agencies is at present impossible. This is due to the fact that one large state aided agency has a number of member agencies and the state aid given to the central organization is apportioned to the member societies. The Bureau of Children, Department of Welfare, which has tried to secure accurate figures, classifies the children under the supervision of the branches as belonging to the non-state aided group. The resulting figures are as follows:

Under care of state aided agencies	1,946
Under care of non-state aided agencies	6,572
Total	8,518

Had it been possible to secure facts regarding the children placed directly in foster homes by children's institutions, by poor relief authorities, and by juvenile courts other than Allegheny and to aid them to the total, it probably would have been considerably larger and the proportion of children cared for by state aided agencies proportionately smaller.

The 55 non-state aided child placing agencies classified as non-state aided were taking care of 6,572 children, of whom 1,706 were in free homes and 785 were temporarily in shelters, hospitals, etc. The remainder were in boarding homes.

The Allegheny County Juvenile Court maintains a system of foster home care which provides for about 1,100 children.

Total Population of Dependent and Semi-dependent Children in Pennsylvania.

Facts showing an aggregate of 90,000 dependent and semi-dependent children in Pennsylvania can thus be easily brought together. A systematic and careful accounting for all the minors receiving material help of sustantial proportions from the great numbers of public and private agencies in this state in the course of a year would undoubtedly show a total in excess of a hundred thousand, exclusive of compensation cases. At least two thirds of these receive support by some route from the public treasury.

Some Popular Misconceptions.

It is a curious situation in Pennsylvania that although public and private assistance reaches at least 74,000 children in their own or in foster homes, institutional care which provides for but 16,000 is still regarded by a great mass of people as the chief means by which dependent children are provided with care and up-bringing. The popular misconception regarding the proportion between the children assisted in their own homes and those cared for in institutions is explained perhaps by the fact that, while the number of children in institutions is small in comparison with the children otherwise cared for, it is unduly large in comparison with similar provisions made in other states, and that the number of institutions is large and their presence very evident. This seems to be sufficient to create the impression in the mind of the public that the normal way to take care of a dependent child is in some kind of orphanage. The real situation can perhaps be better understood when the costs of even poor institutional care are remembered. If it is now costing $10,000,000 annually to take care of 26,000 children away from their own homes, it can readily be seen that a system of institutional care which would provide for all of the dependent and semi-dependent children would completely overwhelm all of the charitable resources of Pennsylvania, both public and private.

There is nothing mysterious about this lowered cost to the state and private charity of caring for children with their own families. The explanation lies in the fact that by this method it is possible to utilize all the resources of help from other members of the family who co-operate in keeping a home together. Mothers' assistance, for instance, forms only one part of the family's actual budget. The other part usually comes from the earnings of older unmarried children, from wage earning grandparents, uncles and aunts who board with the family and from the earnings of the mother herself. In a small number of instances where none of these resources are available, the deficit in the budget is met by private charity. Moreover a stipend to the parent will purchase more service for the child than could be secured through the employment of other people to take care of it.

State Subsidies to Child Caring Agencies and Institutions.

Pennsylvania throughout the country is known as a subsidy state. For a great many years it has been appropriating increasingly large sums to certain children's agencies generally selected by chance and so far as numbers are concerned, representing as has been shown above, only a small minority of the total number of children's institutions and placing out societies in operation and a very small proportion of the children cared for. State aided institutions care for but 2,200 dependent children and agencies classified as state aided about 1,950 children of the possible 100,000. Making allowance for the fact that the agency group probably should be larger, it is still clear that the state spends $165,000 annually on the encouragement of institutions and agencies which are reaching a small proportion of the dependent children of the state. These facts coupled with the further circumstances that until the last Legislature the appropriations or subsidies had been made without any reference to what was being done or left undone for the children, or conditions under which they were admitted for care, indicate the utter futility of looking to this method for a solution of the problems of dependent children and of expending wisely the state's resources.

While there is no question but that these state appropriations have in certain localities helped to meet certain pressing immediate problems in the matter of care for the small group of children represented it is equally true that other localities have been almost completely neglected.

With a system of doles of this kind from the public treasury, there is a definite stimulus and encouragement to break up the resources available for the solution of a public problem and to parcel them out in small amounts to an ever increasing number of would-be dispensers of the public charity. The history of public subsidies in Pennsylvania shows that they were granted to all types of children's agencies including agencies under sectarian control, even when this was a clear violation of the constitutional provision bearing on this point, and recently pronounced such by a decision of the Supreme Court.

The total picture of the operation of the subsidy system up to 1923 has been chaotic, disorganized, and lacking any reasoned and well thought out objective. Money spent through a hit or miss collection of units poorly supervised until a recent date, has been pretty much wasted so far as achieving a wise and sound program of child welfare either on the part of the state or on the part of the different counties making up the state.

Private Agencies Receive Public Funds Through Various Channels.

In a number of instances in the state, agencies under private auspices receive: (1) a state grant, (2) orders on the county for children committed to them by the juvenile court, (3) remittances for the board of children received from a city department of public welfare or from county or township boards of overseers. This represents three different streams of public funds which existing legislation fails to correlate or organize. Although regarded by the community as private charities some agencies make it a practice to accept few children for care unless they come on commitment from the juvenile court or an order from an overseer of the poor or other public official.

Some agencies receiving all three forms of public support are thus largely financed by the public funds. It may well be asked whether in this situation in which the public is now furnishing in some instances two dollars for one raised privately, the private contributions represent a slight relief to tax payers, already bearing the brunt of the burden, or does this situation result from the survival of forms of which the content is now very different from what is was in the days when private initiative occupied this field. These private agencies receiving public funds in these various ways have been found by the Bureau of Children of the State Department of Welfare and by various private groups who have studied their work from time to time, to exhibit a wide range of standards of work and of objectives.

Unincorporated Agencies Receive Public Funds for Care of Dependent Children.

The Pennsylvania law provides for the incorporation of any group which wishes to operate for the purpose of helping or caring for children. In this state, however, as is true of other states, many unincorporated groups are in operation, and in certain instances, they care for a large number of children who are actually wards of the public. Some unincorporated societies receive children on commitment and only on commitment through the juvenile courts. Although they may be deriving practically all of their support from the public they are singularly irresponsible in their form of organization.

State Supervision of all Child Caring Agencies.

There is a growing body of law in many states for the licensing or certification of child caring agencies by a state authority. In Pennsylvania provision is made only for an annual inspection and supervision of these by the State Department of Welfare which is at present not sufficiently staffed to carry out even this restricted function adequately.

With the passage of the new State Code, the powers and duties of the State Department of Welfare in reference to children and other types of dependents are clearly defined and there is very definite improvement over the general haziness characterizing earlier legislation both with reference to the old State Board of Charities and the 1921 act creating the Department of Welfare.

The Administrative Code of 1923, Article XX, Section 2002, sets forth the clear intent to subject to inspection every agency, public or private, whether institutional or child placing, and all of its departments, that may receive into care either adults or children for such treatment as comes properly within the function of a child welfare agency. Exception is made, however, of the activities of persons "in the regular employ of the court," who, as has been seen are often carrying on activities identical with those carried on by other public agencies and by private societies. Moreover, there is not provided any method for curtailing the activities of supervised agencies deemed for any reason to be harmful by the State Department other than that provided in the Act of March 5, 1903. This directs the State Board of Public Charities each year to prepare a list of agencies and institutions which filed an annual report and to send copies to the judges empowered to commit children to these agencies and institutions. No child is to be committed to an agency not on this list.

While your Commission is of the opinion that the care of dependent children in Pennsylvania will be systematized and made intelligent by educational means rather than coercive measures, it is also of the opinion that there should be legal measures for the suppression of activities which are grossly dangerous to children, even when these are carried on under the name of charity. There are cases, happily not many, in which educational methods are wholly ineffective. Where there is a deliberate mercenary attempt to exploit the public sympathy for children, where there is a deliberate attempt to exploit children themselves under the guise of caring for them, where people wholly unfitted by character, reputation or education evince a determination for various reasons sometimes unselfish, often fanatical, to operate in this field, methods of education must be supplemented with something a little more in the nature of legal power of restraint. It is unquestionably a fact that almost anybody can by one means or another now secure a collection of children and use them for various purposes. We can no more depend solely on methods of education in this field than we can in any other where life and property are to be protected.

The State Department of Welfare can and does accomplish a great deal in standarizing upward the children's and the supervised institutions subject to its inspection. But it can never do what should be done until it is endowed with more power and until certain forms of dealing with dependent children are definitely outlawed.

A thorough and adequate supervision and inspection service on the part of a state agency with power to impose penalties where abuses are found to exist coupled with a refusal to correct them, and also the power to prosecute for the revocation of charters in those instances where it is found that the institutions or agencies in question represent such a complete failure to comply with the law or meet reasonable standards of work as to make it unwise for them to continue in operation, are possible ways of attacking this problem.

Your Commission urges that the experience of the twenty-seven states which have some form of licensing or certification of child welfare agencies receive careful study with a view to providing the state with suitable powers for curtailing harmful activity in this field.

Your Commission is not prepared at this time to recommend that a requirement should be made upon all child caring agencies that they should be licensed before they would be allowed to operate. It is, however, of the opinion that ways and means should be found for making it the duty of state and local authorities to secure information about, and to close institutions and agencies which are patently endangering the physical, intellectual or moral welfare of any child in their custody.

The staff of the Bureau of Children of the Department of Welfare since the reorganization of the Department, has done admirable work, but the size and extent of the problem of child welfare in Pennsylvania and the fact that as a state, we are still very far behind many other states in regard to children's welfare, seems to make a considerable increase in personnel a necessity. An annual visit and inspection may be all that is needed with certain agencies. With others it may be wholly inadequate. Moreover, problems as to policy and interpretation arising out of the admission work of all the children's agencies in the state, present a total volume of work which cannot be efficiently or speedily handled unless there is a sufficient and adequate personnel.

The incorporation of social agencies is now handled through the county courts. Under the Pennsylvania practice it is not required that before issuance of articles of incorporation, the approval of the Department of Welfare must be secured. This would seem to be another point for study and possible action.

Some Outstanding Feature of Institutional Care in Pennsylvania.

Considering the group of institutions under private auspices as having in care the larger number of dependent children away from their families, some of the outstanding facts regarding them should be noted.

A brief analysis of the facts given in the section on institutions for dependent children of the Directory of Children's Institutions, issued by the State Department of Welfare, shows a total of 191. This does not include the institutions for incorrigible or delinquent children, nor the maternity homes.

Of this list of 191 institutions, 85 are given as non-sectarian, 83 as sectarian, 9 are institutions of fraternal organizations and 14 could not be classified from the data there available. What constitutes a sectarian organization is not always clear. An institution run under the auspices of a church organization and limiting its service to its own membership, is obviously sectarian. An institution which is managed under the auspices of a church organization but extends service without reference to creed is a less clear case, while a church organization, owning the property, but inviting persons of other creeds to sit on the board of managers and extending service to all creeds is still another remove from straight sectarianism. Those organizations which limit their services to persons designated as "Protestant" are another variety of sectarianism. Until there is a very precise definition of the forms of management and control which shall be regarded as sectarian, it is of course, impossible to classify these institutions accurately. The figures given above are an attempt to divide them on a somewhat commonsense idea of a sectarian or a non-sectarian organization. Thus it will be seen that the number of sectarian about equals the number of non-sectarian institutions.

On the basis of age and sex the situation seems to be that 139 will take both sexes. Of these, 12 are for infants and very young children only; 127 are for older children but minimum age of admission may be anywhere from birth to six years or even older. The upper age limit for admission very often is fixed at twelve years. There are 16 institutions exclusively for boys and 25 for girls. In 11 instances there were not sufficient facts to classify.

The Congregate Type of Institution Still Being Built.

Institutional care in Pennsylvania is essentially a congregate type of care with a few outstanding exceptions. There have been few institutions built in Pennsylvania within the last ten years that may be said to conform to the modern principles pertaining to institutional architecture, which stipulate what is now generally known as the cottage type or plan with a grouping in each cottage of not more than twenty or twenty-five children. The objectives of home life and individual attention and education begin to grow very distant when the number of children per cottage exceeds fifteen.

Institutions Caring for Babies and Young Children.

From the standpoint of health there has been increasing agreement on the part of pediatricians and social workers that permanent institutional care, while acceptable for older children, should be entirely discontinued for those under three. The state has witnessed, however, further congregate institutional provision for the care of babies, and in practically each instance in units for fifty to seventy-five children.

Among Pennsylvania's many institutions for children there are first those specializing in the care for children under three or four. These are the so-called infant asylums or homes. Some are run independently of maternity homes. Others are run as adjuncts of maternity homes. The greater number of the mothers delivered in these institutions are unmarried. It is the custom of some of these maternity homes to operate not only in the field of institutional care of the mother and baby but also to secure placement for the child. Sometimes they co-operate with agencies placing infants in foster families. Others place the babies directly with people who apply directly to them.

Certain maternity homes in the state build up their employed personnel almost entirely from young unmarried mothers with their babies who are sent by co-operating hospitals to these homes. In this way a certain number of babies are cared for under the direct supervision of their mothers, but are counted as part of the population of the institution sheltering them. It is never quite clear whether the child is in the custody of, or is supported by, the employed mother or by the institution.

Very great pressure is put upon any agency specializing in the care of babies to take children whose parents are unmarried, and this holds true for the infant homes. The whole question of separating parent and child in its most acute form confronts them as well as the question of providing a safe method of what later drifts into abandonment. In some instances the mother completely surrenders her child at the time of its acceptance by the institution and gives to the institution final authority to make such disposition as the executive or board of managers deems fit. In certain instances the mother makes a payment at the time of the acceptance of her baby which is supposed to cover the cost of its maintenance up to the time of adoption.

Frequently babies are placed in these institutions by the mothers with a promise to pay board regularly. Where the mother fails to carry out the terms of this agreement it is the practice to assume that failure to provide support for the period of a year gives the institution the authority to place the child through adoption. There are a number of instances in which the mother is under an agreement stipulating that this period shall be six months instead of twelve, and the same penalty attaches for failure to pay. This practice does not conform to a strict and scrupulous interpretation of the present adoption laws.

The commercial maternity home is another element in this complicated situation.

It is becoming more and more clear that one of the great sources of dependent children thrown upon the public for permanent support lies in the unwise and ill-advised early separation of parent and child. In several states measures have been taken to minimize it especially when the institution or agency couples its acceptance of the child with the payment of a fee of any kind. One of the ways which have been employed to meet this situation is the recent enactment in Maryland which makes it unlawful to separate a child of six months from his mother to place him in an institution or a foster home, except on a certificate signed by two physicians to the effect that the separation is necessary, on court order, or on consent of the State Board of Aid and Charities. A Massachusetts statute dating from 1892 specifies that "Whoever for hire, gain or reward receives an infant under two years of age for the purpose of placing it under the control of any other person shall be guilty of aiding and abetting the abandonment of such infant and shall be punished by a fine of not more than two hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not more than two years."

Institutions Caring for Older Children.

Another type of institution takes boys and girls between the ages of three and four and keeps them on up through early adolescence, usually counted as beginning at the end of the twelfth year. These institutions will usually receive only those children who present no obvious physical or mental problems. These conform to the classification of dependents in its strictest interpretation.

A large majority of the institutions listed in the Directory of Children's Institutions as caring for both boys and girls up to twelve or fourteen years follow the common practice of tapering off when it comes to accepting boys over ten, and frequently of accepting girls over the maximum age. In several instances the fixed maximum age for admitting boys is very low. It is not unusual to find that it ends with the tenth or eleventh year. A typical requirement of this kind will specify "boys 6-10, girls 6-16." This is done partly because the conduct problems appearing in older boys when both sexes are accepted are apt to be quite obvious and also because girls are much more useful in meeting the domestic needs of the institution.

There are many institutions which by reason of their charters or long established policy, often dictated by bequests from original donors, limit their intake to one sex exclusively. There are, for instance, 16 institutions exclusively for boys and 25 for girls. This frequently makes it necessary for children to be separated from brothers and sisters who must be placed in different institutions or be cared for by other methods. Unless unusual care is exercised, these arbitrary rules of admission make it almost impossible to keep the members of the family together or even in touch with each other.

Institutional Care of Orphans.

Certain of the institutions are limited strictly to orphans, whole or half. Others, calling themselves orphanages, are not prohibited from accepting children one or both of whose parents are living. Where this is the case, usually the proportion of orphans is small. Due to lack of information with reference to parental condition, no one in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania knows exactly how many whole or half orphans there are in the total population of dependent children either in the care of institutions or of child placing agencies. The lack of specific information on this point, and likewise adequate publicity setting forth the actual facts, lead many charitable people to bequeath enormous sums for the care of orphans, a group which they feel still represents a very large and difficult problem to be met only through a continuance and an extension of institutional care, frequently on a congregate basis. Wherever data pertaining to parental condition of dependent children have been gathered, it is shown that out of the total number of dependent children in the community, the whole and half orphans combined average a relatively small proportion of the group. Moreover, these children are peculiarly in demand for foster parents.

Needs of Adolescent Children.

Children who become dependent at the age of twelve years and over—and there are many such cases arising throughout the whole Commonwealth in any given year—receive comparatively little attention. This seems especially strange when it is recognized that if institutions have anything of special value to contribute it is probably in the care of adolescent children. Where they are given care, it very generally fails to meet the special educational needs of adolescent children, particularly of those who have seriously suffered from the lack of reasonably adequate schooling during their early years. While many institutions will keep those children whom they admitted in early childhood through adolescence, they will not admit an adolescent child. Sometimes even when he has younger brothers and sisters who are taken into care.

Where institutional provision is made for the older children, it is specifically for them and involves the separation from younger brothers and sisters. This practice of distributing to different institutions children from the same family runs all through child caring work. The effects of it on the children themselves demand a consideration and study which have not been given saving in a very few instances.

A Projected Program of Public Institutional Care.

Although institutional care of children is extensively practiced in Pennsylvania it is singular that the state itself does not operate, and is not authorized to operate a public institution for the care of dependent children as is done in several states. A possible precedent for such care may be found in the authority given to the State Department of Public Instruction in the Act of May 27, 1921, P. L. 1200. Authority is given for the building and maintenance by the State Department of a state school for habitual truants and a specific appropriation is named to initiate the school. This institution is to provide for what are commonly called "conduct cases" arising in certain school districts, inadequately provided with agencies for the care and treatment of different children. Fortunately the State Department has not taken action. Provision for such a school would mean a further complication in the care of dependent children, for while truancy is a definite offense against the law, the conditions which induce it are the same as those producing simple dependency in so many other cases.

The Philadelphia Department of Public Welfare, through one of its bureaus, conducts a temporary shelter for dependent children, especially those in the younger age groups.

It is well known that in former years the semi-state institutions for delinquent children often had to admit children who were committed solely on the grounds that they were dependent, homeless or neglected even though it was prohibited in the Juvenile Court Act (Sec. 16) of April 23, 1903. Such practices are, happily, not as prevalent as they were but they are still of too frequent occurrence. If, however, local institutions are developed, the tendency would undoubtedly prevail to use them as local dumping grounds for all sorts of unfortunate children.

Eight county homes provide institutional care for indigent children. These homes are usually operated by the county commissioners but they must be "remote from any almshouse or poor house and entirely disconnected from the same, and under separate management from the keeper of the poor house" (Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 1030). These county homes give both temporary and long time care to dependent and neglected children.

Laws dating from 1883 have prohibited the keeping of children from two to sixteen years old in almshouses except under certain conditions. A survey made in 1923 revealed that these laws were not being rigorously lived up to. Not only these violations of the law have been called to the attention of this Commission[1] but that equally important group of children over the age of sixteen who can now lawfully be admitted to almshouses to begin a life of pauperism.

It was suggested to your Commission that every child between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one who comes to an almshouse is a candidate for sometimes more than almshouse care if the public is to be protected from great expense and the child is to be protected from a life to which few citizens would deliberately sentence him.

Several attempts have been made to create county schools for the care and training of juvenile court charges. These efforts began in May 1909 and culminated in the Act of July 5, 1917, which provides for farm schools in the counties to take care of children committed by the juvenile courts. This act is permissive and applies to any county in the state. The schools are to be erected at the discretion of the county commissioners, upon the approval of the common pleas judges. These must be farm schools, must embody certain features such as the cottage plan, and must have at least one woman on the board of managers if girls are admitted. The county commissioners are empowered to provide one such school for boys, another for girls or one school for both sexes.

Since by the Act of April 23, 1903, the juvenile court is given full jurisdiction in actions affecting the treatment and control of dependent and neglected as well as incorrigible and delinquent children, such schools could easily become the refuge of the first and second classes as well as the third and fourth, provided only that dependents and delinquents were not sent to the same school.

By the acts of May 11, 1921, and May 20, 1921, county commissioners are empowered to provide homes for indigent children and industrial homes for the care and training of children. "A home within the county for the keeping and care of indigent orphans and children dependent upon the public of such county for support," must be preceded by a gift or donation, of unspecified size or amount. When, however, "any property" has been given for this purpose, the commissioners may appropriate for "the support and maintenance of such orphans and children." An industrial home for the care and training of children may be started at any time.

An act of May 16, 1921 provides that county commissioners in counties of the fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth class may provide institutional care for indigent, incorrigible, dependent and neglected children of either sex under sixteen years of age. This law contains many restrictions upon the initiation and operation of these "Children's Homes." These institutions may receive gifts, endowments, legacies, etc.

These numerous recent acts seem to reflect a confusion of plan and to project a program of providing public institutional care for dependents on an extended scale. Your Commission urgently recommends to the Legislature the careful examination of the whole situation before the commitment to such a program becomes crystallized into the form of buildings, endowments and other inflexible elements.

[1] Care of Dependent Children in Twenty-eight Counties as Administered by Poor Law Authorities, a Study made by Abraham Epstein, published by the Child Welfare Division, Public Charities Association of Pennsylvania, 1924.

Relation of Child Placement to Dependency and to Protection of Children.

All activities in the placement of children in foster homes are closely related to the whole problems of controlling dependency and promoting child welfare. Unwise separations of families often creates a dependent condition for the children and the public is called upon to support them after the damage is done. Careless placing often exposes children to hardships, danger and demoralization.

At present anyone in Pennsylvania may engage in this activity. Public and private agencies and many persons in their individual capacities act as go-betweens to hand children along from one custodian to another. In the Commission's study of adoptions in Philadelphia County, there were instances in which children were passed from one person to another with the result that the identity of their parents was lost and there was no one who could be held responsible for their support or treatment.

The use of indenture still persists in this state as a method of securing care for dependent children.

Public Child Placing Agencies.

A very large number of public authorities may place children in foster homes. The placement and supervision of children in families is a power conferred on the overseers of the poor and under certain circumstances, on county commissioners. The acts of June 13, 1883, P. L. 111 and of May 20, 1921, P. L. 1030, require that such children placed by overseers of the poor shall be visited at least once every six months. The Act of June 13, 1836, provides for the indenturing of poor children by the poor law authorities.

Officials of juvenile courts may likewise place and supervise dependent children in private homes. As has been mentioned, the Allegheny County Juvenile Court performs an extensive service of this kind. On the other hand, state subsidies to private agencies and commitments by courts and other public authorities have put the whole group of child placing agencies in a position in which their activities may be regarded as semi-public.

The Act of May 25, 1878, permits all corporations for "friendless" or "destitute" children to bind out and provide suitable homes for children committed to their charge when maintenance is unprovided for by their parents or guardians.

Several Kinds of Child Placing Agencies.

While foster family care for children has been described as "the next best substitute to be offered to the child when it is forced to leave its own home," there is no questioning the statement that in many instances the foster care as given in Pennsylvania has been on such a low plane as to offer every conceivable argument for the extension and development of institutional types of care. This has not been due to inherent defects in the plan of foster family care for dependent children, but has been almost entirely due to the very low standards of the work and to the inelastic methods and practices which have been followed. The leaders in the child welfare field, where they have had opportunity to do their best work, have on various occasions shown what could be done in perfecting the foster family side of child welfare work. The results have more than justified the extension of this method. They have likewise clearly recognized the part which institutional care must play for an indefinite period in the welfare work of this country.

The child placing organizations of the state are by no means united as to the methods of work which they follow. The personnel of some is almost exclusively made up of volunteers operating on a district plan and coming together through special representatives from time to time for the exchange of opinions and experiences.

Another type of agency claims membership in a national association of child placing organizations, and along with most of its associates in other states, limits its intake to children who are most likely to be adopted.

There is still a third group, largely operating in the central and eastern part of the state, which emphasizes the necessity for paid professional staff, greater flexibility in the matter of payment for foster homes, and therefore, the acceptance for care of a much larger number of different types of children.

Child Placing—a Protest against Institutional Care.

There are in operation in the state 57 child placing societies. These societies in their origin, almost without exception, represent a protest movement to the earlier program of wholesale and invariable placement of dependent children in institutions, and particularly to the old congregate mass care type of institution. The movement in the early '80's to get children out of the almshouses had an influence in the development of these societies. This protest movement, as it developed, led to an increasing divergence in interests, types of children cared for, methods of work, principles of care, and other matters between the institutional and child placing groups. In the main it may be said, however, that the same types of children are being cared for in institutions for dependent children as are being cared for by the child placing agencies, with the trend on the part of the latter to specialize in children presenting health or conduct problems or likely to be in need of foster care over a very long period. Another factor in many instances, is the desire to keep brothers and sisters together through placement in the same family.

Both types of work must interplay and neither can find its best expression unless it has developed a harmonious relationship with the other. Both need to see their proper relations to each other, and more particularly their relationship to the great important child welfare activities in operation in the communities. The more carefully both types of agencies operate and function, the more nearly will they be likely to strike their proper place in the welfare machinery of the state. No adequate and sound basis of child care is possible in this, or any state, unless a more harmonious relationship is developed between the two groups of child workers.

Child Placing by Institutions.

It is not entirely accurate to say that all of the Pennsylvania institutions for children strictly and definitely limit their responsibilities for the children while they are actually within the walls of the institution. To an extent as yet not known because the facts are not available some institutions have over a long period engaged in the practice of placing children in foster families of their selection. Frequently these placements are on the indenture basis. Still more frequently, due to the fact that the institution's staff is needed for the purpose of the strictly interpreted institutional work, there are no available workers to supervise the children who have been placed in families. This work is, therefore, done casually by members of the boards of directors, or by volunteer correspondents, frequently irresponsible, who may be living in or near the neighborhood where the children have been placed. When those who are responsible for the management and direction of institutions have come to see what actually does happen to a large number of the children thus given over to various families outside the institution, there is hope for acceptance by the institutional people of the principle that they, like all other people who are aiming really to help children, must see the responsibilities as to care through to something like a proper ending and must recognize that child placing is a delicate, difficult piece of work calling for the active and undivided attention of those who engage in it.

The Use of Free and of Boarding Homes for Children.

In the past the policy of placing children in free homes represented a very large part of the work of child placing agencies. As standards of child welfare have risen, and as standards of foster home finding work have been improved, greater and greater difficulties have been faced in the matter of free home placing, so that this phase of the child placing job in some parts of the state is less extensive than it was even five years ago. This is partly due to agitation against child labor and to our child labor laws. We are also recognizing the child's necessity for recreation and a certain amount of free time. There is a growing conviction that the period during which no child should be held responsible for its own support must be extended, and that for the present, it should be sixteen in all cases, and in many cases eighteen.

It has also come about that as agencies have become more fully informed as to the physical handicaps under which certain children labor, and likewise, as they have developed knowledge of family backgrounds, they could not conscientiously place children in homes which, though free, were wholly incapable of dealing with the child's physical or mental problems. Altogether it has become difficult to shunt children off into places where an excess of domestic or farm work furnished the principal motive for taking in the foster child.

The two state aided child placing agencies report that they had under supervision on July 1, 1924, 939 children in free homes. The non-state aided agencies had 1,706 in free homes.

On the whole, the trends in child placing work in Pennsylvania compare very favorably with those of certain other states which have developed this field of welfare work. The fact that there has been a very generous use of boarding homes has gone far to secure for an appreciable though still far too small a number of children fairly normal conditions and the individual care and attention which only the best equipped and most expensively operated institutions are providing.

The two state aided child placing institutions have 959 children in family boarding homes while the non-state aided institutions have 2,373 children thus placed. To this latter figure should be added the 1,100 children under the Allegheny Juvenile Court. From this somewhat inadequate information it would seem that there are about two children in free homes for three in boarding homes.

Child Placing Agencies Sometimes Handicapped for Handling Various Types of Children.

Child placing agencies can be roughly classified according to their ability to take children presenting a range of problems and circumstances. Where the work is done by a volunteer staff there must of necessity be a strict limiting of intake to those children who, while needing care, will present no special problems of behavior or of physical or mental handicaps.

As indicated, some of these agencies choose for their specialty but one small segment of the group needing care, and the group which presents the fewest difficulties from the standpoint of foster home work.

Many of the child placing agencies are small county organizations with such meager resources that they are forced to limit themselves to the placement of a few types of children. The larger agencies are able to provide a greater variety of skilled services and to place in foster families every type of dependency which is cared for on the institutional basis, and likewise, other types presenting social difficulties in the matter of health or conduct which are frequently regarded as ineligible for admission to the ordinary children's institution. Agencies with adequate staffs and resources are not inherently superior to smaller ones; they do not have opportunity, however, to develop division of labor and to secure the services of specialists for handling difficult problems. Many of the leading child welfare workers have reached the conclusion that there is a mean between the small and poorly equipped agencies and some of the very large child placing agencies of this country. There is a point beyond which an agency becomes unweildy and impersonal with serious loss in conserving the spiritual values of children.

Public Supervision of Child Placement in other States.

The abuses of child placement have been so great that in several states thorough going measures have been taken to bring it under control. Some of the more important of these are the laws of New York, California, Massachusetts and Minnesota.

Only "authorized" agencies are permitted to place out or board out children in New York. An authorized agency is one which is approved, visited, inspected, and supervised by the State Board of Charities, or is a purely public agency dealing directly with children.

In California no society, organization or person can engage in placing children without first securing a permit from the State Board of Charities and Corrections.

In Massachusetts the form of written agreement between a charitable institution and the person taking an abandoned child must be specified by the Department of Public Welfare and a copy of every such agreement must be filed with the Department. All children so placed are subject to visitation by the state authorities.

In Minnesota every placement in a private home must be reported to the State Board of Control, which visits the home within ninety days, decides whether it is a fit home in which the child should remain and thereafter visits the child regularly just as if it had been placed by a state authority. While such detailed supervision by the state may not always seem justifiable, such a law does reflect the modern trend of thought that it is the business of the public to know very specifically what is happening to all of the children of the communitiy who are not with their own parents.

Many states require that every incorporated agency, and in some instances, private individuals as well, taking unrelated children into care must report the name and age of the children to a central state bureau. In some instances it is also required that those who place such children must likewise report to a central state agency as a State Department of Welfare, that they have placed with a certain person or organization, a child, giving his name, age, and address. A striking provision for this latter method is made in the New York law which requires a detailed report from the public official, placing agency, or private individual, regarding the disposition which has been made of a child. (N. Y. L. 1923 Ch. 706)

Licensing of Infant Boarding Houses.

The Act of 1885, P. L. 27, and subsequent acts sought to cope with the old baby farms in which the abuses of foster home care usually secured by the parent himself, reached their height. It provides that unincorporated institutions or agencies who wish to receive, board or keep for hire or reward, infant children under the age of three unaccompanied by an adult caretaker, and who take more than two such children except by court commitment, must be licensed. Provision is made for fine and punishment for failure to comply. In the cities of the second class and for small communities the license can be issued by the mayor or justice of the peace or a magistrate. By Act of June 9, 1911, P. L. 854, in cities of the third class this license can be issued only by the mayor. In cities of the first class provision is made for the handling of such license by the Department of Health. The Pennsylvania act takes no cognizance of families receiving one or two children of the types named or of activities of incorporated agencies or of the boarding of children over three years of age. This was intended to assist in the protection of the children from cruelty and neglect.

There is a growing recognition that if the state wishes to reach the stream of dependent children at its various sources, one of the most important is the infant boarding house in which children are often abandoned or which serve as a way of disposing of unwanted children.

In many states various means have been developed for controlling the boarding places of children. Minnesota requires a license to be issued by the state for every family taking three or more unrelated children under the age of three years. New York requires that any one taking a child up to the age of sixteen who is not closely related must have a license from the local health department. Some fourteen other states, including Massachusetts, Indiana, Michigan, California and others with widely different social conditions, have laws relating to this subject. The Massachusetts law requires licensing by the state, reporting the admission and discharge to the state by everyone who accepts even one baby for which a license is not required, and also makes it an offense as has been mentioned, to receive a baby under the age of two years for placement with some other person.

On account of the obviously ineffectual character of the laws of this state, and because the abuses in Pennsylvania are well known, your Commission has offered, in an earlier section of this report, a new bill designed to bring infant boarding houses under some measure of control.

Need for Study of Laws Relating to the Care of Dependent Children.

Perhaps the most instructive comparison which will indicate the condition of the laws relating to the care of dependent children is that with the laws providing for public education. The School Code is a systematic body of law setting forth the services to be performed and the beneficiaries of the service, the requirements made upon parents and children, the powers, duties and responsibilities of the officials who operate and maintain the service, the methods of financing, the accounting for service and for funds, the minimum standards of service which all school districts must maintain and the permissive activities dependent upon local initiative.

The laws relating to the care of dependent children provide by contrast for a general system that is vague and indefinite, diffuse in the allocation of powers and duties, inequitable in the distribution of some of the state and local funds, and without standards of quality or cost in the service.

As a consequence of the absence of a well coordinated legal system which establishes a clear line of duty and accountability no one in Pennsylvania knows the extent of the expenditures of public funds for the care of dependent children, no one knows the number of such children now being maintained, no one knows the number of families involved, no one knows the extent of the turnover among the clients of the public relief agencies as a whole in the course of a year, no one knows whether these expenditures are confined to needy cases, no one knows the extent to which some of the expenditures have brought good or ill to the recipients, and certainly no one knows whether better service might not have been achieved for a smaller outlay more intelligently applied. The Children's Commission regards this as perhaps Pennsylvania's most serious situation affecting children directly and one needing the most careful analysis as the basis for any suggestions for its improvement. If the conditions found in the study of adoptions are in any characteristic of what is happening to other children away from their own families, certainly considerations of sheer humanity demand that there be a thorough and painstaking study of Pennsylvania's dependent children.

With the presentation of this patently inadequate and incomplete picture of the child dependency situation in Pennsylvania, your commission wishes only to urge that the whole field as outlined be subjected to intensive and detailed study. As the activity of each group, whether public or private, operating in the field of child care is brought under examination, the following five simple tests should be applied:

(1) Does it deal with actual dependents?

(2) Does it carefully find out what conditions lie back of the dependent state of each child?

(3) Does it provide such care for children that solid foundations of health and social efficiency are laid? Does it make the most of each child's possibilities?

(4) Does it make the most economical and efficient use of the available financial resources? Does it utilize fully all of the child's family's resources?

(5) Can it show through its system of accounting for children as well as for dollars that it has the answers to the above four questions?

If, and when, a state-wide program for dealing with dependent children is undertaken, it too must make provision for answering those same five questions. A careful survey which would lay before your honorable bodies the facts necessary for a clear understanding of the child dependency situation in Pennsylvania is a matter which could well occupy the time of this or of some other commission of a similar character for the next two years.

V. MEMORANDUM ON THE SCOPE AND FUNCTIONS OF JUVENILE COURTS IN PENNSYLVANIA AND THE CARE OF DELINQUENT CHILDREN.

The Children's Commission at its various hearings listened to many recommendations concerning the juvenile courts operating in the state. Since it has not had time to make a careful and detailed study of the subject, it is making no recommendations on laws relating to juvenile court procedure or the care and treatment of those children coming before the courts on petitions alleging dependency, neglect, incorrigibility and delinquency. It has been thought wise, however, for the Commission to bring it to the attention of the Legislature as part of this report, some of the comments on juvenile court methods which were offered at these hearings and also to indicate briefly some of the questions which have been raised at various times by persons particularly interested in the court aspects of child welfare work in this state.

Number of Delinquent Children in Pennsylvania.

The available statistics, which are admittedly defective in some particulars, indicate that in July, 1924, there were 26 institutions in Pennsylvania for delinquent children. These had a combined population of 4,422. Over half of these children, 2,366, were in the two state, the two semi-state, the five state aided, and the two county institutions. The remaining 2,056 were in fifteen institutions privately operated. That does not mean that these children were in all cases privately supported. These are frequently maintained at the partial expense, at least, of the public.

Nearly 2,000 children were on parole to the correctional schools and approximately 14,350 were under the supervision of probation officers. The latter group probably includes some children who present no behavior problems and should be classed as dependent. The children in the correctional institutions, too, are not uniformly "behavior cases." But whatever the reasons that have operated to bring it about, there seems to be at least 20,000 children in Pennsylvania under the direct supervision of juvenile courts and correctional institutions.

In this connection it must be remembered that to designate this group of children as the "delinquent" children of the state is both unfair to them and misleading to the public. All people who deal even with pronounced types of delinquent children know what a large measure of extraneous circumstance and sometimes pure chance enters into the selection of these children. Behavior which will speedily bring one child to the juvenile court will lead well-to-do parents to send their child to a sanatorium or to provide a private tutor or send him to a special private school. Offenses such as the destruction or pilfering of property may be viewed very tolerantly in one neighborhood; in another they may lead to a rigorous application of legal remedies. If all the children of the community who are committing the same offenses as the "juvenile delinquents" were suddenly detected and listed, the number would undoubtedly include a much larger fraction of the child population of the state.

It is the opinion of your Commission that in this matter of juvenile delinquency and its treatment the behavior of the community toward the child who has committed an offense is an element of great importance in determining what the child will do thereafter. A collision with the law enforcing machinery can be highly educational. It can also be, and often is, a degrading and demoralizing experience.

No other group of 20,000 children in the state presents such a sharp challenge to the brains and ingenuity of the community if it would save itself in some measure from future loss and trouble of all kinds. No other group involves potential expense, often great in the individual instance and colossal in the aggregate, to the extent that these children do.

It is, therefore, of the utmost importance from every point of view that the public machinery for looking after the welfare of this group of children should be built with forethought and based upon the most complete analysis and understanding of the whole situation.

Wide Jurisdiction of Juvenile Courts.

The Pennsylvania juvenile court law follows in large part the general pattern of the Illinois juvenile court law, in that it brings all types and classifications of needy and unfortunate children within the scope and jurisdiction of the court. This is in contrast to the juvenile court laws of Massachusetts and New York and some other states in which the juvenile court is defined with great exactness as having jurisdiction only over children presenting problems of neglect, delinquency or misconduct in their various forms. In a few instances abandonments and adoptions also come within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court.

Within the last ten years there has been much discussion regarding the advantages and disadvantages of each of these methods. On the one hand is the group which thinks that the court should have jurisdiction over the whole field of dependency, adoptions, abandonments and the type of public outdoor relief known as mothers' assistance or mothers' pension. Under the Illinois mothers' assistance law in Chicago and Cook County the juvenile court has charge of the mothers' pension fund, which is a very large administrative function. In Philadelphia County the Juvenile Court Division of the Municipal Court has likewise been granted what amounts to pensions to mothers with children, although the juvenile court law has been held by judicial decision to contain no authority for the exercise of such a power or the performance of such a function.

Certain of those who favor this kind of juvenile court appeared before the Commission and strongly urged that no change be made in the present jurisdiction of the court. On the other hand, others—and they were the more numerous stated it as their belief that the volume of work, especially in the larger courts, has reached the point where it is too great for single administrative control, that few children receive sufficient time and consideration for the judges to understand their situations and that the next logical step is to transfer the dependency work to another unit of government outside the judicial system, preferably to a board of children's guardians, or local division of child guardianship, or a local board of control. The complexity of the whole problem of public outdoor relief and of the activities of overseers of the poor and poor law commissioners is such, and the work of these authorities so interweaves with that of the juvenile courts that the most careful study and inquiry should be made prior to any changes in the laws.

Juvenile Court Age.

It was brought to the attention of the Children's Commission that Pennsylvania is in the group of states which sets the lowest age limit for child offenders eligible to have their cases heard in a juvenile court. In 1920 the Federal Children's Bureau published "A Summary of Juvenile Court Legislation in the United States" (Legal Series No. 5, Bureau Publication No. 70). In that it appears that Pennsylvania and thirteen other states confine the jurisdiction of the juvenile court to children under sixteen. In thirteen states and the District of Columbia this age is seventeen years; while in seventeen states it extends to eighteen years. In Maryland the juvenile court has jurisdiction over girls to the age of eighteen and boys to twenty. In California it extends to both sexes to the age of twenty-one.

Juvenile Court Law not Observed in Spirit in Some Counties.

It was reported to the Commission that in certain counties there are no juvenile court sessions or separate juvenile courts, in accordance with the spirit and intent of the Pennsylvania Juvenile Court Act; that the old evil of a rotation of judges, or a frequent changing of judges within the juvenile court still prevails. Unless the same judge is able to keep in the closest touch with the individual children and the work of the court, the understanding of the child's problems which is indispensable to an intelligent disposition of the case is impossible. One of the most important reasons for the passage of our juvenile court law was to secure that kind of consideration for children's cases.

The opinion was expressed that there is far too much unwise and cheap publicity attending the court hearings in different parts of the state. Good juvenile courts guard their charges from exploitation in the daily press. One of the important gains secured under the juvenile court law, properly administered, over the old criminal procedure is that the child is spared a criminal record up to the age of sixteen. A first class juvenile court as scrupulously protects its hearings and records from casual and curious scrutiny as physicians and lawyers protect the interests of their patients and clients.

The Tests of a Good Juvenile Court.

The quality of work done by the juvenile courts and their general effectiveness in the field of child protection and welfare is first and fundamentally tested by the quality of social work done for the child coming before the court. This can be done intelligently only on the basis of an intimate knowledge of each child, of its family and neighborhood conditions, of its history and background.

Serious exception was taken to the ease with which children for the slightest causes are brought before the bar of the court. It was held by many witnesses that the courts are not exercising reasonable care in determining which are gravely serious problems in children and which are of a trivial and transient character. It was said that certain courts operate on a quantity basis, and try each year to handle as many new cases as possible. These courts routinely hear cases, it was averred, in regard to children whose difficulties could probably have been well met through recourse to their own parents or to private agencies.

A court experience and a court record even in the juvenile court often have very far reaching affects both on the child and his family. A wise court is one that saves every child that it can from those risks. It is as much the duty of the court to keep children of certain types out of its jurisdiction as it is quickly to admit others to its jurisdiction.

Probation Service not Uniformly of High Calibre.

It was also asserted by certain witnesses that the quality of probation work throughout the Commonwealth is not on a very high plane. There seems to be wide variation in personnel standards. It was pointed out that one of the important steps that should be taken in the correction of this serious situation would probably be found in the creation of a state probation commission, or a probation division of the Department of Welfare, which would acquaint the various judges with the best practice and procedure in the field of juvenile probation, and also assist in the formulation of voluntary rules for the guidance of all juvenile court work.

It was reported that little is being done to adjust the amount of work assigned to each probation officer so that it is possible for him or her to devote sufficient time to each child on probation to make an impression upon him.

The court records of children were held to be inadequate. Good social work, like good business, requires a dependable and adequate recording system. Frequently the unsatisfactory court records are due to an inadequate staff, which traces back to lack of funds, but in many cases the poor records were said to be due to the poor type of court personnel.

Throughout the state there is the widest variation in the matter of probation methods and the commitment of children. In certain courts the child is never sent to an industrial school except as a last resort. He may have been tried on probation fifteen to twenty-five times before he is committed. Some courts fail to distinguish the difference between committing a child for simple foster care for a short period and committing him for an extended period and will either use one policy to the exclusion of the other or hesitate to use either in any case. Other courts, while reluctant to commit children to industrial schools, see little danger in the frequent use of commitment of children to institutions and placing-out agencies for dependent children. It was held that much more must be done in the state in the development of sound and wise probation methods if the juvenile courts are to perform their real function.

Many courts including some of the largest occasionally discharge a child within two or three months after its commitment to an industrial or training school, often over the protests of those at the institution who have had the child in charge. Some judges and probation officers see great value in such short time commitments and would like to have existing public agencies give more of such temporary care. Those who opposed this point of view are of the opinion that when a child is sent to an industrial school he or she should stay as long as the school authorities deem wise. There is no way whereby the improvement of a child, whose home environment and behavior difficulties warrant commitment, may be forecast. A year may be enough for one child and quite insufficient for another. It is held that better probation work would meet the needs of those now committed for short terms. Moreover, the effect of the release or removal of a child against the advice and recommendation of the training school authorities and without regard to his or her conduct in the school has a very demoralizing effect on the other pupils. It was recommended that the responsibility to order all paroles should be in the hands of a central body and that the supervision of the child while on parole should be managed either by the institution or this central body.

Private Agencies in the Care of Delinquent Children.

There seemed to be great confusion as to the proper field of activity agencies working in co-operation with juvenile courts. The larger cities and the more populous areas of the state enjoy the services of a number of highly specialized children's agencies. In the rural sections of the state, however, that is not the case. The lack of efficient private agencies and of private funds for child welfare work in many of the rural communities was pointed out as one of the great obstacles of good juvenile court work in these communities.

Local Institutions for Care of Delinquent Children.

It was also pointed out that one of the direct, immediate evils arising from this situation in the country is an almost irrepressible insistence on the development of county institutions for the care of all those types of children coming before the court. Through the Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 963, providing for county schools for the care and training of juvenile court charges and the Act of May 16, 1921, P. L. 666 No. 281, authorizing county commissioners for districts of the fourth, to and including the eighth class, to build county institutions for all types of children and to accept them on commitment by the juvenile court, there has been opened a way to meet certain local pressing needs. Some of the most careful observers in the state, however, regard the creation of a system of small county institutions or units of that type as an evil of the utmost seriousness. It was observed that the experience attending county care of the insane, of the feeble-minded, and of prisoners indicates clearly that similar difficulties could be expected in connection with county institutional care of Juvenile delinquents. It was recommended to the Commission that one of its most important tasks was to examine the implications growing out of this maze of authorized county institutions; the activities of private agencies; the significance of a possible state parental school, and of the very strong movement in the eastern part of the state for local parental or truant schools. The hope was expressed that this Commission would be able to suggest a plan which would embody the best features now found in the states which are leading the way in child welfare, for the institutional care of the delinquent children in Pennsylvania who need that type of treatment.

It was recommended that the State Department of Welfare should be given authority, as in other Commonwealths, to pass upon the question of need for a county institution of this type, and if one is to be build it should have power to specify minimum standards which must be embodied in the plans and organization.

State Institutional Care for Delinquent Children.

A few of those who appeared before the Commission gave it as their opinion that, while Pennsylvania has many local institutions and more in prospect, Pennsylvania is as a state almost a generation behind some of the others in its provision of institutions for delinquent children. It was thought by some that the time has come for the creation of a state commission on industrial schools which would have authority over all public training schools receiving delinquent and incorrigible children under commitment from the juvenile courts and over all parole officers. The development of the movement for local or county institutions to take children from juvenile courts was to a considerable measure ascribed to the restricted amount of care at Morganza, the institution for the care of delinquent children in the western part of the state, and Glen Mills School and Sleighton Farm, the privately owned but publicly supported institutions for delinquent children in the eastern part of the state. Attention was also called to the fact that in both localities and in many sections of the state a large number of children are committed by the courts to industrial schools under sectarian auspices. It was held that there is much confusion regarding the disposition of children belonging to the different classifications coming under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court.

Need for Clarification of Terms in Juvenile Court Laws.

It was pointed out to this Commission that the definitions of delinquency and neglect which appear in the laws of Massachusetts and Minnesota in particular, are a great improvement over the definitions in the statutes of Pennsylvania which could well give careful heed to these distinctions. Some observed that the use of the term "incorrigible" is out of keeping with the spirit of the juvenile court law.

It was also held that there is much confusion in the minds of many public officials as to where dependency ends and incorrigibility and delinquency begin. The children who are to all intents and purposes dependent turn up at state industrial schools characterized as for the training of incorrigible and delinquent children exclusively. There seems to be great confusion as to the origin and significance of all misconduct difficulties in the pre-adolescent and adolescent child; and still greater confusion in differentiating in these particulars between the problems presented in girls and those presented in boys. It was held that there is much confusion as to what is implied in the term truancy. Some who appeared before the Commission used the term in a blanket sense to describe children who failed to attend school because of poor mentality, poor schools, poverty, bad neighborhood conditions and a variety of other causes. A contrary point of view was held by some who expressed the belief that truant is a clearly definable type of child, and therefore, they thought it desirable that special schools or institutions for the care of truant children be brought into play.

It was maintained by some of those who had made the most careful study of the institutional aspects of the care and treatment of children presenting conduct difficulties, that the existing semi-state institutions are attempting, at least so far as the boys are concerned, an extremely difficult task in taking children who range in age from seven up to as high as seventeen and eighteen years. In some cases they stay in the institution to the age of twenty. It was held that the grouping as to the age and the facilities for the transfer of children from one institution to another which have been worked out under the Massachusetts plan worthy of consideration in Pennsylvania. It was held that the state needs more institutions for conduct children, but that these should be operated in accordance with the high standards already set and in a coordinated way. It was thought that thereby those needs which have prompted the desire for local institutions will be far more adequately and economically met.

Better Understanding of Mental Problems Needed.

It was felt that some plan should be worked out whereby there would be made available to courts throughout the state the services of good psychiatrists and psychologists. The children coming before the juvenile court should have the benefit of the new sciences which contribute to the better understanding and treatment of both physical and mental ills. Often it is possible to effect such cooperative services with other agencies, both public and private.

The procedure now followed in Massachusetts whereby all children more than three years retarded in school work, a group which furnishes many delinquents, must be reported to the State Department of Education for study and recommendation of a plan for their improvement, or better treatment, was also recommended for adaptation to the Pennsylvania situation.

Detention Homes for Juvenile Court Charges.

The widest confusion exists as to the real scope and functions of juvenile court detention homes. The rural courts in certain instances suffer from lack of ample provision for the care of children awaiting trial or appearance in court. It was recommended that the Commission should study with care the experience of other states with reference to juvenile court detention homes, and that a definite and complete detention home policy for use in this state should be worked out.

Child Placing by Juvenile Courts.

At least one court, as is indicated in another section of this report, has established its own child placing department. This activity as a function of the court, and as a precedent for all courts in the state, was also recommended for serious thought to the Commission. Child placing is obviously an activity closely related to juvenile court functions. It was held that in giving children into the care of private agencies juvenile courts are clearly responsible for developing high standards of care on the part of those agencies. No unincorporated agency, for instance, should be used by the court. When it must take a child away from its own people and it seems wise to place it in a family, the court should make sure that the family will be visited frequently by a responsible representative of the private agency, and that the child's health and development will be closely watched. If, however, the court does its own placing it must be prepared to do the job reasonably well. In certain emergencies it was thought that the court might place a child directly in a family but this should always be done under the direct supervision of a well-trained probation officer. The development of high grade child placing machinery by other units of government also has a close relationship to this whole problem.

The conclusion was constantly voiced that the task of the juvenile court if even approximately carried out is now overwhelming, that so far as possible it should be simplified; that quality of service, particularly for delinquent children, is the first great consideration. Social case work carried on by a trained and adequately compensated personnel, protected by good civil service laws, is the true preliminary if the juvenile court is to be a positive agency for good instead of, as has been charged in some communities, being an agency that spends public money without appreciable results on the welfare of the children.

A study of the results achieved by probation work in the state and the results of the care and training given by the public training schools and by private agencies was strongly urged upon this Commission.

CHAPTER I—THE ADOPTION OF CHILDREN IN PHILADELPHIA COUNTY.

Adoptions During the Period January 1, 1919 to June 30, 1924.

That it might have some definite information regarding the nature and extent of the practice of adoption in Philadelphia County, the Children's Commission of Pennsylvania undertook in May 1924 a study of the adoptions consummated there between January 1, 1919 and June 30, 1924. The Commission began by making a search of the records of adoption proceedings in the Prothonotary's Office. This involved first going through the "miscellaneous index" books covering the period chosen for study. Approximately 3,000 entries had to be examined. It later developed that the indexing was not complete; it was necessary therefore, to examine the appearance dockets for this period. Approximately 260,000 actions are listed in these books. Since adoption by deed as well as adoption by court decree is practiced in this county it was necessary to go through approximately 350,000 entries in the index books of the Recorder of Deeds. In order to secure the adoption records for this period in Philadelphia County it was necessary, therefore to consult about 613,000 entries made in the various public records. This search brought to light 988 adoptions decreed by the five common pleas courts and the Civil Division of the Municipal Court, and 34 adoption deeds in the Recorder of Deeds' office. It is upon the basis of the 1022 records thus found that this study has been made.

It is necessary to distinguish the total number of adoptions from (1) the total number of children adopted, or (2) the number of families that adopted children, or (3) the number of families from which the adopted persons came. Three children were adopted twice during this period so that the total number of individuals adopted is 1019. Fifty families adopted a total of 109 children, so that the total number of adopting families represented by the 1022 adoptions is 963. Sixty families furnished 134 of the children adopted, so that the total number of families from which the adopted persons came must be reduced to 948. While at first that may seem a small number, it represents one out every 425 families reported by the Fourteenth Census, which reports a total of 402,946 families for the city as a whole.

Legal Adoption by Court Decree.

Without going into the minutiae of the laws and court decisions regarding adoption which are set forth in the questions and answers on adoption in Appendix I, it is sufficient to point out that two methods of adoption authorized by the statutes are practiced in this county. In the majority of the cases—988—the adoption was secured through a court decree issued by one of the five common pleas courts or, since July 1923, by the Civil Division of the Municipal Court. The number of decrees issued by the different courts of common pleas varies from a total of 118 for this period in one court to 300 in another. The smallest number of decrees issued by any one court in a single year is thirteen, or slightly over one a month. The largest is sixty-one, somewhat more than one a week.

While the procedure is not identical in these courts, it follows the same general outline in all of them. A person wishing to adopt an heir files a petition with the court. When a minor is being adopted this petition must be accompanied by the formal consent of the person or persons who have the legal custody, usually the parents or the surviving parent. In some instances, however, an institution or child welfare agency gives consent. The petition usually recites the age of the child and a few facts pertaining to its history, especially if it has been placed by an agency for adoption. It is customary when a married person is the adopter to require the husband or wife also to give consent. The petition usually includes two affidavits of the respectability of the adoption parents.

This petition of the adopting parents, together with the consent of the legal custodian of the child and the affidavits regarding the character of the adopter, is presented by an often in the name of a firm of attorneys, to the entered upon the appearance docket in the Pro- Office. For this a fee of $5.00 is charged. It n the current motion list of the court and re- til it is disposed of.

While the items of information contained in the petition, the form of the affidavits regarding respectability and the decree issued by the court are very similar in the great majority of the cases, there is no standardized form requiring specific items of information other than the names of the parties. Petitions are drawn up from certain general forms known to attorneys, but are frequently modified in the direction of omitting what would seem to be pertinent information. In some of the states definite prescribed forms are printed and used. For example, among the 988 cases, in 19 the age of the person adopted was described as "minor" and in 20 not even this information was given. In 97 cases the addresses of the adopting parents were not found in the petitions. In 436 cases the addresses of the persons who had vouched for their respectability were not given.

The court granting the petition makes it effective by his signature to the decree which has been prepared by the petitioner's attorney. The time elapsing between the filing of the petition and the granting of the decree is usually four or five days, although in 83 instances the decree was signed the same day that the petition was filed. In 49 instances a month or more elapsed between the filing of the petition and the signing of the decree. The interval in all of the other 856 cases was between one day and one month.

Unsigned Adoption Petitions.

In the search of the records it was found that 37 petitions filed with the Prothonotary's office had not been signed. Of these, 4 were filed in the year 1919, 10 in the year 1920, 2 in the year 1921, 9 in the year 1922, 9 in the year of 1923, 3 in the first six months of 1924. The reasons for this condition seem to be varied and in some cases obscure. In one of these instances an adoption apparently refused by one court was decreed by another. In some cases the adoption was contested by relatives and interested persons and the judge decided against the petitioner. In one such case the records recite a sordid story of a thirteen year old boy whose parents were both dead. The father had been killed in a railroad accident and the boy received a substantial compensation award. Immediately his stepmother, who had never taken a marked interest in him, and a maternal uncle began simultaneous proceedings to adopt him. The stepmother's petition was refused. One petition in 1923 was refused because, on investigation by the Department of Welfare, it was found that a married woman describing herself as a widow in the petition, was perpetrating, with the connivance of a maternity hospital, a deliberate fraud on her husband in regard to the birth of a child. The names of the attorney for this hospital and the superintendent appear on the records as the petitioner's attorney and a voucher for the character of the petitioner. A few records contained the statements or notations by the judge indicating the reason his signature had been withheld.

In some cases the parents or attorneys seem to have let the matter go by default. In one case a non-resident woman had taken a very young baby from a local maternity hospital in Chicago. The decree had not been signed but inasmuch as the baby died soon afterwards, apparently the matter of the adoption was dropped. In the case of two other children whose adoption petitions had not been carried through, inquiry at the attorney's office elicited the information that the petitioners were gypsies and had moved on before the transaction was completed.

The unsigned petitions represent an average of less than four per cent. of all the petitions. For the individual courts the average varies from three to six per cent.

While it is possible to secure privacy for the adoption records through the action of the court which can order the record impounded in the safe, it was found that in actual practice in only one case out of the 988 had this actually taken place. In this instance the only information available consisted of the name of the child and the dates at which the petition was filed and the decree entered. The sex of the hild could be inferred from its name.

office of the Recorder of Deeds where it is copied into the deed books along with titles to real estate, records of mortgages and other documents.

The minimum fee for recording an adoption deed is $2.50. This allows five hundred words. One dollar for each additional five hundred words is charged.

Typical forms of both adoption petitions and adoption deeds are given in Appendix II.

While it is customary for petitioners for adoption to employ an attorney, there are at present resources for those who feel that they cannot afford to employ private legal counsel. The Legal Aid Bureau of the Department of Public Welfare reports that in 1923 it had 66 applications for service in connection with adoption proceedings. Among the 159 petitions and 4 deeds found for the year 1923 the officials of the Legal Aid Bureau are mentioned as the attorneys in five instances. The officials of the Bureau report that each application for service is investigated and assistance refused in questionable cases.

In a few instances there was evidence that a clerk of one of the courts had prepared the petitions and presented them to the judge.

Methods of This Study of 1022 Adoptions.

Inasmuch as so large a part of the adoption record is purely formal, it was decided not to attempt to copy the records as they stand, but to transcribe the information which pertained specifically to each record. Accordingly a schedule of questions was prepared and only the answers to these questions were taken from the records. The following items of information were recorded:

1. (a) Dates of filing of petition and (b) signing the decree,
2. (a) Name, (b) sex, (c) age, (d) color of person one adopter.
3. Number of persons adopted, if more than one.
4. (a) Names, (b) addresses, (c) marital status of adopters and (d) relationship to each other, if more than one adopter.
5. (a) Name, (b) address and (c) marital status of each natural parent and (d) the length of time between his or her death, if deceased, and the filing of the petition.
6. Relationship of the natural parents to the adopting parents.
7. Names of persons giving consent to the adoption.
8. Reason for parents' surrender of the child.
9. (a) Sex and (b) age of children in the family of the adopting parents.
10. (a) Occupation and (b) income of the adopting parents.
11. (a) Name and (b) address of petitioners' attorney.
12. Length of time child had been in home of adopting parents before filing of the petition.
13. (a) Name and (b) address of the agency or institution which placed the child in the home of the adopting parents.
14. Whether the child had been abandoned by its natural parents.
15. (a) Whether the natural parents had formally surrendered the child to the institution or agency for placement, and (b) the date of surrender.
16. Length of time child had been in the institution or agency before placement in the home of the adopting parents.
17. Descriptive phrases used in affidavits regarding the adopting parents.
18. Whether the child's consent was given to adoption.
19. (a) Names and (b) addresses of persons signing affidavits of respectability of the adopting parents.
20. Any unusual circumstances reported.

Grouping of Cases for Analysis.

In attacking this study of the 988 adoptions decreed by the courts two questions presented themselves: first, do these adoptions fall into any natuarl classifications for purposes of analysis of their social significance; and second, are there any ways by which it can be found out how at least some of these adopted children have fared in their new homes?

On the first of these questions it seemed possible to group the cases, from the information contained in the petitions, into certain classes, each of which does represent a somewhat distinct type of adoption. Four such natural types or groups can be defined from the information in the petitions. The first obvious grouping is that of the adults. According to the laws of Pennsylvania an adult may be adopted in somewhat the same way that a child is adopted. In 48 cases the petitions definitely revealed that the person adopted was an adult.[1] The adults then were set aside as representing a type of adoption not of major interest to the Children's Commission.

The next natural grouping suggested itself from the fact that in a fair proportion of the cases the petitions revealed that the adopting parent or parents were related by blood or marriage to the natural parents. Adoption by relatives became the second type of adoption. In another group of adoptions it was patent that a social agency had played a leading part in placing the child with the family and had assumed considerable responsibility for the adoption, amounting in some instances to the actual giving of consent to it. The adoption of children placed by social agencies became then a third type of adoption. The remainder represented that group of cases in which no blood or marriage relationship was mentioned in the petition, and there was no evidence that a social agency had in any way participated. From the fact, however, that a social agency was not mentioned in the petition it was not inferred that it might not have participated. Accordingly inquiries regarding this group were made with the Philadelphia Social Service Exchange, with which a large majority, though not all of the social agencies of the community register their cases. Thus it became possible to find additional cases in which social agencies had participated. It also became possible to divide this group into two types of adoption. One of these groups includes those families which had had no contact prior to giving their children in adoption, with the social agencies registering with the Exchange. These adoptions seem to be based upon a purely private agreement between two unrelated families. The other group consisted of those natural families which were known to the social agencies using the Exchange. The agencies disclaimed any part in the adoption. In some cases to be discussed later it appears that the distinction between these families and those who definitely turned their children over to social agencies for adoption becomes rather faint.

As is readily apparent these groupings are not strictly logical or based on a single factor which pertains either to the adopting parents or to the adopted child or to his family. It is rather an attempt to classify on the basis of the practical situations in which adoption work presents itself to the court.

In the case of each type of adoption it seemed wise to divide the children into a further grouping of legitimate and illegitimate. Of the 988 cases in which adoption was decreed by the court the following types of adoption were finally worked out:

Group I	Adults		48
Group II	Minors adopted by relatives		303
	Legitimate	241
	Illegitimate	60
	Legitimacy undetermined	2
Group III	Minors adopted by non-relatives with natural families unknown to social agencies		246
	Legitimate	151
	Illegitimate	81
	Legitimacy Undetermined	14
Group IV	Minors adopted by non-relatives with natural families known to social agencies		176
	Legitimate	87
	Illegitimate	89
Group V	Minors placed for adoption by social agencies		214
	Legitimate	48
	Illegitimate	128
	Legitimacy Undetermined	38
Record impounded			1

[1] In some of the cases in which the age of the person adopted was not given there was sufficient internal evidence to make it reasonable to infer that the adopted person was a minor; in other cases, the person's age was ascertained from other records.

The final class, Group VI, consists of the 34 adoptions by deed. These records contain such a small amount of information that it is practically impossible in many cases even to initiate a further investigation or identify the people concerned. Of the 34 records only 6 contain the addresses of the adopting parents. It was decided to make no special inquiry regarding this group inasmuch as the process of adoption by deed holds even fewer safeguards than the judicial process.

Supplementary Information Regarding Adopted Children.

Having found that the adoption cases did group themselves into types, which facilitates analysis bearing upon the issues involved in each type, the second question presented itself: Are there any ways by which it can be found out how at least some of these children have fared in their new homes? The feasibility of tracing each child and actually observing conditions surrounding it was carefully considered. It was decided that such direct following up of these children was not advisable for several reasons. In the first place, the resources of the Commission were not such as to make possible a thorough effort at locating and studying these families, while a superficial visit was deemed not to justify the cost involved. In the second place, the Children's Commission doubted the wisdom of approaching many of these families where the adoption had been effected on a basis of secrecy and where visiting the family or any kind of direct investigation might bring unhappiness to parents or child or both. In the third place, there are sources of information about individuals, families, and conditions in the community which could be used, and which represented in many cases as reliable information as could be secured through field visiting by representatives of the Commission.

Reference has been made to the fact that in Group V a social agency had participated in every case, Group IV represented families known to many social agencies, while Group II, adoptions by relatives, included families about which social agencies had records. Through the use of the Social Service Exchange it was possible to (communicate with many social welfare agencies and thereby) secure access to a considerable body of information about both natural parents and adopting parents. The information gleaned from these sources will appear as each group is discussed. Another resource in Philadelphia County for finding out certain facts existed in the Philadelphia Housing Association. This agency, which was equipped to make expert housing inspections, immediately upon our request, agreed to inspect the houses in certain of the congested areas of the city where the adopting parents had lived at the time of the adoption. School records of the children of school age are available in the public school system. The Bureau of Compulsory Education, as did the Housing Association, promptly made available its expert services in securing the school records and in following up the school children. By means of these various approaches it was thought, and it has so turned out, that sufficient information could be mobilized to indicate the major problems from the standpoint of protecting the children involved in the present adoption practice. What these problems actually are will be discussed in other connections.

Age, Legitimacy, Parental Condition and Sex of the Whole Group of Persons Adopted.

Before attacking the analysis of each of the groupings which have been described, some of the outstanding facts with regard to the whole group of persons adopted should be reviewed. Deducting the 48 adults from the 1022 total cases, we have left 974 minors including those adopted by deed (Table 2). The three cases in which the same child was adopted twice have been disregarded in all of the following tabulations and each adoption counted as a child.

*One case in which the adoption record is impounded in the Prothonotary's safe.

In 918 of the 974 cases the age of the child was recorded or learned from the social agency. In 903 of these cases the age was recorded in petitions, 10 in deeds, in 5 cases the age was learned from records of social agencies. In 29 cases (19 decrees, 10 deeds) the adopted person was described as a minor, and in 27 cases (20 decrees, 7 deeds) minority was inferred from other information in the petition or deed. Of the 918 cases of known age, 186 children were under one year, 598 were under five years, 778 were under ten years. Thus, a considerable majority of the children adopted were under ten years, and the largest single group (412) was between one and five years of age; 105 were between eleven and fifteen years, and 35 were between sixteen and twenty-one years.

Another general question that presents itself is the proportion of legitimate and illegitimate children in the total (Table 2). It is a common belief that the great majority of adopted children are of illegitimate birth. This belief is not borne out by the Commission's study. Of the 974 minors adopted, 543 were legitimate (527 by court decree and 16 by deed) and 365 (358 by court decree and 7 by deed) were illegitimate, while in 66 cases (55 by court decree and 11 by deed) the facts with reference to legitimacy could not be ascertained. Twenty-eight children were foundlings, twenty were cases of neglected or abandoned children who were passed on and their family histories lost, five cases of obscure adoption records could not be supplemented outside; in one case the record was impounded in the safe, one case was that of an adoption of a psychopathic boy of nineteen who had lost his memory.

The classification by legitimacy and by age, at the time of adoption, shows marked differences in distribution (Table 2). Of the 543 legitimate minors, 12.5 per cent were under a year, 38.9 per cent from one to five, 22.2 per cent from six to ten, 20.7 per cent over ten, and 5.7 per cent of unspecified age. In the case of the 365 illegitimate children, 31.5 per cent were under one year, 45.5 per cent were between one and five years, 14.0 per cent between six and ten, 5.2 per cent were over ten and 3.8 per cent were of unspecified age. Of the 66 of undetermined legitimacy the percentages are 4.6 per cent under one year, 53.1 per cent between one and five, 11.9 per cent between six and ten, 13.7 per cent over ten, 16.7 per cent of unspecified age.

About 1000 illegitimate births are reported each year for Philadelphia County by the Division of Vital Statistics. Birth reports usually give a conservative figure on illegitimacy. Of these 1000 births, about 40 per cent are colored and 60 per cent are white. For a five and a half year period the registered illegitimate births in Philadelphia County could be safely estimated at between 5500 and 6000, of which from 2200 to 2400 are colored and from 3300 to 3600 are white. Of the adopted children there were 281 illegitimate and 38 of doubtful legitimacy under the age of six years. This would seem to indicate that adoption as a solution of the problem of illegitimacy appears in an exceedingly small percentage of cases.

A third kind of information which pertains especially to the legitimate children is parental condition (Table 3). Of the 543 legitimate minors, 95 were full orphans, 110 were fatherless, 179 were motherless, 89 had both parents living, 69 had parents divorced or definitely separated while in one case (the father was either dead or divorced) there was not sufficient information to determine this point. In this, as in so many other situations where children away from their own families are surveyed, the full orphan is found to be but a small proportion of the cases, but the half orphan is relatively frequent. Whole or half orphans comprise 70.7 per cent of the group. In view of the extensive institutional provision in Pennsylvania for fatherless children, it is of interest to note the predominance children in this study.

The fourth point, the sex of the children, shows a ratio of about 8 boys to 11 girls for all of the minors. (Table 4). Of the 543 legitimate children (527 by decree and 16 by deed) 314 were girls and 229 were boys; of the 365 illegitimate children (358 by decree and 7 by deed) 213 were girls and only 152 were boys, or a ratio of 2 boys to 3 girls; of the 66 children of undetermined legitimacy (55 by decree and 11 by deed) 32 were boys and 34 were girls. Of the 186 babies under a year there were 110 girls and only 76 boys; in the age group from one to five years there were 243 girls and only 169 boys; among children six to ten there were 102 girls to 78 boys. With very few exceptions, the girls exceed the boys in all of the groups showing age and legitimacy.

Plural Adoptions.

It was mentioned above that 50 of the 964 families who adopted this period took into their homes more than one person. In 43 cases the adoption was what, for the purposes of this report, has been called "plural adoption," that is, two or more persons who are brothers and or sisters were adopted by the same family. In 7 instances the adopter took two unrelated children; in 5 of these the adoption of the second child was not secured at the same time as the first child while in two cases the two unrelated children were adopted at the same time.

The 43 instances of plural adoption represent a total of 95 persons, 89 minors and 6 adults. In 36 instances two children were adopted by the same family. In 5 cases three children were thus adopted, and in 2 instances four children were adopted at one time. In 31 of the 43 instances of plural adoption the adopters are mentioned as relatives by blood or marriage to the group of children adopted. This includes 24 instances where two children were adopted and all 7 instances where more than two children were adopted; 70 minors and one adult compose this group. In 12 instances where two children were adopted no relationship is mentioned in the petitions. This includes 2 instances in which both adopted persons were adults and one in which the group consisted of one minor and one adult.

It is noteworthy that 95 persons, (9.2 per cent of all the adoptions) were members of brother or sister groups. It is equally significant that plural adoption is found in the large proportion of cases (for 71 persons out of 95) to have been effected by relatives and in no case have non-relatives taken a brother and sister group of more than two persons.

All of the persons in these plural adoptions except three were legitimate. One stepfather adopted three illegitimate children of his wife.

Adoption by stepfathers and stepmothers accounts for 27 children and one adult of these brother and sister groups; 10 were adopted by paternal relatives, while adoption by maternal relatives includes a total of 31 children, and 2 children were adopted by a relative whose relationship is specified only as "cousin". The remaining 24 (19 children and 5 adults) were adopted by supposedly non-relatives. The 95 persons adopted in groups are distributed in age from twenty-two months to twenty-eight years.

In the 43 instances of plural adoption 11 groups were full orphans, 8 were fatherless, 10 were motherless, 6 had both parents living, 6 had divorced parents, in one case no data is given, and in the one case mentioned above the parents were unmarried.

Adoption of Adults.

Taking up the analysis of each of the types of adoption described above only a few facts can be given with reference to Group I, the adults. Of the 48 persons, 22 were men and 26 were women. Of the 22 men, 7 were married and 15 were single. Of the 26 women, 6 were married, 19 were single, and in one instance the marital status was not mentioned. From the fact that no consent by a husband was present in the petition it may be assumed that this woman was either single, widowed or divorced. The adults range in age from twenty-one to fifty-nine years, the oldest man being fifty-nine and the oldest woman forty-six. In the 41 cases of known age 27 were under thirty and 14 were over thirty. In 17 of the 48 cases the adopter was a relative by blood or marriage (13 stepfathers, one maternal aunt, one maternal aunt's husband, and one couple described as "aunt and uncle," and one father-in-law). In 13 cases the adopters are described as foster parents with whom the adopted adult had lived for an extended period of time. In the 18 cases where no relationship by blood or marriage and no foster parent relationship is definitely mentioned, one adopter was a woman whose marital status was not given, two were widowers, two were widows, nine were married couples, three were men whose marital status was not given, and one adoption was effected by a man and woman whose relationship to each other was not given. In three cases of the adoption of adult women it was definitely mentioned that the woman was not living with the adopting parents. In one case the woman is given as living in Budapest.

The custom and practice of adopting adults is a subject which merits special study but such inquiry does not fall within the field of work assigned to this Commission.

CHAPTER II—CHILDREN ADOPTED BY RELATIVES.

Age, Sex and Legitimacy of Children in Group II.

Of the total number of 940 minors adopted by court decree 303 children were adopted by relatives by blood or marriage. These compose Group II. It is highly probable that the actual number of adoptions by relatives should be somewhat larger. The fact that the petition fails to mention any relationship between the child and the adopting parents is not to be interpreted in every case as evidence that no such relationship exists. In a few petitions it is specifically stated that the child was not related in any way to the adopting parents. Where the Children's Commission has been able to supplement the information given in the petitions, from other sources, it has found several instances in which, though the petitions made no mention of any relationship between the adopting parents and the child, such relationship did exist. It is also clear that in some instances of illegitimate children, there was a concealment of blood relationship (for reasons that can be very well understood). It is therefore, to be emphasized that the total of 303 adoptions for this group would probably be somewhat augmented if all the facts had been known.

Regarding legitimacy the children of this group should be classified as 241 legitimate, 60 illegitimate and two doubtful. The latter two cases have for purposes of other classifications been put with the legitimate children. It should be explained that in both of these two cases there is no reference whatever in the petition to the natural father and the adopting father had married the mother. In both cases the children were less than three years old. If the adopting father were also the natural father, the marriage of the parents would have legitimated these children.

As might be forecast, the legitimate children adopted by relatives show a relatively small proportion under one year of age. Out of 243 cases only 12, or 5% were less than a year of age; 90 were between one and five, 63 between six and ten, 55 between eleven and fifteen, and 15 between sixteen and twenty. Five are designated as "minors" and in 3 cases the age is not known. Of the legitimate minors adopted by relatives, 134 were girls and 109 were boys. This is a slightly higher proportion of boys than for the group as a whole, and indicates, that these daopting parents are seeking to take care of a relative rather than to bring into their family just the kind of child that would contribute most to their own happiness. Of the 243 legitimate minors adopted by relatives, 40 were full orphans, 56 were fatherless, 72 were motherless, 30 had both parents living, 43 had parents divorced or with divorce pending. The remaining 2 cases are those mentioned in the paragraph above in which legitimacy is open to question.[1] A total of 72 children or slightly less than a third, were adopted by stepfathers and 5 by stepmothers. On account of the plural adoptions the actual number of stepfathers involved is less than the number of children. Nine stepfathers adopted a total of 21 minors and one stepmother adopted 2 children. The actual number of adopting stepfathers, is therefore, 60, and of stepmothers, 4. The classification of one of the cases as adoption by a stepfather is perhaps a little premature as was the adoption itself. The petition recited that the adopter was about to marry the child's mother.

In two cases older sisters were the adopting persons. In the case of 63 children, or about one fourth of this group, paternal relatives (grandparents 16, aunt 22, uncle 10, other paternal relative 15) were the adopters. On account of the plural adoption in this group the number of adopting paternal relatives is reduced from 63 to 58. Of the 243 children, 87, or a little more than a third, were adopted by maternal relatives. Since 13 of these adopters took 31 children the actual number of adopters who were maternal relatives is reduced from 87 to 69. Fourteen children were adopted by relatives but the relationship was not accurately described. The adopter in some cases is merely mentioned as an aunt or a cousin.

The 60 illegitimate children adopted by relatives by blood or marriage show 32 boys and 28 girls. This is one of the few classes in which the boys exceed the girls in number. These children range in age from two months to fifteen years with three cases in which the age is not mentioned. Only seven were less than a year old, 31 were between one and five; 11 were between six and ten; 8 were eleven to fifteen. In the case of 7 of these children the natural or putative father was the adopter; two of these were boys and five were girls. Thirty-two children, or 53.3 per cent were adopted by stepfathers; of these 21 were boys and 11 were girls. Paternal relatives adopted only four children and maternal relatives adopted seventeen. It would seem from this that in a very small proportion of cases of adoption of illegitimate children (12 out of 365 total cases, or about 5.5 per cent) do the blood relatives of the natural parents openly adopt. Among the legitimate children this proportion rises to 30.5 per cent (166 out of 543). Of the 7 children adopted by putative fathers four were less than nine months old; one was three, one six, and one fifteen years old. In this latter case the child had been adopted by strangers years ago and was now readopted by his natural parents who had married in the meantime. Of the 32 illegitimate children adopted by stepfathers, 19 were less than six years old. In the cases of the four children adopted by paternal relatives all were under two years. Of the 17 children adopted by maternal relatives, 15 were under nine years old; of these only 2 were under one year.

Of the 60 petitions of this group, the name of the natural father is given in 41 cases and ommitted in 19. Of the 32 cases adopted by stepfathers, in 13 instances the name of the natural father is not given, while in 19 instances it is given and is, of course, different from that of the adopting father. It has been noted above that in 7 instances an adopting father was the natural father. It is possible that in the 13 instances of adoption by stepfathers with petitions which omitted the names of the natural fathers, at least some of the adopting stepfathers were also natural fathers.

Instances of Adoption by Relatives.

While adoption by relatives both of legitimate and illegitimate children seems to be an effort to strengthen and attach inheritance rights to what is a natural relationship based upon blood or marriage ties, and represents on the part of the adopting parents the more complete assumption of a responsibility which they would probably carry otherwise, there would seem to be reason to think that in some individual cases a careful survey of the situation would lead to the conclusion that such adoptions are not contributing to the best interest of the child. The following cases will perhaps illustrate that point.

A consideration of the adoption histories which have been compiled for this report two or three fundamental problems about which it is perhops necessary to have a point of view before attacking the cases themselves. The information about these adopting families was secured very largely from records in social agencies. In most cases certain facts were available at the time the adoption was made and could have been secured by the judges or court attaches had they used the organized resources of the community for finding out about these families and for checking up the statements in the petitions. In some others, where the families were not known at the time of the adoption, later investigations by social agencies revealed conditions which could have been observed at the time the adoption was made, had there been interviews with the parents and visits to their home.

Perhaps it should also be said that in regard to the family histories, the facts relating to health and domestic relations are often revolting and therefore, suggest that outsiders should refrain from prying into them. While many of the facts in regard to these family situations are highly personal and therefore not the concern of outsiders under ordinary circumstances, it must be recognized that adoption is for people to whom he is turned over are matters of vital concern to him and to the public responsible for conferring parental rights on them. The conclusion seems unavoidable that if adoption is to be safeguarded and the interests of the child are to be actually protected there is no escape from a consideration in each individual case of the details of the family situation even though these sometimes be revolting and unpleasant and even though the consideration of them will result frequently in refusing community sanction to the satisfaction of desires, sometimes unselfish, which these adopting families entertain toward a child.

Case A.

An Australian couple living in the United States had had three children when the wife died. The husband, a prosperous business man, placed two of the children for adoption with people in Chicago. He then remarried and kept the third child, a boy of seven, with him. The second wife, who had grown up in Philadelphia, seems to have been of delinquent tendencies in her girlhood. On the complaint of her mother she had been taken under supervision as an incorrigible girl by an agency dealing with delinquent girls and women. After her marriage, at the age of eighteen, she seems not to have accepted responsibility for the care of her stepson in a wholly satisfactory manner. As a remedy for this she was induced by her husband to adopt the boy and thus become wholly responsible for him. In July of 1920, nineteen months after the death of the boy's mother, his adoption by his stepmother, then nineteen years old, was decreed.

As a means of fastening responsibility upon her, the adoption seems to have been a failure from the start. She took little interest in the boy who lived in a foster home during almost all of the time that the father and his second wife lived together.

The second wife bore a child, a son. The husband's brother from Australia came to live with the family. Grave domestic troubles developed. The second wife, who was implicated in the domestic unhappiness which preceded the death of the first wife, soon seemed to her husband "a poor housekeeper, self centered and interested only in herself". The husband was seeking to arrange for a divorce when, overcome by a fit of jealous rage, the wife shot him on January 21, 1922. The circumstances of the shooting and of the trial led to the acquittal of the wife on November 3, 1922. She collected a substantial sum in life insurance and inherited about $20,000 as the widow. The boy fell heir to an estate of $20,000. The husband after he was shot, made a will leaving his entire estate of $60,000 to his son and his brother. The wife succeeded in getting her share, although the will was declared valid on July 20, 1923.

Paternal relatives made several efforts to take the child out of his mother's care. The father's mother in Australia tried through the British Consul to have the child sent out to her. For about eighteen months after the death of the father, the boy was in school in the country, and was maintained at the expense of his own estate. His adopted mother then began to assert her rights as the custodian of his person and estate. She insisted on taking the boy, now eleven years old, out of the school in the country and having him live with her. She applied for a writ of habeas corpus when the principal of the school refused to turn him over to her. The child, evidently not sharing the point of view toward the killing of his father taken by the jury which had acquitted the adopting mother, in writing and in open court declared his strenuous objection to being forced to live with her.

The court found it difficult to decide the boy's case. The acquittal of the woman seemed in a sense to constitute approval by the community of her method of meeting a domestic situation which had greatly incensed her. She could hardly on that ground now be considered an unfit custodian for the boy. If the adopting mother was not unfit, the court felt itself loath to deprive her of custody. Although the writ of habeas corpus was not granted to her, she continues in the relationship of the adopted mother and may from time to time, try to assert her rights.

Case B.

Early in December 1923 a man and his wife from the central section of the city petitioned the court to adopt a six year old boy. The petition reported that his mother had died when he was about a year old, and that he had lived in their family for three and a half years. The boy's father, a Lithuanian waiter, had signed the consent for his adoption by these people. The court decreed the adoption on the day after the petition was filed. Consultation of the records in two other divisions of the court that decreed the adoption revealed that this adopting family had records extending over three years. It also revealed that the boy was the wife's sister's child. The family's first appearance early in 1920 had been occasioned by an effort to force the boy's father to pay for his board. The father himself had appealed to the court for assistance in placing the child, whom he said, the foster family were no longer willing to keep. In connection with this episode, the probation officer visited the family. It was found to be living in a congested neighborhood and to be running a rooming house. Although this visit was made in the middle of March, the probation officer reported that there was no fire in the house. The foster mother told the officer that the child, now a little over three years old, was very bright "and to demonstrate its brightness took the child on her lap and asked it if wanted to go to the poor house. Child could not speak but indicated that it did not want to go. They teach the child," continues the probation officer's report, "to act meanly at the mention of the father's name. Child tried to say that the father is no good which is taught him" by the foster family.

Money affairs were adjusted so that the father paid the board until December of that year. Then he fell into arrears.

One week before Christmas (1920) the foster father sought the aid of the court again. This time he re-and this child. He said she had taken $250 with her. He had given her $500 to deposit in the bank. He applied to have this foster child taken off of his hands and placed upon the county for support. He planned to take his own little girl to relatives in a town up in the anthracite region. He said he did not know the whereabouts of the boy's father. Although he was advised to turn the child over to a children's agency for placement, he did not take this advice. When a few days later, the probation officer called at his home, it was found to be closed. Neighbors reported that the foster father had succeeded in finding the natural father and had turned the child over to him. The father's landlady was reported to be caring for the child. The foster father, according to the neighbors, had visited the child in its new home and found that it "was getting along nicely." Thereupon the probation officer recommended that the case be closed.

About a year and a half later, when arrearages of court court orders were being looked up (May 1922) it was reported by neighbors that this family had moved from the city.

The adoption petition came into another branch of this this court in December 1923. There, apparently quite independently of any previous connection beteween the court and this family, the adoption was decreed, as has been said, on the day after the petition was filed.

Case C.

In August, 1922, a petition was presented for the adoption of a three years old girl by a married couple living in the central part of the city. The petition mentioned nothing about any relationship of the couple to the child and made no reference to any other children in their family. The petition did state that the child's parents had deserted it, that it had been in a home for the friendless in a middle western city which had, after seven months care of the child, turned it over to its grandmother who, after three weeks, had turned it over to the petitioners. This grandmother signed the consent for the adoption.

Inquiry among the social agencies disclosed that the adopting family was well known to several on account of relatives and especially on account of one of the three children in this family itself. This child was a problem to the school authorities. The situation is described as follows by a school social worker:

Jacob C. was referred to me for study and treatment in the spring of 1921. He was attending a special class concentration centre in which I was acting as school counsellor. He was at the time not quite eight years old. He had previously been studied at the University of Pennsylvania Psychological Clinic because of suspected mental defect, but had been diagnosed not feeble-minded. He had shown, however, marked neurotic symptoms which still persisted.

Although he was tall and well built for his age and so husky as to be almost inaudible and his shoulders showed good physical care, he was pale, his voice was and face twitched almost continually. He was very shy and full of unreasonable fears. He imagined that worms were in his food and ants were crawling on his back. He developed innumerable fears during my acquaintance with him—was afraid an eagle would come to his bedroom and pierce him with its beak, that he would acquire lockjaw, that his teeth were too close together and so forth. He had a confused mass of sex information including an idea of perversions and feared he might become insane.

His family, non-Orthodox Jewish, consisted of the father, employed in the police force, the mother who kept house, a brother, then thirteen years old, and a brother eleven years old. The mother, an attractive, intelligent young woman, appreciated my interest in Jacob, talked freely of his symptoms and described the family situation rather fully.

Her husband since before Jacob's birth, according to the wife, had been subject to spells which resembled epilepsy but of the nature of which the doctors were uncertain. Jacob had an intense fear of seeing his father in these attacks. The father showed lack of judgment in dealing with the children and never seemed to realize his responsibility as a father. Although Mrs. C. had married him for love, she had been thoroughly terrified by his spells and had come to think him utterly selfish and interested only in purely physical gratifications. She declared he had no regard for her or her wishes and used the "spells" to get his own way. She had spoiled him just as if he were a baby. He was not brutal to her or the children, but sometimes became irritable and quarreled loudly with her. He had always been faithful to her to the best of her knowledge and every one thought him a wonderful man.

She herself had a grammar school education and had worked in a factory and a store. She realized that Jacob needed special attention and training beyond what she was giving him. She could not resist giving the children meals at all hours, had trouble getting them to school on time, had never made Jacob dress of the time. Because she thought him handicapped, she had been intentionally clement with him.

Her thirteen year old boy, she said, was a difficult child, very reserved and inclined to be autocratic with the younger children. He was studying the violin and loved good music. He was entering high school at thirteen. The eleven year old boy was a happy, irresponsible child presenting no problem and in the seventh grade at school. The boys all quarreled among themselves and Jacob flew into temper fits when his brothers teased him.

In my own interview with the father, I found him interested and co-operative. He seemed affectionate with the boys and joined in their sports. The mother, although fully aware of the problem, was unable to cope with it. Although she saw the need of steadiness and firmness, she could not force herself to carry through a program that would help the boy.

The house was a three story one on a side street in a poor neighborhood. Colored and white families lived in the block. There was much delinquency of all kinds roundabout, but the father claimed that he was unable to move from the district because of political ties. The interior of the house was often disorderly, with food standing on the table at all hours, but the furnishings were substantial and included a piano and victrola.

The widow of Mr. C's brother lived nearby and was supported by the Jewish Welfare Society. She had several children who appear to have been problems through lack of supervision. One, a twelve-year old, was definitely feebleminded. This boy used to come and spend the night with Jacob and according to Jacob, gave him much of his garbled sex information and some experience.

In the fall of 1921 the mother went to visit her family in a western city and brought back a three year old child, the daughter of her sister. The sister had gone to Denver because of suspected tuberculosis, had become involved with a doctor there and refused to return to her husband and children. The father of the children cared for them a short time and had deserted them in his turn. They were placed in an institution temporarily; then Mrs. C's mother took the little boy and she took the little girl. They adopted the child legally. Mr. C. extremely fond of her and the whole family united in spoiling her except Jacob, who was jealous and kept urging the baby to disobedience and naughtiness. The little girl appeared healthy and became more friendly and responsive, but usually looked untidy and even actually dirty. She was pretty and apparently normal mentally. Jacob seemed to become more reconciled to her presence in the home as time went on.

At the time of the child's adoption there were boarders in the house—friends of the family with a young baby. According to Jacob, the woman swore and the mother admitted this and finally sent them away. Jacob insisted that "Joe" and "Laura" were not married but the mother said this was a mistake on his part.

A young niece of the mother also lived in the house while attending business school. The girl's mother, Mrs. C's sister, visited frequently and was a very flashy, overdressed woman of whose behavior the family seemed to disapprove.

After continued study of Jacob and a trial of many types of treatment at home, with good intentions but little determination on the mother's part, foster home placement was decided upon. The family appeared to be prospering, bought a car and paid the boy's board in a supervised foster home. He had been away over a year when I last saw him, had developed considerably physically and had lost many of his fears and obsessions He had more self-confidence and had given up many of his infantile types of behavior. His temper fits were few and far between. He still seemed unable to keep up with school work even in the third grade, although his last psychological test showed him to have a mental age over ten years and an intelligence quotient of 116. His sex habits also persisted in spite of the caretaker's wise treatment. His parents according to my latest knowledge were resigned to his being away from home and felt that he had improved.

Case D.

A girl whose age was not given in the adoption petition was adopted by a man and his wife in July, 1919. The petition stated that the child had lived with the petitioners for eight years. The father gave consent. The mother had deserted in September, 1911. The petitioners were described as persons of respectability by two affiants whose addresses do not appear. The address of the petitioners was in a poverty stricken neighborhood. One of the social agencies which has had close contact with the child reports as follows regarding the circumstances of the case:

Marie was born November 9, 1908, in Lancaster. She was deserted by her mother when a few month old. Her paternal gradmother and the latter's husband (not the blood grandfather of Marie) brought her to Philadelhia where they made their home. They lived during Marie's infancy and up until she was about ten years old in a miserable looking shack in a dirty, narrow street near the Delaware River wharves.

When the house in which they were living began literally to fall to pieces they moved to a slightly more substantial dwelling at the address from which they adopted this girl a little while later. This is a blind alley in which are three or four very old houses, sadly in need of repair. The one in which Marie lived was particularly dirty and unkempt looking with broken windows stuffed with rags and paper and shutters falling from the hinges. Inside, the house was even more forlorn. Because the old grandmother, who has since died from cancer, was in bed and under the influence of a narcotic most of the time, she was unable to give any care to the house and the few rooms were cluttered up with an indescribable collection of old clothes, cooking utensils, battered and torn furniture and an all pervading foul odor.

The old people were very penurious. The grandfather worked for various produce merchants in the neighborhood and apparently was employed regularly, yet they spent little or nothing on food or clothing and Marie usually looked half fed and half dressed. Since the grandmother died and her next door neighbor no longer fears "getting into trouble with them," she has told that ever since they've lived there Marie has been "wild as a goat." She has been encouraged by the grandmother to go out and steal food, and Marie has often boasted to this woman that she could "swipe" a whole dinner without any trouble. She apparently feared nothing or no one, she came and went exactly as she pleased, stayed out until one and two o'clock in the morning. Neighborhood gossip had it that "she went with men," and got money for it, but a neighbor who is apparently quite fond of the child, said she wouldn't believe this.

The child's attendance at school was very irregular, she continually gave as an excuse for her absence, the illness of the grandmother, but instead of being at home with her she was playing on the wharves or hanging around the markets. There were many complaints to the grandmother about her stealing and when proof against the child was too strong, the grandmother made good the loss and begged that nothing be done about it.

The grandmother in spite of all these evidences of lack of interest on Marie's part continually excused her and lived in dread of the child's being taken away from her. She and the grandfather adopted Marie because they heard her mother was in the city and was going to take her. The father agreed to the adoption because his mother owned a few acres of land in New Jersey which she said she was going to leave to Marie and besides she was reputed to have quite a sum of money which she kept hidden in the house somewhere.

As Marie grew more wild, the father often tried to have something done. At various times he complained to the Court about Marie's delinquency and early in 1922 the home conditions were reported to the Society to Protect Children from Cruelty. However, he would never file any petition nor let anyone follow up on any of his charges, so Marie did not get into any real difficulty until she was caught stealing in a storage house in the neighborhood and was shot by the watchman. She was taken to a hospital where she was a model of good behavior and it was at this time that our agency got in touch with her.

A few months probation proved very unsatisfactory because the grandmother would not let the probation officer into the house and the child was never around. She was finally brought back to court and committed to a child placing agency for a foster home. She ran away from there and was then committed to Sleighton Farm from which institution she has run away four times.

The grandmother is employing a lawyer to have her released. According to her father the grandmother wants her to keep house for him and has stated "she will be useful to him in other ways," which the father took to mean that he has immoral intentions.

In spite of Marie's delinquency she is an attractive, likable youngster who makes an appeal to every one who works with her. Her Big Sister describes her as a "poor little street urchin who never had any chance to be anything else," and she wrote in her last report of a visit to the child at Sleighton Farm. "There is certainly good in her somewhere if it can be reached and if she had had even a fairly decent home and training she would never be what she is today."

Case E.

In March, 1924, a petition for adoption was filed and signed the same day. It stated that a man and his wife, living in a colored section of the city wished to adopt an illegitimate baby girl, ten months old. The adopting people are described as cousins of the mother, who signed consent for the adoption. It is stated that the child had been in their home six months. No information regarding occupation, income, family or reasons for the adoption is included in the petition, which was drawn and signed by a clerk of one of the courts. A physician and a clergyman signed as vouchers for this couple who are described as persons of respectability and property.

The report by the Society to Protect Children from Cruelty about this case follows:

"A complaint came to us early in August, 1924, that Mrs. E. neglects child very much; goes out to work every day; no one to look after baby. Our investigation revealed that Mrs. E. was a junk gatherer.

When on the first visit the agent entered yard through alley, Mrs. E. asked what was wished. Agent stated wished to talk with her. Mrs. E. immediately began to laugh and act crazily. This was in the hot summer time so we asked her to stop acting so and come in out of the sun. The first floor of house was piled up with junk—old shoes, old clothes, bits of metal, everything gathered from the streets. In the yard, which was also in a frightful condition, was a baby carriage which Mrs. E. stated she had used for gathering junk. On the second floor there was a large bed and baby's crib in one room; baby was fairly clean, due to fact, apparently, that Mrs. E. took five minutes before bringing it to see us. The child looked undernourished and uncared for; apparently needing fresh air and nourishing food. Mrs. E. gave the name of the mother and said the name of the father was unknown; stated that the mother left this child in her home and she legally adopted it. Mrs. E. stated that she was a widow; earned living by collecting and selling junk; showed agent record of Cradle Roll of a nearby colored church where child was entered. Stated she did not know where the mother was or anything at all about her.

Our agent made a complaint in Juvenile Court August 18, 1924. In September we made another call at the home. A neighbor said that Mrs. E. was out but that baby was in the house. We tried to gain admittance; waited one hour; heard no cries or sound of baby. A policeman, Officer ———— (colored) was sent to assist us and he entered house by window on the second floor. The door of bedroom was padlocked. Officer stated if he were sure baby was in there he would not hesitate to break lock, but neither agent nor officer hearing any cries felt it wise to do this. In another half hour Mrs. E. returned. Stated only been out of house a few minutes. Took officer and agent to second story room (one that was padlocked), opened the door and baby was found in carriage in frightful state; odor was overpowering. Agent threw open window. Mrs. E. took baby on lap; thought it a huge joke. Showed us card stating just came from City Hall and that adoption papers already signed. Officer said it was absolutely the worst sight he had ever seen and even though child had been adopted, would think it wise to remove it as soon as possible. Room cluttered and dirty.

After diligent search in City Hall we brought to light the adoption record of last March. When interviewed, the physician who vouched for the adopting woman said he did not know much of her—just knew her casually; had not visited the home or child personally since it had been in her care. Feels that she is erratic; that here was a baby nobody wanted and if Mr. (?) and Mrs. E. wanted it—seemed to be the best for giving child a future. Had never been in Mrs. E's home. If conditions are as explained he would certainly take steps at once to remove his name from petition.

We have a letter from the clergyman who signed, in which he says. "I really do not know who signed my name in City Hall for that baby. I wish to say that last month a year ago I was conducting a Revival Meeting; at that time a good many people came forward and joined the church. Mrs. E. was one of them. She never came any more. I never signed my name to any papers for the baby she has. I don't know her well enough for that but by the looks of her, to me, she looks as if she needs some care for herself". At the church the baby is not on Cradle Roll and Mrs. E. is not on Church Roll.

There was a medical examination made of the child, and a mental examination of the adopting woman, which show:

Child: Chest: Rachitic rosay. Abdomen: Distended. Potbelly. Rickets, malnutrition.

Woman: This woman mentally defective, high grade feeble-minded. Emotionally deficient, silly, irresponsible. Would not consider her suitable guardian for a child.

A bench warrant was issued for Mrs. E. on October 8, 1924. Neighbors made statement to the effect that she goes out frequently; never had baby with her. On October 22, 1924 testimony presented to court to effect that Mrs. E. left child home a great deal. The judge placed child on probation with instruction to probation officers that if they should at any time go down and see the child alone they were to take the child away. Mrs. E's actions in court room showed that she was mentally deficient. Carried on to such extent that judge did not want to take baby away from her in court room for fear of creating a scene".

The legal and social complications sometimes involved in adoptions of illegitimate children are well illustrated by the following case which happens to be one of the three in which the same child was adopted twice during the period studied.

In March, 1919, a married couple, "persons of respectability and character," adopted a sixteen months old baby girl.

The child was the illegitimate daughter of a married woman and her paramour. The mother had left her husband on account of domestic trouble. The baby was born in a maternity hospital and then boarded in a private family. The mother was employed as a telephone operator.

After the baby was born the mother and her husband reconciled their differences and resumed living together. The baby was advised and the couple above mentioned secured it. After it had been in their home for ten months they filed a petition for adoption. It was with the consent only of the mother. Neither her lawful husband nor her paramour gave consent or received notification.

Before many months had passed the adopting couple had separated. The natural mother later claimed that the motive of the adopting father had been to secure some means of keeping his wife at home. She said she had, without the knowledge of the adopting father, paid the adopting mother $3.00 per week board for the child both before and after the adoption. The adopting mother later denied receiving any board. However this may be, it seems clear that the adopting mother, after her separation from her husband one day took the baby to its mother at her place of work and left it with her. The mother thereupon placed it with her sister and after a few months petitioned that the adoption be annulled. She mentioned that its father had had no notice of the first adoption.

The annulment proceeding was begun in March, 1920, a year after the first adoption. In June of that year the adopting mother filed an answer to the petition for annulment. She alleged that the baby's natural mother was living, not with her lawful husband, but as a paramour with her husband, the adopting father: She maintained that the baby had been given back to its natural mother only temporarily because the adopting mother was ill. When she had tried to recover the child from the natural maternal grandmother where it was boarding the natural mother had had her arrested for a breach of the peace. She demanded the return of the baby to her.

Evidently she did not succeed in regaining possession of it and the adoption was revoked. Three years later the natural mother's sister and her husband filed a petition for this child in adoption. This time the mother again gave her consent. This time the baby's natural father received notice of the proceedings and apparently raised no objections.

Again the adopting parents are vouched for as persons respectability and character and again by people whose addresses are not given.

It is stated in the last petition that the baby had been living for four years with the foster parents.

In both petitions the baby has the same surname as its mother, who continues to use the name of her former husband.

It seems evident from the foregoing information regarding adoption by relatives that: (1) this type of situation appears in a fairly large fraction of cases, almost a third of all of the adoptions of minors, (2) adoption by relatives as a solution for the problem of illegitimacy is an almost negligible factor. (3) of the adopting relatives, stepfathers and stepmothers are an important element, (4) while the fact of relationship undoubtedly would and should operate toward favorable action on an adoption petition, it cannot automatically be assumed that such adoption will be in the best interests of the child. Investigation of the facts in each case would unquestionably show that in certain instances the community could not decree the adoption prayed for without doing violence to a proper regard for its duty to protect children from gross neglect and abuse, and without completely ignoring the dictates of ordinary common sense which, we take it, looks with some disfavor and some amazement on a solemn bestowal of the rights of custody of a child on persons obviously and hopelessly unfit.

CHAPTER III—"PRIVATE" ADOPTION BY STRANGERS

The preceding chapter reviewed the outstanding facts regarding 303 adoptions by relatives by blood or marriage. The adoptions were effected without the participation of either public officials, other than the courts, or of social agencies. But at least, the children remained in the hands of their own people. The 246 adoptions here reviewed are similar in that there was no scrutiny other than that exercised by the courts but in these cases the children went into the hands of strangers. These constitute Group III. The families from which they came, had had no contact with the social agencies using the Social Service Exchange. The information contained in the adoption petitions themselves has had to be the main source of the little light which can now be thrown them.

Age, Sex, Legitimacy, and Parental Condition of Children in Group III, and Marital Status of Adopters.

The following table indicates the age, sex and legitimacy of the children in Group III.

The 14 cases of doubtful legitimacy include that of a nineteen year old shell-shocked soldier adopted by a widow who was interested in him. Nothing seemed to be known regarding his parentage. One child had been abandoned at a very tender age on the door step of the petitioners. He is adopted under their name. Three children were secured through newspaper advirtisements and little knowledge regarding their parentage had come with them. Each of these was adopted under the name of the adopting people. One child had been taken into the family in Italy eighteen years before. One child had been left ten years before by a woman thought to be its mother in the home of the petitioner with the understanding that his wife was to act as wet nurse. This child was adopted under his name. Three petitions are wholly non-committal regarding the names of the fathers and in each instance the child has what appears to be the present or former name of the mother. In four instances the children had been handed on, one by a hospital, one by a children's institution, one by a physician, and one by a priest. In these latter four cases, three petitions state that the names of the parents are unknown and one gives the name of the mother but no information regarding her marital status or whereabouts. Two of these are adopted under the name of the adopting family and two have names the origin of which is unexplained.

In comparing the age grouping of the legitimate and the illegitimate children of this type of adoption it is striking that in such a large proportion of the illegitimate children (47 out of 81) the adoption had been effected before the child had completed its first year of life, and that in 76 of the 81 cases, before the child was six years old. It is probable that some of these are cases in which children were very quietly secured for adoption through the maternity hospitals and other institutions which do not register their cases with the Social Service Exchange and did not let their connection with the case appear in the adoption petitions.

In the case of the 151 legitimate children of this group there were 7 instances of plural adoptions of minors so that the number of adopting families should be reduced to 144. Of the 151 children involved, 28 were full orphans, 27 were fatherless, 59 were motherless, 30 had both parents living, 7 had parents divorced. Among the 28 cases of the full orphans, in 6 cases the guardian gave consent to the adoption, in 6 cases maternal relatives, in 3 cases paternal relatives, in one case a stepfather, in 3 cases, both maternal and paternal relatives. In 9 cases there were no signers.

In the cases of 52 boys and 81 girls married couples were the adopters. Three boys were adopted by single men; one girl was adopted by a widower; two boys were adopted by men with marital status not given, 2 girls were adopted by single women, 5 girls by widows, while 2 boys and 3 girls were adopted by women whose marital status was not given.

Among the 81 illegitimate children, 72 were adopted by married couples (30 boys and 42 girls). One boy and 2 girls were adopted by widows, 2 girls were adopted by married men with the consent of their wives, while 2 boys and 2 girls were adopted by men whose marital status was not given.

In the adoption petitions for this group of 81 illegitimate children, in 34 instances the name of the natural father is given, in 32 it is not given, and in 14 it is definitely stated to be unknown, to the petitioners. In one case both parents' names are said to be unknown to the petitioners.

Of the 14 cases with legitimacy undetermined, 8 (5 boys and 3 girls) were adopted by married couples, one girl by a widower, one boy by a single man, one boy and one girl by a man whose marital status is not given, one girl by a widow and one boy by a married woman. In 4 of these cases the mother signed the consent, in 5 there was no consent, in 2 the overseer of the poor signed, in one the guardian, in one "next friend" signed and one was signed by the child, who was eighteen years old.

Some Additional Information Set Forth in the Petitions.

Some idea of the social settings out of which a few of these adoption cases emerged may be secured from the following review of the material found in their petitions.

One child, a boy of eleven, was brought into the country from the Azores Islands by a naturalized American citizen who was a steamship master. While the name of his father is not recorded, it is stated that he died in the influenza epidemic in 1918 and that the mother was a cripple with three children to support. It is reported that she asked the steamship master to help the family and gave the boy to him as a helper on the boat. He seems to have decided later to adopt the boy and give him an education. A letter from the mother stating that she gave the boy to the steamship master was accepted as giving her consent.

An Italian widower petitioned for the adoption of a ten year old girl. This is the case mentioned above of the baby left with the petitioner's wife as wet nurse, the mother having then disappeared. He had two other children, one eight and one ten years old. His wife had died in the meantime.

Another petition announces that the widowed mother of a daughter, whose age is not given, expects to return to Ireland, and is willing that her daughter should be adopted by a woman, whose marital status is not given.

One petition mentioned above in two or three short paragraphs tells the story of a little girl advertised for adoption in a southern city before her birth. The petitioner, a man whose marital status is not given in the petition is reported to have secured the child for adoption on the day of her birth from a hospital, the authorities of which refused to divulge anything regarding the parentage and merely stated that she was an abandoned child. Two years later the hospital burned and all records were lost. For five and a half years the child was cared for in the home of the petitioner by a woman referred to as "Mrs." but there was no definite statement regarding her marital status. She consented to the adoption as next friend of the child. This petition was before the court two and a half months before it was signed.

A ten months old boy was given in adoption by a sixteen year old girl, not its mother. The mother, a resident of a neighboring county had advertised the child for adoption when it was a few weeks old. A girl, sixteen, married, had answered the advertisement and made arrangements with the mother to accept the child. According to the petition, the foster mother's husband deserted her very soon after she took the child and she was no longer able to care for it. Thereupon the petitioners took the child into their home where it had been five months when the petition was presented. The natural mother could not be located and the foster mother's counsel was accepted.

Two petitions were presented by an apparently well-to-do unmarried man wishing to adopt two apparently unrelated adolescent boys whom he was sending to school. In both cases the boys' parents were living and the petitions state that they were willing to give their consent because they were unable to support, maintain and educate the boys as the foster parent was supporting and educating them.

In one case a three year old boy was the subject of a contest lasting several weeks. His father, said to be mentally incompetent, was divorced from his mother, who had remarried. The father's sister had taken care of the child for some time and then had given it to a married couple apparently with the understanding on their part that they might adopt it. When they filed their petition, however, the aunt protested. The petitioners had secured the written consent of the mentally incompetent father and the divorced and remarried mother. The aunt was unable to establish any special status in the case and a decree was granted to the adopting couple.

Among the adopters in this group is an unmarried clergyman, a citizen of one of the Balkan countries. In 1921 he adopted a five year old boy whom he secured in a New England town through a response to an advertisement in a foreign language paper published in New York. Two years later he adopted a five months old boy whom he had apparently secured in New York when the baby was only a few weeks old. In the case of the first child, although the father's name is given, and it is reported that he had left the United States some time before and was subsequently killed in the war, the child was adopted under the name of the adopting parent. In the case of the second child the petitioner reports that his father and mother, apparently married, had given their consent.

Other petitions tell the story of widows and widowers who have placed their children to board and have drifted away so that the caretakers gradually gained control of their children. In one such case a Hungarian in this country, who after the death of his wife, had placed his child with the petitioners, for two years had sent money regularly to pay for the child's keeping. When, however, these payments had failed to arrive for a period extending over a year the petitioners asked the court for the child in adoption and the adoption was decree. Several of the petitions reported ill health on the part of the father or mother as a reason for giving up the child. Desertion of fathers and mothers is also mentioned in a few cases. The great bulk of the petitions account for the consent of the parents by the stereotyped phrase, "unable financially to support and maintain". Sometimes it is a widow or widower and sometimes this phrase is used when both parents are living.

Instances of Adoption in Group III.

While the natural families of these children were not known to social agencies, as much cannot be said for the families into which some of them went. The following case is an illustration:

Case F.

A Russian Jewish couple, 43 and 38 years old in 1922 adopted a little boy eighteen months old. The child's father had died in Russia before its birth. The widowed mother was living in the same neighborhood as the adopting parents at the time the adoption took place. The child was living with its mother at the time the petition was filed, but she was unable to support it.

The adopting couple were described as having "a large and substantial income" derived from the husband's independent business, a branch of the building industry. They had no children of their own. It seemed from the facts recited in the petition to have been an admirable home for the little boy, assuming that it was desirable to separate him from his mother.

Eighteen months later the wife complained to the Court of Domestic Relations that her husband was unfaithful and that although he took his meals at home, he left immediately afterward and spent his time in the society of other women. She reported that the husband paid the expenses on the house and gave her $21.00 per week for food and clothing. She asked that the court send a detective to ascertain what her husband was doing when away from home. When she was informed that the Court of Domestic Relations did not maintain a detective service she was willing to let the matter drop. Nothing further appears on the Municipal Court Record.

While it is impossible to judge whether or not the foster mother's charges against her husband were true there seems little doubt but that the home was far from tranquil and happy. Whether this couple were providing him with a better home atmosphere than could, with a little assistance, have been secured through his mother, seems somewhat questionable.

Illegitimate children who are placed in a foster family without the supervision of any public or private agency seem to be exposed to special dangers. The social and often the economic pressure on the mother to give up the baby immediately after its birth sometimes leads her to give it to almost any one who will take it. News of families who may want a child in adoption flows through unorganized channels. In some instances it appears that an illegitimate child finds its way directly into what would seem to be a very good home. One petition tells the story of an illegitimate child from a neighboring community that apparently, through some personal contacts, was able to reach a destination in a wealthy and cultured home bearing an honored name in Philadelphia. Such, however, was not the fate of all these children. Such instances as the following illustrate the kind of homes that some of them are taken into:

Case G.

The G. family which adopted a two weeks old girl in the summer of 1922 had had a checkered career. The wife, Mrs. G., was the youngest child of a family which had had long and active contacts with the charitable agencies of the city. Her father was a coal heaver and died of delirium tremens in 1906. Her mother was physically deformed and of unstable disposition. The mother had married the father in defiance of the wishes of her family who regarded him as of a lower social stratum than themselves. As her six children came, her relatives were frequently called upon to help. Her two older daughters were wayward; one drank excessively, both lived with men they had not married. When last heard from in 1920 one sister was in Philadelphia Hospital for the Insane. Her three sons seem to have done a little better, but the mother made life pretty hard for them. She went to court to secure court orders on her sons for support. When they were working and supporting her, she could not understand why the relief societies would not also contribute to her. One son in a fit of despondency over his inability to get work attempted suicide and a charitable society had to come to the rescue of his wife and child. Inquiry regarding his employment record revealed that he was thought to be lazy and a disturbing element among the other workmen. His married life was unhappy and finally resulted in a separation from his wife. Before her death in 1913 the mother was thought to be going insane. Her behavior was reported to be decidedly erratic.

The mother's death left Mrs. G., then a girl of sixteen, whose upbringing had been haphazard, to say the least, as a problem for the community. Her mother had drunk and beaten her, her sisters had brought men to the house. The home conditions had been so bad that social agencies had been trying to get custody of her for some time before her mother died.

After the death of the mother, Mrs. G. did not go to the home of any of her relatives, but instead, was put to board in what was thought to be a very good home for her. Her behavior there was, however a source of concern to the woman with whom she stayed. After a year she and the twenty year old son in this family, later described as a likeable young man, eloped to Elkton and were married.

In the next five years, three sons were born to Mr. and Mrs. G. When the youngest was two years old this family was thrown on charity. Mr. G. was sent to State's prison for a term of seven to twelve years. He had been a member of a band of automobile thieves. The family had moved to a nearby county, where he engaged in receiving stolen automobiles, dismantling them, obliterating the engine numbers, and otherwise altering them so they could not be identified. He then helped to dispose of them. When arrested he pleaded guilty to the charges. A few days before Christmas 1919 he entered prison to serve his term. After Mr. G. went to prison his family returned to Philadelphia where they lived with relatives and friends.

Five months later, May 1920, the Chaplain of the prison referred the case to a relief society. On the same day Mrs. G. reported to the society that she was ill and asked to have her three children placed. Inquiry at this time revealed that Mrs. G. was in a bad physical and nervous condition. She had recently undergone an abdominal operation. She had had an infection which one physician said was not of a specific character. Another said she had both gonorrhea and syphilis which he was sure she had contracted from her husband. Whatever the cause, the operation had rendered her incapable of having any more children and the physician agreed that she was neuresthenic and seemed to have a neurotic heart.

With regard to Mr. G. some people thought he must have been mentally unbalanced when he was receiving the stolen automobiles because he worked on them on the street where every one soon came to know what he was doing. When Mrs. G. remonstrated with him he swore and used vile language but his fits of temper soon subsided.

During the year 1921 a systematic effort was made to get Mr. G. out of prison. Although the district attorney of the county in which Mr. G. had been convicted and sentenced, thought that the sentence imposed on Mr. G. was not unduly severe for the number of offenses in which he was involved, he did not oppose the efforts of those who were interested in securing a pardon for Mr. G. He was moved by the family situation of a sick wife with the three small children and the Board of Pardons, considering the previous good character of Mr. G., the fact that the district attorney and the prison authorities were sure he had repented, the term of imprisonment which he had already suffered, the great need of his family for support and the fact that a good position was promised him on his release, late in 1921 granted a pardon. He had completed two full years of imprisonment.

In June 1922 Mr. and Mrs. G. petitioned for the adoption of a baby girl. The child was illegitimate and had been born in a hospital twelve days before. Its mother was a girl of twenty-one years who had apparently had no contacts with any social agency in the city although Philadelphia was apparently her residence. The adoption petition states that the child's father is unknown, although his name is recorded on the baby's birth certificate. On the second day after the petition was filed the adoption was decreed.

In September of 1922 Mrs. G. appeared at the probation department of the Domestic Relations Court and there related that she had left her husband that day on account of his threats to kill her and of his abuse and vile language. She stated that from the first year of her marriage her husband had been intimate with other women. She accused Mr. G. of having infected her with venereal disease so that she had had to undergo the operation. Since his release from prison he had beaten her, used vile language and abused her. He had stayed away from home all day, telling her he had been on errands.

Mrs. G. reported that the baby girl had been adopted because she could have no more children and their three children were boys. Mrs. G. thought that adopting the baby would "make a better man" of Mr. G. She now wished to leave him. The next day she telephoned that she did not wish to press the matter and asked the probation officer to speak to Mr. G. on the telephone. Thereupon Mr. G. accused Mrs. G's brother of having caused all the trouble and promised to "be good to the children."

A year later Mr. G. complained to the court that he and his wife had quarreled again, that his brother-in-law was the cause of all the trouble and that he would not do anything for his family unless his wife stopped communicating with her brother.

Since that time the case has been quiescent, so far as the Domestic Relations Court records show.

Not the least significant of the details of this case is the fact that the attorney employed to secure the adoption and his partner figured as the two vouchers for the adopting parents, who are described as persons of respectability and good character.

Case H.

In September 1923 a childless married couple, the man thirty years old and the woman thirty-five years old, adopted a six weeks old baby girl. The child was illegitimate; its mother had been confined in a maternity hospital and the baby had apparently stayed in the hospital until its adoption. The attorney who attends to the legal business of the maternity hospital acted for the petitioners in the adoption proceeding. Although the vouchers for this couple describe them as "persons of respectability and character, able properly to care for, maintain and support" the child, the addresses of these affiants do not appear in connection with their affidavits.

Less than a year before this adoption, the wife of this couple had appealed to the Domestic Relations Court for help in straightening out her domestic difficulties. She said her husband swore and was disagreeable and she could not stand him any longer. She seemed greatly disturbed because he rode back and forth to his work on the same suburban train with his stenographer. He was a purchasing agent with a salary of $40.00 per week.

The wife made no serious accusation regarding her husband's relations with any other woman but she objected to his meeting his stenographer on his way to and from his work. Just what she wanted the court to do is not plain. It appears that solely on account of this domestic situation the man left his position within a few days after the woman had appealed to the court.

The wife in this family seems to have been seeking a foster child for some years. Early in 1921 she replied to a newspaper advertisement of one of the child placing societies seeking new foster homes. When the visitor from this society called at the home which was at the same address as that appearing in the adoption petition, she found it in great disorder, poorly heated and poorly cared for. "In its furnishings and tone" it seemed to reflect Mrs. H's unstable nature. She "talked volubly but incoherently and kept jumping from one subject to another in such a way that the worker could not make a very satisfactory investigation. She stated that she had been employed in a hospital for the tuberculous in the South as an attendant for several years before her marriage."

The society reports it discontinued its investigation after calling upon one physician who knew the family. He felt the woman was incapable of giving a child proper care. The woman seemed to be suffering from some pelvic disorder. He said she never followed directions and characterized her as "scatter-brained." "It was quite obvious to us," writes the secretary of this society, "that the home was not fit for our purpose."

Case I.

A colored couple, the man thirty-nine and the woman twenty-four years old respectively, took a three months old illegitmate boy into their home. After they had had him two months they filed a petition to adopt him. Two persons living in the same neighborhood, one a physician, made affidavits that they were persons of respectability and property. The petition does not give the age or occupation of the foster father. There is no reference in it to race or religion. After about seven weeks delay the decree was granted.

Four months after the adoption was decreed the wife applied to the Court of Domestic Relations for assistance in making her husband either come home and live with her or give her $5.00 per week for the support of the adopted child. She related that she was a chamber maid, that she was not living with her husband and that he was living with her sister with whom he had irregular relations. She had had her sister placed under arrest which had resulted in the sister's being committed for thirty days. The sister was soon released on bail, however.

When, a few days after the wife's complaint, the husband came in to tell his side of the story, he expressed the conviction that he and his wife could not get along together; "there is no use trying;" he had tried his best but they "cannot do it." The record closed with his promise to send his wife $4.00 per week regularly for the support of the child after he got a job which he was seeking in New Jersey.

It might seem that an order on the child's own father to pay his own mother to keep him would have been a soultion of the child's difficulties more in accordance with modern ideas in the care of illegitimate children. Certainly this adoption undertaken on the initiative of this couple did not secure for him a normal home or, it would seem, did it appreciably enhance his welfare.

Case J.

A married couple whose address is omitted in the petition to adopt, were given a twenty-two months old boy three days after they filed their petition in 1921. They are described as persons of respectability by the two affiants, whose addresses are also omitted. The petition contains no information that would indicate anything about the character of the people and their home.

The records of the social agencies had, however, at that time a great deal of enlightening information. The family consisted of a husband at this time nearly forty years old, his wife nearly forty-seven years old, who had been married before, and one daughter fourteen years old.

Nine years previously the family had taken an illegitimate child and at about the same time had appealed to the Salvation Army for help on the ground of sickness in the family. The Salvation Army asked one of the relief societies to go in but the family was found not to need material relief.

Not long afterward an anonymous complaint was made to the Society to Protect Children from Cruelty that the foster child was not receiving proper food.

In April of 1917 the man, who had at one time worked as a street car conductor, was arrested on the charge of disorderly conduct and indecent exposure. He was committed for thirty days to the House of Correction.

In August 1919 the Society to Protect Children from Cruelty again received a complaint. It alleged abuse by the father of the twelve year old daughter. Neighbors had heard excitement in the house during the early morning hours. The girl was heard begging the father not to touch her and not to turn down the light. Stories were rife in the neighborhood of indecent practices of the man toward his daughter.

The visitor for the Society to Protect Children from Cruelty found that the woman kept a very dirty and untidy house. She was known as a drinking woman who told fortunes. The man and the woman were known to quarrel and fight continuously. The situation was found to be such that the Society filed a petition alleging neglect and improper guardianship and recommended that the children be removed and placed in foster homes with an order on the father for their support.

The court left the children with the woman, put a support order on the father who was also ordered to behave himself toward the children. The case was put on probation with the court and the Society to Protect Children from Cruelty withdrew.

In January 1921 the boy taken in 1912 died suddenly of broncho pneumonia. His death certificate is signed by the Coroner.

In October 1921 the family took the boy, whose adoption is described above.

At Christmas 1923, this family appealed to a relief society for a basket of food and for clothing for this little boy. When in January 1924 they were asked to send the little boy to the Sunday School maintained by the relief society, they again dropped out of sight.

The type of family and home into which some of the illegitimate children are going is illustrated in Cases K and L. These seem to be neither conspicuously fit nor spectacularly unfit homes.

Case K.

In the autumn of 1919 a man adopted an illegitimate baby girl five weeks old. The name of the father of the child was stated to be unknown. The foster father had been married five years but his wife did not join in the petition. The petition stated that they had no children of their own.

The vouchers for the man refer to him as a reputable, upright and conscientious man. Their addresses are not given.

During the week intervening between the filing of the petition and granting of the decree, the wife appealed to the American Red Cross for service. The husband was in the United States Navy and the allotment and allowance checks were delayed. The woman told of having a very small baby but she made no reference to the fact that it was adopted!

On the child's birth certificate it is recorded that the mother was a sixteen year old factory operative. There is no information regarding the father. It is stated that the mother "does not know" the name or other facts called for. The child was born in the mother's home.

The mother and the grandmother signed consent to the adoption.

A few weeks after the adoption took place the representative for the American Red Cross visited the home. She found the Government checks had arrived and that the woman was taking in lodgers to supplement the income.

Case L.

In June 1923 a three weeks old baby girl was adopted by a young couple. The petition revealed nothing about the home, the occupation of the foster father or whether or not they had any children.

From other sources it was learned that this couple had been married in 1917 when the wife was fourteen or fifteen years old. The husband saw service on the Mexican border and later overseas. He was wounded and gassed and had been disabled to a compensable degree by a nervous condition. He was treated in several Government hospitals and finally recovered sufficiently to be accepted for Government training. He seems to have suffered from nervous irritiability and seizures.

The wife was not very well and seemed "difficult" and non-communicative to those who were trying to help them. Her mother seems to have had a comfortable little home into which she offered to take these young people. At first they spoke very disparagingly of her, but after several months of living in rooming houses they decided to accept her invitation. They were living in this home when they took the baby.

Very little is known about the mother of the child. The birth certificate discloses that she was thirty-one years old, and a clerk by occupation. Her address is the same as that of the adopting family. The baby was, however, born in a hospital. The same physician who attended her vouched for the good character and reputation of the adopting parents.

The birth certificate reveals nothing in regard to the father and the adoption petition states that he is unknown.

Case M.

In November 1920 a petition was filed by a colored couple for an illegitimate boy then nearly eleven years old. The original petition was defective so a supplementary petition was filed February 1921. The couple had been married twenty-seven years, the husband was on the payroll of the City as a laborer in one of the pumping stations at a salary of $114 per month. The petition stated that the child had been with them for over a year. The adoption was decreed upon the filing of the supplemental petition. The mother had given consent and the father was said in the petition to be unknown.

From the social records made during 1920 and 1921 it appears that the boy's father, who was known, and his mother had lived together intermittently. Later the mother married another man. She boarded this child with various people, among others, the adopting couple. She persuaded them to adopt him. After that she occasionally visited him and his foster parents but would not disclose her address.

After the first petition was filed and before the adoption was decreed, the boy, who seems to have given the adopting couple trouble from the beginning, was arrested on a charge of incorrigibility. He was put on probation with the adopting people. The adopting couple seem to have been upright and industrious people who tried as well as they could to care for the boy. The wife worked outside the home and supplemented the husband's earnings. They were of southern origin and had little education. They had no children of their own. A nephew about the same age as this child seems to have lived with them. He had attended school regularly and was not retarded.

The adopted boy presented many problems. At the age of eleven he had an intelligence quotient of 72 but as he had never gone to school regularly, the meaning of this is not quite obvious. He had already developed a number of bad habits of one kind and another. Among them was the habit of running away. He seemed to be able to tell plausible tales when on these expeditions. People usually fed him, sometimes gave him money and he had a generally good time.

The adopting mother was at home so little that he was able to do very largely as he pleased. The foster parents attempted to control his behavior by shutting him up in the house but this seems only to have stimulated his desire to roam.

Six months after the adoption was decreed the boy was in Juvenile Court as a delinquent and the adopting people were asking that other plans be made for him. His case was disposed of by giving him to one of the children's agencies and putting an order on the County for his board.

Since that time he has been in several foster homes and has kept up a regular practice of running away. He has been picked up several times in railroad stations after midnight.

It seems clear that a study of this boy at the time of his adoption would have disclosed the wide discrepancy between the problems presented by him and the resources of the adopting parents to cope with them.

Placement of Children from Maternity Hospitals.

Mention has been made above of the fact that hospitals sometimes help in arranging these adoptions but do not officially participate. Officials of hospitals in their individual capacity seem to have assumed considerable responsibility for helping to bring about these adoptions. A rather difficult problem is presented by such activities. It is a delicate question as to how far an institution which accepts maternity and children's cases for purely physical care and then permits its employees as individuals to engage in the placement of children, should be permitted to dodge all responsibility for these activities, as was done in some instances when the Children's Commission investigators inquired at such medical institutions. It would seem that the institution ought to take cognizance of such activity and either assume responsibility for it or prohibit its employes from using their official connection with the children and the patients to carry on what is later declared to be a purely private transaction. Case H cited above illustrates this type of subterranean traffic in children, as does the case mentioned in Chapter I in which members of the hospital lent their assistance in an attempted case of fraud.

CHAPTER IV—"PRIVATE" ADOPTION BY STRANGERS (Continued)

Age, Sex, Legitimacy and Parental Condition of Children in Group IV and Marital Status of Adopters. (Natural Familes Known to Social Agencies)

As has been explained, this group of 176 cases (Group IV) was split off from the group just discussed on the basis of the fact that in all of these cases the natural families had made some kind of contact previous to the adoption with one or more of the social agencies using the Social Service Exchange. The agency had, however, no part in the adoption. Although this is in a sense, a somewhat arbitrary division, these families do represent a group within which the organized social agencies of the community had accumulated some information. In this group are 87 legitimate and 89 illegitimate children.

In the case of the 87 legitimate children of this group, 9 were full orphans, 17 were fatherless, 30 were motherless, 17 had both parents living, and 14 had parents who were separated, in most cases by desertion.

Of these 87 children, 30 boys and 49 girls were adopted by married couples; one boy was adopted by a married man; one girl was adopted by a widower; 3 boys were adopted by married women separated from their husbands; one boy was adopted by a single woman; one girl by a woman whose marital status was not given, and one boy by a man whose marital status was not given. Among the 89 illegitimate children whose parents were known to social agencies, 35 boys and 48 girls were adopted by married couples; one boy and 3 girls were adopted by widows; one girl by a single man, and one boy by a woman whose marital status was not given. In 53 of the 89 instances the name of the natural father of the child is given. In 19 it was not given and in 17 it was said to be unknown.

The agencies which have known the natural families of the children of this group include relief societies, the Municipal Court, the Society to Protect Children from Cruelty, agencies for the foster home placement of children, hospital social service department, the Department of Public Welfare, the Visiting Nurse Society, the Travelers' Aid Society, the American Red Cross, and others. The stories which lie back of the giving of these children in adoption include all varieties of misfortune and of personal inadequacy on the part of the parents. In every case, however, the agency which had been dealing with some of the problems in the natural family had nothing to do with arranging the adoption. In some cases children were placed to board with families who later adopted them rather against the agency's advice. So far as adoption itself is concerned, these transactions seem to be quite as unsupervised as those in the group immediately preceding.

Instances of Adopton in Group IV.

As in the group previously discussed, some of these children have found their way into homes which would be classed as among the best in the city. Others were not so fortunate.

Case N.

Four days after they had filed their petition a childless married couple were given a two year old boy in adoption. The petition stated that the child's father was dead; his mother, a resident of a small city in the central part of the State, signed the consent. The vouchers, whose addresses are not given, described the adopting couple as persons of respectability and property. The petition stated that the child had been with them for a year.

Both the child's family and the adopting family were known to several social agencies at the time the adoption took place. The child's father had been a crane operator, and had died in the influenza epidemic leaving a wife and two small boys. For a while the mother's nephew stayed with the family and supported them, but after two years he wanted to get married so some other provision had to be made. The mother had to go back to work and appealed to a local social agency to help her arrange for the children. The six year old boy was placed in an orphanage and the year old baby was sent from the central part of the State to Philadelphia, for foster home placement. Here he was placed with the couple who eventually adopted him.

Their home is described as consisting of five rooms in an "old but not bad" house in the southern section of the city. The home was neatly kept and fairly good. The husband, thirty-five years old, was a dock builder. He is described as being a good, honest, steady, clean type of man. The wife, thirty-one years old, was a good-hearted, simple woman who took good care of her house. The husband's schooling ended with the fifth grade, the wife's with the fourth. Both had had to work from an early age. The wife apparently could bear no children and they were anxious to have a child in their home.

Without consulting the agency which placed the child in the home, they set about to secure the adoption. About ten days before the application was filed a representative of this society visited the home. She found the child in the care of a neighbor, an old woman who reported that the foster mother was working in a bag factory because her husband could not work. He had "a perforated lung" resulting from overlifting two months previously. The doctor had ordered him to rest for two or three months.

The neighbor mentioned to the visitor that an adoption was pending.

On the twenty-first of the month, the adoption was decreed.

On the same day the man went to a well known chest clinic. There he was diagnosed as having fibroid tuberculosis with positive sputum.

On the twenty-fourth of the month an investigation was begun by one of the children's societies which had received an anonymous letter dated the eighteenth. It called the society's attention to the fact that a man with consumption had a child in his possession and mentioned a physician who could tell more about the case. The visitor found the man at home. He explained about his injury but made no reference to having been examined for tuberculosis at a clinic. A visit to the private physician resulted in the assurance that the man did not have tuberculosis.

Three days later the man consulted a second well known chest clinic where he was diagnosed as having a moderately advanced case of pulmonary tuberculosis.

Ten days later the family was referred to a relief society for assistance.

About eight weeks after the adoption the foster father was admitted to a State tuberculosis sanatorium. He stayed only two weeks and left, against the advice of the Physician in charge, with his condition unimproved. Three weeks after the man left the sanatorium the foster mother appealed to the society that had placed the child in their home to take care of him for a little while. She said that her husband was suffering with tuberculosis and could not live much longer and that she had to go out to work. She did not want to relinquish the child permanently but she had to have temporary assistance.

When, about three weeks later, an attempt was made to find the family, it was found to have moved from the address given. Inquiry among neighbors near the place to which they moved elicited the information that the woman had taken the child to visit some of her relatives in New York and that the husband was to go to "some sort of institution."

Case O.

In the spring of 1924 a colored woman, forty-four years old, filed a petition for the adoption of a thirteen year old girl. The petition was drawn up by the clerk of the court and the adoption was decreed the same day. The woman's marital status was not given nor did the petition contain any information regarding her home, income or family responsibilities. The clergyman and the physician who vouched for her signed the usual statement describing her as a person of respectability and property.

The child's father had been dead ten years and the mother signed the consent.

This woman was found to have been an extensive record with several social agencies. She had been married twice. By her first marriage she had three children. The Juvenile Court had a record of all three. One daughter was sent to an industrial school. The son was placed in a colored orphanage and the second daughter had been committed to a children's aid society in a neighboring State.

The woman and her first husband had appealed for relief. At that time the second husband was a boarder in the family. The second husband died in 1921.

The woman engaged in running a boarding home for babies. This activity brought her into collision with the authorities. A license from the Department of Health is required and the Society to Protect Children from Cruelty has the legal right of entry and inspection.

From October, 1922 to July, 1924, the Society received seven complaints against this woman's baby farm. At least three of these complaints came from three different agencies interested in the welfare of children.

After investigation which revealed that the sanitary conditions were unsatisfactory, this woman's application for a license was refused in January, 1923. In June of that year she again applied for a license. Inspection showed the place in a bad condition. The place was dirty; the babies, covered with flies, were sitting in the yard. A heap of soiled diapers near the children was covered with flies. At this time two or three women reported that their children had died while in this woman's care. Some of the babies were at this time found to have raw ulcers from neglect.

The neighbors stated that the woman was "out a good deal" and that they understood that the twelve year old girl the one that was adopted in March, 1924, did the washing for the lot of children. Children eight and nine years old were drafted into the care of the babies.

Although it had been continuously in touch with the situation, in June, 1924, the Society made another careful investigation which resulted in the filing of a petition asking that the babies be removed from this woman's care. All the neighbors were complaining that the babies cried day and night, that they were not properly cared for, and that five older children were doing most of the work.

The number of babies in this woman's custody has varied from time to time. Once there were sixteen. In May, June and July, 1924, there were ten. Sometimes the names of the children were known; sometimes they were not.

As a counter move against the petition of the Society to Protect Children from Cruelty, in July, 1924, this woman, having already received one child for adoption, asked to have two children committed to her care. She asked for orders on the County for their support.

Rather curiously this woman seemed to have enjoyed the favor of several physicians and a clergyman, who recommended her highly to the Society to Protect Children from Cruelty.

During the summer of 1924 this Society found that the woman had gotten rid of almost all of the children temporarily. In November, 1924, news came to the Society to Protect Children from Cruelty that money was being solicited for this woman's place. Visitors have not been able to effect an entrance lately, but it is thought that there are no babies there at present.

Case P.

In March of 1919 a married couple, the man forty-four and the woman thirty-five, adopted a baby two years old. The family already had four children, two boys and two girls ranging in age from twelve to seventeen. The father was a bookkeeper, earning about thirty dollars a week. The same year the family began buying a home worth $6,900 through the building and loan association.

The parents of the adopted child had died suddenly in the influenza epidemic late in 1918. Four children were left. Their paternal grandfather and guardian on one day gave for adoption this child and a little girl of four years to two different families.

Late in 1922 this adopting couple were divorced. The wife reported that she had secured the decree on the grounds of cruel and barbarous treatment. Quarreling in the family seems to have begun in July, 1921, when the wife discovered that her husband was writing to another woman, and as she claimed, going to motion pictures where he was seen by the children with the other woman. The husband deserted and finally the wife got the divorce. In the settlement the husband gave the wife the equity in the home, a building lot worth $300 in a small town, and assumed several hundred dollars worth of debts. The three older children, living with the mother, gave her generous proportions of their wages.

Early in 1923 the wife went into court to secure an order on her husband for $8.00 per week for the support of her youngest child and the adopted child. The husband complained that the wife would not let him see the children and that she was prejudicing them against him. He was specially fond of the adopted child. He signed the agreement for $8.00 a week for the children. When the wife signed the agreement she let it be known that she would not let him see the children unless expressly ordered to do so by the court.

A year later the husband asked to have the order reduced to $4.00 as his own daughter had attained the age of sixteen. He was $48.00 in arrears at this time. He was advised to pay up the arrears before applying for a revision of the agreement. On payment of $25.00 of the arrearage, his order was reduced to $4.00 for one child but he was to pay $4.00 per week in addition to pay off the arrears.

The wife reported that the second son was seriously ill in a tuberculosis sanatorium and that she herself was working as a cashier in a restaurant from three to twelve P. M.

In July, 1924, the man had accumulated arrears to the extent of $69.00.

While the contracts of the agencies with families of this group of 176 cases are often not such that they can insure an influence either on the family or on the illegitimate mother to keep the child in the family or to use the best resources in the community for finding a better home for it, these agencies do have information which, if the courts cared to avail themselves of it, might greatly influence the action taken on an adoption petition. These are families about which the community through its social agencies had already accumulated information. Were the courts to utilize this information and these agencies in making decisions when petitions are filed, they could be far more certain of the results of their actions upon the family situation which lies back of placement of the child by its natural guardians and upon the child himself.

One case presenting some special legal, as well as social questions, should be briefly reviewed here.

Case Q.

In March, 1923, a man presented a petition for the adoption of a legitimate baby girl then nine months old. The man's position is given as one of some responsibility in the employ of a very large corporation and he is described as a person of respectability and property. His address is in a neighborhood of comfortable homes. The mother's consent is accompanied by the statement that "she believes that such adoption is not only for the benefit and welfare of the said child, but will help her materially by reason of the fact that she is neither in a position to properly provide for said child but cannot do so by reason of the fact that she is only seventeen years old and without funds." The petition states that the father of the child had deserted his home and habitation and was at the time a fugitive from justice. One of the vouchers for the adopting man is given as holding a responsible county office.

The Department of Welfare made an investigation and reported to the judge several circumstances which threw much additional light on the situation. It was fairly clear that the mother had left her home and husband in a small city in New York State and had brought the baby with her to Philadelphia. She claimed that her husband had mistreated her and had infected her with a venereal disease. The girl's mother, separated from her husband and living in a poor neighborhood, seemed anxious to have her give the baby away, though there seemed reason to think that since both women were able bodied and could work there was no great need for hastily disposing of the baby. The mother seems to have advertised thereby placed it with a family who were soon willing to turn it over to the petitioner who was married and without children. The man of this family soon filed the above described petition for adoption.

The investigation of the Welfare Department failed to substantiate the statements in the petition regarding either the criminal character of the father or the utter destitution of the girl and the Welfare Department refrained from encouraging the court to decree the adoption. Thereupon the adoption proceedings hung fire for several months.

Late in the fall the matter again came to the attention of the Court. A supplemental petition was filed in which the wife of the petitioner now joined. The Welfare Department which had been asked again to investigate reported as follows on November 15, 1923. The names of the parties have been replaced by descriptive terms:

The home of the petitioners is desirable and they are giving the baby excellent care. They are Catholics and the baby is the legitimate child of its parents. They are Protestant. The mother left her husband in New York, and came to Philadelphia to reside with her mother (whose name and address are given).

The child's mother is vacillating in her decision, at one moment being anxious to place the baby for adoption because she feels that the petitioners can give the child more advantages than she can and in the next breath changes her mind and doesn't wish to give it up.

The baby's father has followed her to Philadelphia, She saw him in June and three times in August when he made advances to her. She is very bitter against him because she claims that he infected her with a venereal disease. She claims that he is well educated, an accomplished musician and is capable of making a good living.

She has told us that in June he entered her mother's home, demanded to see the baby and threatened them if they gave it up for adoption.

We have followed up your directions and have notified the young mother to locate her husband and to have him report to you in your chambers. I trust that he will do so.

The baby's paternal grandmother is a property owner in.....New York and the father's relatives there evidently do not wish the baby adopted since the child's mother journed to....., New York, in the early summer to see them and assure them that the baby was still in her mother's house. This assurance, however, was false since the petitioners had the child.

While in ....., New York, the father was able to support a car, according to the wife's statement.

A day or so after this report the young mother signed the following statement: "After careful consideration I, ..., have decided to surrender my baby ..... to Mr. and Mrs. .....for adoption." Signed and signature witnessed by two persons.

The reference in the report of the Department of Welfare is the only evidence of an effort to notify the father. Six days after that report was written, the adoption was decreed.

The direct placement of the illegitimate children by their families, known to social agencies, brings up a special point. In most instances the contact of these mothers were with agencies which, had it seemed advisable, would have directed them to the best means of finding a suitable adoption home for their children. The effort of the mother independent of the agency is illustrated in the following cases:

Case R.

In February, 1922, a widow adopted a twenty-one months old girl. According to the petitions the mother, deserted by her husband about nineteen months before, had boarded her baby at a children's institution but was no longer able to pay the baby's board. The petition was drawn up by a clerk of a court (not the court granting the petition) and two neighbors, evidently living across the street, made affidavits that the adopting parent was a person of respectability and property. The mother signed the consent.

Records of social agencies show the following facts regarding the situation: About twelve years before this incident the mother of the child had, at the age of fifteen, been forced by her maternal grandfather into a marriage with a man who deserted her after a few weeks. She bore him a son. Several years later, without being divorced or otherwise freed from her husband, she began living with a young man three years younger than herself. She bore two children to him. Soon after the birth of the second child, the subject of the adoption record, the paramour deserted. In the petition the impression is given that the parents were lawfully married. Such, however, was not the case.

The mother had boarded the child in several places, for a while, with the woman who later adopted it and for some time with an institution caring for infants. She had her other child with her and kept house for a man said to be old and not interested in the children.

The adopting mother here called Mrs. R., was a widow forty years old. Her husband, a barber, had died of paresis about ten years before in the Philadelphia General Hospital. He left two children, a girl then five and a boy two and a half years old. A life insurance policy of $500.00 came to the widow. The mother evidently worked at day labor from that time on until 1914 when she appealed to the Mothers' Assistance Fund. It was found, however, that she still had left enough of the insurance policy money to disqualify her for then receiving mothers' assistance.

In making her application for this help she was uncertain as to dates and addresses, and was unable to produce her marriage certificate. She explained that many of her possessions had been burned at a former place of residence. She stated that she was not on friendly terms with her husband's family and that her own nine brothers and sisters who lived in a nearby county helped her very little. At the time she had been living for five years in two rooms above a Mission. This Mission was in charge of a man and his wife who evidently were befriending Mrs. R. at this time.

In the fall of 1921 Mrs. R. moved for the adoption of this child. It seems that after the baby's mother had placed it to board with her and then had taken the child away and placed it in the institution above mentioned, Mrs. R. and her children, the girl now seventeen and the boy fourteen who had grown very fond of the baby, missed it very much. Mrs. R. visited it in the institution.

One day she learned from some one at the institution that a friend of the president of the institution was interested in adopting a child. Immediately she got in touch with the mother, secured her consent and began proceedings to adopt it. The next thing the institution knew, a demand was made upon it to hand over the child to this woman. It learned that, though a petition had been filed, the decree had not been signed. Thereupon it asked that an investigation of the adopting home be made by one of the children's agencies.

When the visitor from this agency called upon Mrs. R., late in September, 1921, the latter would not take her to the family's quarters on the third floor but insisted upon their staying downstairs for the interview in the large hall of the Mission.

Mrs. R. explained that her two children were at work in factories and that she was boarding a year old child for its mother who was separated from her husband. These combined resources seemed to her a sufficient warrant for assuming responsibility for the baby. The people in charge of the Mission seemed not to approve of the plan to adopt the baby but on the other hand, did not attempt any coercive measures to stop her.

The investigator at this time reported that it was evident that the man and his wife at the Mission had provided for Mrs. R., in many ways for a long time and that she had grown quite dependent upon them. She explained that a provision had been made in their wills which would enable her to continue "always" to live in the house rent-free. She said they had promised to remodel and enlarge the quarters in which she was living.

"The visitor" says this record, "tried to show" Mrs. R. "that it is neither fair to herself nor" the baby, "nor to her growing boy or girl to adopt the child, "that if the baby were to be placed for adoption it should be placed with people who could give it financial security in addition to all that Mrs. R. seemed to feel that she and her family could give. It was explained that in adoption the child should be safeguarded from future dependency and that when Mrs. R's own children married, as they would in all probability, it would be unfair to ask them to help in the support of this child while they were trying to provide for their own families. It was pointed out that as Mrs. R. advanced in years she would undoubtedly need all that she could save from her earnings and that the affection and care which she was seeking to expend on this baby could be given to the children who she was taking to board.

Mrs. R. was distressed, says the record, over having paid the lawyer ten dollars for drawing up the petition for adoption and felt that if she decided to go no farther in the matter whoever took the child should reimburse her for this outlay.

Mrs. R. is described as a large, stout country type of woman, simple and easily influenced. She seemed to agree with the last person who talked with her. In the whole matter Mrs. R. seemed unable to view her own home in the light of the child's future. The daughter of this family was also seen in connection with this episode. She seemed a wholesome looking girl of pleasant personality and neatly dressed.

The petition was granted nearly five months after this attempt to dissuade Mrs. R. from the adoption. All the dates except that of filing and signing the decree, which occurerd in February, 1922, bore dates late in the previous September.

Case S.

In February, 1919, a married couple who stated that they had been married ten years petitioned for the adoption of an illegitimate boy nearly six years old. They reported that they were childless and had a comfortable home. Nothing is revealed in the petition regarding the man's occupation, the ages of the couple or whether or not the child was then, or ever had been in their home. The mother signed the consent containing the statement that she had neither the health nor means to support the child. Two married women, whose addresses are not given, report that the petitioners are persons of respectability and property. The adoption was decreed four days after the petition was filed.

From other sources it has been learned that the adopting couple were thirty-one and twenty-five years old respectively. They had been married in Wilmington, Delaware, at the ages of twenty-one and fifteen years. The wife was Catholic and the husband Protestant.

Three years after the adoption the man, now thirty-four years old, was earning twenty dollars a week as an employee of a beneficial society in a poor neighborhood.

In the spring of 1922 his wife made complaint to the Court of Domestic Relations that her husband had brutally beaten her and that his irregular sex behavior caused much family trouble. After his beating her, he had been arrested for assault and battery and held under bail to keep the peace by a magistrate. He had also been ordered to keep away from his home. He was sending his wife $10.00 a week for the support of herself and their adopted child. She asked that this be assured by means of a signed agreement with payments through the Court.

When the husband came to tell his side of the story he admitted beating his wife and having been arrested. He explained his conduct on the ground that his wife had first thrown a cup of hot coffee in his face. He denied other statements and accused her of having gone out riding with other men. Later interviews brought out accusations by the wife that the husband made whiskey at home, brought his friends there to drink and to sleep off the effects. She said she had to undergo several operations in the hospital. She said that when she went out in automobiles with other men she was always accompanied by her father or sister.

The wife was at this time working in a factory earning $17.00 per week. She refused to accept an order of less than $10.00. When the case came into court the judge made an order of $6.50 for the support of the child. Since that time the man has fallen into arrears. Twice he said he had been sick for several weeks. His order was once reduced to $4.00 for the child with the understanding that he would pay an additional dollar a week on his arrears. In March of 1924 he was $89.00 behind; in April he was ordered to pay $15.00 down and continue at $5.00 per week. In August his arrearages amounted to $160.00 and in November to $218.00. The wife reported that he had left his position with the club and had been in New York for several months.

Case T.

In July, 1921, a married couple petitioned for the adoption of an eight months old illegitimate baby girl. The mother gave her consent stating that she was unable to support and maintain the child. According to the petition it had been in the home of the petitioners for seven months. The name of the baby's father was said to be unknown. It was stated in the petition that all the parties to the transaction belonged to one church. Nothing is given regarding the composition of the home, the man's occupation or income. The petitioners are described as persons of respectability by two persons whose addresses are not given. The decree was signed five days after it was filed

One year before this adoption went through, the woman in this family had applied to one of the children's agencies for a child. At that time she was thirty years old and her husband was forty-three; they were childless and she said she was lonely staying at home so much and wanted a child for company. Later in the interview in advising the visitor when she might call again, she told her she was seldom at home in the afternoon. The visitor described her as a loud, coarse woman, whose statements seemed to contradict each other. She enlarged upon the great affection and harmony existing between her and her husband.

Of the four people whose names were submitted as references for this couple, two said they thought they were all right but the other two, who were close neighbors said that the couple were noisy and quarrelsome, that they frequently drank, especially the woman.

After the adoption nothing was heard from this family for nearly two years. Then the woman appeared in the probation department of the Municipal Court where she stated that some months previously she had signed papers for a legal separation from her husband, which apparently gave him custody of the child, of whom both she and her husband were very fond. He had taken the child away and now she did know where it was. She claimed that she had been forced to sign these papers, and that now she did not want to live up to the agreement. She said she wanted her husband to let her stay at home and to bring the child back.

When the husband came in to tell his side he said that the child was at home with his wife but that his wife wanted to leave him and take the child with her. He did not want his wife to have the child because she would not take proper care of it.

It was learned that the man worked in a manufacturing concern and earned about $36.00 a week. He claimed to own a house in another part of the city.

It was also learned that the man was of a different faith from the woman and that they had been married ten years before with civil ceremony. If the petition accurately reported the religion of the baby's mother it now was clear that the man of this family was not of her faith.

The woman was asked to come into the probation department to talk matters over with her husband. He came but she did not keep the appointment. On this occasion he stated that his wife was an habitual drunkard; that she accused him of many things. She told the neighbors that he had threatened to shoot her and that he had been in a State hospital for the insane. He said his wife wanted him to give her the house he owned and $130.00 in cash and furniture. She was willing that he should have the child. These arrangements were satisfactory to him.

Six months later, early in 1924, he again reported to the Municipal Court that he was greatly worried because of his wife's drunken sprees.

Case U.

In 1920 an adoption petition was filed by a man for the adoption of a nine year old boy. The petition stated that the adopter was living alone in a rooming house, that he had a son learning the carpenter trade in a town near Philadelphia. He was reported to be doing his own cooking and laundry and living in two rooms on the fourth floor of the house. His occupation was said to be basket maker and farm hand. He was reported to have $400.00 in the bank. The boy's mother was dead and the father was said to be in poor health, unable to work and provide for the boy. Both petitioner and natural father have Russian or Polish names.

A memorandum by one of the city departments, not engaged in social case work, is attached to the petition. It reported that the father drank and abused the child, and that the boy threatened to commit suicide if forced to live with the father. He had been with the petitioner two months. The petitioner was reported to be fond of the boy, to have bought a violin for him and sent him to school.

An inspection of this house in 1924 revealed that it was a four story eight room lodging house in a very poor, low type lodging house section. Inquiries for the petitioner revealed that he had lived in one room on the fourth floor for which he paid $3.00 per month rent. The tenants in the house stated that after the adoption the petitioner had treated the boy so badly that neighbors complained and that thereupon the man moved away, it was thought, to the country.

It hardly seems conceivable that, had there been a real review of this boy's plight, he would have been disposed of by adoption to this man.

CHAPTER V—ADOPTION OF MINORS IN WHICH SOCIAL AGENCIES PARTICIPATED.

As compared with the types previously discussed this group of 214 adoptions (Group V) is in many ways different. It represents on the whole that fraction of the adoption cases in which there is now opportunity for the exercise of outside supervision and control. It may also represent the group in which adoption is to a limited extent stimulated in an organized way. A total of forty-one agencies are represented as participators in these proceedings.

Very frequently the children's agencies know of many people who wish to adopt children. It is the common experience of such agencies that they have numerous applications from families who, on investigation, turn out not to meet the standards of the agency, (or in consideration of the seriousness of the step decide not to adopt); but they also usually have a large number of approved homes than they have children in their care, who, they consider, should be placed for adoption. Their caution in placing children even in very good adoptive homes arises from two principal considerations. First, they wish to be sure that the permanent separation of parent and child is absolutely necessary for the welfare of the child. They recognize that a child's own home, though it may outwardly be far from ideal, often has in it assets for that particular child's future which no substitute could provide. With many people the desire to know their parentage and be with their own kindred is one of the most intense feelings they have. Many children's agencies, as they have watched the results of their activities and have come to reckon with some of these real but intangible aspects of life, grow more and more hesitant about permanently separating parent and child. They are also skeptical of the wisdom of adopting parents trying to keep their foster children in ignorance of their parentage; many people wish to adopt only on the condition that the child will regard them as its natural parents.

The second consideration which makes social agencies cautious is the desire to protect adopting families from unwittingly taking children whose heredity casts doubts about their ability to attain the mental and moral calibre necessary to meet the standards of life of the adopting home. They have come to think that it is hazardous and often tragic to place a child in a situation in which more will be expected of him than he can possibly give.

As contrasted with this scrupulous attitude held by high grade social agencies, there is the attitude of those other agencies who seek in various ways to be of assistance to unfortunate people. As the workers of these agencies minister to the immediate or other needs of their clients and help them through crises, they may lend their aid or sanction to the placement of a child for adoption and actually participate in such a step. There is a wide difference between accepting a child for care and placement for adoption and merely incidentally assisting a mother or a father to get in touch with some one who wants to adopt a child. Even in the latter case, however, some responsibility has been assumed. Acts by which this responsibility is assumed grade by imperceptible degrees from only a causal, almost unthinking participation over to complete assumption of responsibility. To measure the extent to which an agency has assumed responsibility has been found to be a difficult task. This has been discussed in other connections and will come up again.

A most difficult problem arises out of the fact that where there are conventionalized arrangements for the transferring of children from parents to other people, unless there is exceedingly careful scrutiny of these activities, they tend to become mechanical, to grow and actually to stimulate the practice of parents giving up their children when life seems hard to them.

It is generally agreed that forms of helpfulness which try to keep parent and child together are on the whole the wiser for society in the long run and the more truly beneficial to parent and child. There are, however, cases of social and personal breakdown so serious for the parent, that no amount of helpfulness would enable him to function even fairly satisfactorily. The wise and thoughtful social agency makes sure by careful investigation that such are the circumstances before it separates parent and child.

One of the marks of intelligent appreciation of what this responsibility means is the careful recording of the results of the investigation of the circumstances and of the considerations which led to taking this serious step. In trying to look behind the non-committal and stereotyped adpotion records, the Children's Commission has been able to secure additional information from social case records in 175 cases of the total of 214 assigned to this group. One agency furnished 54 of these schedules, another 49, a third 24, a fourth furnished 11. The remainder were scattering with no more than six in any one case.

The remaining 39 cases represent those in which, although the agencies and institutions do not keep social case records they appears as responsible participators in the proceedings (15 cases and 7 agencies), agencies no longer in existence (2 cases and 2 agencies), agencies which had patently participated but declined to acknowledge their part (8 cases and 3 agencies), agencies outside the county and State from which co-operation had not been secured at the time of writing this report (10 cases and 8 agencies), and finally, an agency which furnished 24 records, but was not able to find the records of 3 cases. In all records were secured from 21 agencies and not secured from 20.

Age, Sex, Legitimacy and Parental Condition of Children in Group V and Marital Status of Adopters.

Before taking up the analysis of the social case records it is necessary to review a few of the outstanding facts regarding this group of 214 children. One of the most significant facts about them is that only 48 were legitimate, 128 were illegitimate and 38 were of undetermined social status.

Among the 38 of undetermined legitimacy, 27 were foundlings; the others were children whose parents had neglected and deserted them or handed them over to people who in turn had passed them on. Thus the knowledge of the family and social background was reduced to vague rumor and apparently could not be or at least was not ascertained. In some cases of irregular unions only a judicial decision would fix the status of the children. Their parents may have had a relationship recognized as a marriage at common law and again they may not have had such a relationship.

The following table shows the distribution by age and sex of these three groups.

TABLE 8.

AGE, SEX AND LEGITIMACY OF CHILDREN IN GROUP V.

Age	Legitimate			Illegitimate			Undetermined Legitimacy
	Total	Boys	Girls	Total	Boys	Girls	Total	Boys	Girls
Total .	48	18	30	128	47	81	38	17	21
Under 1 year	...	...	...	16	7	9	...	...	...
1 to 5 years.	24	11	13	71	25	46	27	13	14
6 to 10 years	16	6	10	31	14	17	7	2	5
11 to 15 years	7	...	7	6	...	6	4	2	2
16 to 20 years	1	1	...	4	1	3	...	...	...

Of the 48 legitimate children, the parental condition shows 18 with both parents dead, 5 with father dead, 8 motherless, 12 with both parents living and 5 with parents separated. All but one of these 48 children were placed with married couples. One boy of four was placed with a divorced woman In two instances there were two children from the same family placed in one adopting home. The number of adopters is therefore, reduced to 46 for this group.

The 128 illegitimate children were in all but eight cases placed with married couples. Three were adopted by widows; two by single women; two by widowers; and one by a woman whose marital status is not given in the petition. The natural father's name is given in 38 cases, omitted in 38 cases, and stated to be unknown in 53 cases. It is interesting to note that in 15 cases in which the father's name is omitted, it is recorded with the agency and in 13 cases in which it is said in the petition to be unknown, it appears in the agency's record. In ten cases the name of neither parent is given in the petition. In four of these in which both names are simply omitted, both appear in the agency's record. In two, where the father's name is omitted and the mother's stated to be unknown, the agency's record shows both names. In two cases, where the petitions state that the mother's name is unknown and two in which it is omitted, the mother's name appears on the record.

As has been explained above, the large majority of the 38 cases of undetermined legitimacy repesent children whose social history has been lost through complete abandonment; 27 of these children are foundlings. The age distribution of this group is given in Table 9. All but one of these children were given to married couples; one was given to a married woman who had been deserted by her husband.

Supplementary Information Regarding Children in Group V

Owing to the fact that these cases were known to social agencies it was possible to make a systematic inquiry to ascertain how well the situation from which the children came and the homes into which the children went were known before these important steps in adoption were taken. Two schedules were prepared for this further inquiry in regard to these cases. One was designed to indicate the amount of information which the social agency had regarding the child's natural parents and its family situation; the other was designed to find out how much was actually known about the adopting family. The following points were covered in regard to the child and his family

The child's name, date of birth, place of birth, color, legitimacy
When and how agency acquired custody
Parent's names, present addresses, last known addresses, marital status, occupation, date of decease, desertion record, reason for relinquishing custody of child, health, mental condition.
When and to whom custody of child was transferred by father, by mother
Names and addresses of relatives, relationship to child, remarks
Property of child
Guardianship of property
Whether child was abused or neglected by parents
Health history of child; infancy, pre-school, 6 to 14 years
Mental condition of child; dates and scores in mental tests
Character traits of child
Whether psychiatrist or psychologist was consulted on behavior problems—name of psychiatrist or psychologist consulted School history of child
Institutional experience of child
History of foster home placement of child
How long child was in adopting home before application for adoption
Whether it was contented there
Remarks

The following points were raised with regard to the adopting family:

Adopting parents' name, color, present addresses, telephone numbers, previous addresses
Total number and date of visits to home, number of interviews with each adopting parent.
Whether all members of household were seen
Whether adopting parents own or rent home and for how long
Whether they are keeping house or boarding
Number of rooms in house
Each adopting parent's occupation, income, savings, insurance, mortgages and debts
Composition of household, relationship of members of adopting parents, ages, occupations, physical condition of members
Sanitary and neighborhood conditions—type of neighborhood
Whether there is a bath in the house
Whether there is a separate room for child
What kind of yard, porch, or playground space
General condition of house
Quality of housekeeping
Household help employed
How laundry is done
What school will be used
How far school is from home
What kind of school it is
Plans of adopting parents for child's education
Whether adopting parents understand nutritional needs of child
Medical services employed
Recreation, clubs, lodges, church connection of adopting parents
Adopting parents' reason for wishing to adopt child
How long adopting parents have been married
Educational attainment of each adopting parent
Temperament of each adopting parent
What adopting parents' physician says regarding their physical and nervous condition
Evidence of public spiritedness in each adopting parent
Whether either adopting parent has ever been arrested, if so on what charge, result of trial
Names and occupation of references, their relationship to the adopting parents
Whether references are otherwise known to agency
How much information was given to adopting parents about the child's background.

In analyzing the information on the records the aim has been not to form a judgement as to whether the adoption in a given set of circumstances had been wise or not, but rather to find out the extent of the information upon which the agency based its action. Opinions may differ, for instances, as to the wisdom of placing a child with people in straightened circumstances, but there can be no question regarding the advisability of knowing the amount and source of the income of the adopting parents before giving a child to them. Obviously not all of the points listed above were applicable to all of the cases. In summarizing and discussing the information from these records the children have been grouped so as to eliminate so far as possible these inappropriate items.

Supplementary Information Regarding the Legitimate Children in Group V.

As has been often noted, the adoption petitions rarely give information that throws light on the situation in the natural family which led to the relinquishment of the child. It now remains to be seen how much social agencies seem to know about the cases they lend their aid and assistance to promoting adoption.

In the 48 cases of legitimate children it was possible in 37 cases to secure additional information on schedules two and three described above. The following items of information were found to be recorded in the agencies' files in the indicated number of cases.

Child's name	37
Date of birth	37
Place of birth	30
Color	32
Legitimacy	36
When the agency acquired custody	33
How the agency acquired custody	35
Father's full name	36
Mother's full name	35
(In one case only the Christian name is given; in one only the surname)
Relatives mentioned in any way	28
Names and addresses of relatives	21
Exact relationship of relatives to child	24
Length of time in adopting home	33
Attitude of child toward the adopting home	32

In analyzing social case records it must always be remembered that the person actually handling the case usually knows more than is recorded. In this case for instance, obviously the workers handling the case know, or at least, had some idea, about the race or color of the family. And for immediate practical purposes probably their knowledge was sufficient. It is true, however, that questions which may arise later can give a great deal of trouble because there was not recorded contemporaneously with the event, such basic forms of information. The necessity at the present time to furnish a birth certificate for establishing age and citizenship rights touches the lives of a great proportion of our people and makes it very important to have a clear chain of identification for a child.

Minute investigation of family relationships and relationship and circumstances seems unnecessary to the accomplishment of the service for the family or the individual in some forms of social work. In the case of placing children for adoption, however, there is grave chance of doing an actual disservice to the child, to his family and to the adopting people if his family background is not thoroughly known and understood. It is, therefore, a serious question whether an agency which does not know the place of a child's birth and knows nothing about his relatives, can be doing an intelligent service in transplanting him into a new family.

Social investigations are not simple and are not easily made. It often requires much time and effort to accumulate the body of facts necessary for an understanding of the situation. It would also seem as if those agencies which are not equipped to make investigations of that kind would hesitate to assume so serious a responsibility. It would seem that an agency's consent to an adoption should be accepted only when the court knows that careful and painstaking investigations underlie that sanction.

A more concrete idea of the character and extent of the information which these agencies have may be gained from analyzing these records for children grouped according to some outstanding circumstances in their lives. It will be recalled that among the 48 legitimate children placed by agencies for adoption 18 were full orphans. Of these, the Children's Commission has been able to locate records for 15 children. Of these 15 records, 9 give the date of death of the father and 10 give the date of death of the mother. Of these 15 full orphans, 4 were turned over to the agency by relatives. Two of these children were from one family. In these four cases consent to the adoption was signed by the agency in two and in the other two cases, both children of the same family, two aunts gave consent. One child came into the hands of the agency through a pastor. The child's father had killed its mother and then had committed suicide. Consent for adoption in that case was signed by the agency and the guardian of the small amount of property which the child inherited. Another of these children was adopted with the consent of its maternal grandmother and the Director of Public Welfare. A child that had been turned over to the children's agency by the old Department of Health and Charities, was now adopted with the consent of the agency and the Director of Public Welfare. In one case the child, now eighteen years old, had been taken from an institution twelve years previously. It was adopted with the consent of the Director of Public Welfare.

The remaining 7 of these full orphans were children who had been committed to the agency by the Juvenile Court. Of these 7, 4 were adopted on the sole consent of the agency, one on the consent of the agency and the child's sister, one on account of the agency and the paternal uncle who was guardian, and in the case of one decree no consent was present, probably because the Juvenile Court had committed the child directly to the custody of the petitioners.

It will be recalled that of this group of 48 children, 4 were fatherless. Schedules were secured in 3 of these cases. The agency signed consent in all 3 of these. In one case, the mother had signed a statement which transferred the custody of the child from herself to the agency. In a second case, the mother was insane, and in the third case, the mother had deserted the child.

Schedules were secured in all eight of the cases of children who were motherless. In 6 of these cases the date of the mother's death is given. In one case, the record states that the mother had died prior to the acceptance of the child into the custody of the agency. In one instance the social case history contains no information regarding the mother's death although that condition is presented as a fact in the petition. The agency's record says that the mother disappeared after the child had been in its custody for some time and could not be located.

Of these 8 cases of motherless children, in 2 the father's consent was secured for the adoption, in 2 the father had signed a document transferring the custody to the agency, which alone gave consent in the adoption proceedings. In one case the father had deserted the mother and the agency signed consent alone. In one case the father had deserted the children after the death of the mother and the agency gave consent for the adoption. In one case the child had been committed to the agency by the Juvenile Court because the father was an alcoholic, and in this instance the agency signed consent. In the eighth case, the father, overcome with grief over the sudden death of his wife in the influenza epidemic, had asked the agency for assistance in getting care for his year old baby. He had then gone to sea as a means of recovery of his peace of mind. Inasmuch as he had not been heard from for eighteen months, the agency signed consent for the child's adoption.

Of the 48 legitimate children, 12 had both parents living; 9 schedules were secured for this group. In 8 cases the fathers were deserters. In 6 of these the mothers are characterized as unfit guardians. Two of these children came from the same family so that they represent five families in which both parents were deserters or unfit. One mother of four children is described in the agency's record as "weak willed, immoral and neuresthenic," another as "unfit morally" to keep her four children, whom she neglected. Another is reported to have deserted the child; a fourth is reported to have been in jail on numerous charges of adultery and is described as ignorant, careless, given to bad habits; while in the fifth case, the child had been removed from the custody of both father and mother by court order. In none of these 6 cases did the parents sign the adoption papers. In the case of the one family which provided two of the children, both parents had signed the surrender to the agency. In two other cases the mothers alone surrendered the children. In one case, the mother was serving a term in jail and the poor law authorities assumed custody. In the last case, the child was taken away from both parents on court order and the poor law authorities assumed custody. In both of these cases the custody was transferred to the agency from the poor law authorities and the agency in turn signed consent to the child's adoption. In one case the father was reported to be in the Army and the mother was living with her family who refused to take the child. The consent was signed by an agency which had accepted the child on a formal release and surrender.

Of the two cases in which the fathers were deserters and the mothers seemed to be fit guardians, one child adopted at the age of fifteen months was of Lettish parentage. The father, a merchant, had deserted the mother during her pregnancy. The child remained for four months in the hospital where it was born. It was then formally surrendered by its mother for adoption to a home finding society. The mother was in domestic service. When the child was adopted nearly a year later her consent was secured. In the eighth case, the child was adopted at the age of three years. The father had deserted the mother when the child was two weeks old. The mother had worked in factory where she earned $15 a week. For nearly two years she paid $5 a week for the baby's board. Finding it almost impossible to support herself and the baby, she finally signed its release to a children's agency. It was placed with a childless couple, who after fifteen months, adopted it. Only the agency signed its consent to its adoption.

Of the 4 cases of children in which the parents were separated or divorced, 2 schedules were secured. In both cases alone gave consent to the adoption. The parents of one child, fourteen years old at the time of the adoption, had left it in an institution and had not been heard from for twelve years. The child had been in the adoption home for seven years. The other child, five and a half years old, had evidently come into the custody of the institution at the age of a month. It had been with a wet nurse for the first year and in boarding homes from one to four years. It had been with the petitioners for seventeen months prior to its adoption. Its parents seem to have disappeared after placing the child in the institution. Efforts extending over two years were made to get in touch with them but they could not be reached.

Supplementary Information Regarding the Illegitimate Children Under One Year of Age in Group V.

Of the 128 illegitimate children 99 schedules were secured. The distributionin the different age periods of the children for whom schedules were secured is as follows:

Age Periods	Adoption Records	Schedules Secured
Total	128	105
Under 1 year	16	6
1 to 5 years	71	64
6 to 10 years	31	27
11 to 15 years	6	5
16 to 20 years	4	3

On account of the special circumstances which the problem of legitimacy presents, it has been decided to group these children according to age period rather than according to parental condition as was done in the case of the legitimate children. It will be noticed that the number of schedules secured is proportionately smaller for the children under one year than for any of the other groups. This arises out of the fact that agencies which participate in the adoption of very young babies are frequently those which hesitate outwardly to assume responsibility or which do not maintain a system of social case records. For the 6 cases in which schedules were secured the following items of information were recorded:

Child's name	6
Date of birth	6
Place of birth	6
Color	6
Legitimacy	6
When the agency acquired custody	3
How the agency acquired custody	6
Father's full name	5
Mother's full name	6
Relatives mentioned in any way	5
Names and address of relatives	5
Relationship of relatives to child	5
Length of time in adopting homes	5

In two of these six cases the mother had formally surrendered her child to the agency which in turn signed consent for its adoption. In one case a social service department of a hospital had assumed custody of a child of an out of town girl who had borne an illegitimate child, whose father was in religious work and was very anxious to avoid publicity. The second mother who surrendered the child was also living in an up-State town. This was her third illegitimate child. She had neglected and abused it so that a social agency there had sent it at the age of five weeks to Philadelphia for placement. In one case consent was signed by the maternal grandmother, the mother having died. In the 2 cases in which the mother and the agency signed the mothers were very anxious that secrecy be maintained. One was from another city and the second was a resident of Philadelphia. The first mother seems to have found the adopting family herself and the agency signed consent without knowing anything about their home. In the second case the mother and the father made an unsuccessful attempt to abandon the baby, who was then committed to the agency. It was given in adoption to a family well known to the directors of the agency and no investigation was made of the home. In one case the mother and the Department of Public Welfare signed the consent. The case came to the attention of the Welfare Department through a lawyer for the petitioners who had secured the child directly from the mother when it was only nine days old. The mother, a wet nurse whose family lived up the State, was twenty-eight years old and competent to sign the petition. It ssems that the lawyer wanted the Department of Welfare to investigate the foster home. The natural father was a non-commissioned officer in the Navy with a wife and family in the middle West. Some of the problems of these situations can be better understood, perhaps, from this lawyer's presentation of the case to the Department of Welfare. The adoption of this child at the age of a month seemed to him an admirable solution because then its mother's family would never know of her error, its father's wife and family would never know of his disloyalty and the child would never know it had been adopted as it was very young, "and when the petitioners moved they would never let the neighbors know it was not their own." The lawyer failed, however, to impound the record.

The adopting home seemed to be reasonably good, so no objection was raised by the Welfare Department.

Supplementary Information Regarding Illegitimate Children One to Five years Old in Group V.

For the 71 illegitimate children between the ages of one and five years at the time of their adoption, 64 schedules were secured. In the records the following items of information occurred in the indicated number of cases:

Child's name	64
Date of birth	64
Place of birth	59
Color	58
Legitimacy	63
When agency acquired custody	50
How agency acquired custody	60
Father's full name	40
Mother's full name	63
Relatives mentioned in any way	32
Names and addresses of relatives	28
Relationship of relatives to child	31
Length of time in adopting home	59
Child's attitude toward adopting home	50

In the large majority of these cases the agency alone gave consent for the child's adoption. In 34 cases the child had been formally given to the agency on release and surrender by the mother or custodian. In 13 cases the child had been apparently informally surrendered to the institution which consented to its adoption. In 6 cases the child had been committed to the agency by the Juvenile Court and the agency signed the consent to the adoption. In one case, in which the mother had died, the agency also signed. In 5 cases the mother alone signed. In 3 the mother and the agency both signed. In one, where the mother was dead, the father and the agency signed and in one case there was no consent from either agency, parent or relative.

Of the 13 cases in which the child had been informally surrendered to the agency which in turn gave it in adoption, in 7 the institution in which the child was born seems to have accepted its custody from the mother at that time but the petitions mentioned no formal agreement. In 4 other cases the mother or her friends or relatives brought the child to the institution and asked for its placement. Among these is the child of a thirteen year old girl whose mother brought the baby when one week old to the institution and paid a year's board for it in advance. In another case the child's mother had concealed her condition from her family until the night that it was born. For three months afterward the child was kept hidden from visitors. It was then brought to the institution. In one case the mother was in the almshouse in a small community and the child was sent to a Philadelphia institution by a clergyman. The last of these 4 cases is one which presents an especially serious problem in the matter of the adoption.

The petition recites that the father and mother bearing the same surname and presumably married had died one day apart in the influenza epidemic three years before the adoption petition was filed. A children's institution gave consent to the adoption. From the case records of an allied children's agency which investigates cases for this institution it appears that the mother was a fourteen year old school girl who worked in a candy store belonging to an older man having several children but not living with his wife. This man became the father of the illegitimate child. The names of the parents as they appear in the adoption petition consist of the mother's real name and a fictitious name for the father. It consists of his first name, the first letter of his surname appears as a middle initial, and the mother's surname has been given to him. There is no question about the identity of the case.

The mother, it would appear, was a child of good reputation who was imposed upon by her employer. Her mother worked in the tailoring industry and her older brother and sister were employed. Another older sister, crippled from tuberculosis, kept house for the family and could not take care of the child. It was given to the children's institution which placed it with the adopting family. It was learned that this adopting family was extremely anxious to conceal the fact of adoption but the record was not impounded.

It would seem that an adoption record of this character, probably made fictitious in the hope of protecting the mother and the child itself, is a serious menace to the happiness and peace of mind bothe of the child and its adopting parents. There seems little doubt but that fraud was practiced either on the agency which accepted the child and consented to the adoption, which seems improbable, or on the court decreeing the adoption. It would seem that if at any time any person for any reason wishes to challenge the validity of the adoption it would be comparatively easy to establish the fact that the petition contained serious perjury.

Of the 6 children of this group of illegitimate children between one and five years committed by the Juvenile Court to the agency, 4 had been deserted or neglected by the mothers. In one case the mother was dead and her family were unwilling to keep the child, and in the sixth case the mother had been ill and had left the child with an aged caretaker who had neglected it. The mother was of subnormal mentality, irrational and neurotic, so that the child was turned over by the court to an agency for placement.

Supplementary Information Regarding the Illegitimate Children Six to Ten Years Old in Group V.

Of the 31 illegitimate children between the ages of six and ten placed by agencies, supplementary information on the schedules mentioned above was secured in 27 cases. The following items of information occur in the indicated number of records:

Child's name	27
Date of birth	27
Place of birth	21
Color	21
Legitimacy	26
When agency acquired custody	25
How agency acquired custody	24
Father's full name	16
Mother's full name	24
(In one case mother's surname only is given and in one case her Christian name only is given)
Relatives mentioned in any way	14
Names and addresses of relatives	13
Relationship of relatives to child	12
Length of time in adopting home	26
Child's attitude toward home	23

In 8 of these cases the mother had formally surrendered the child to the agency for placement and adoption. In 7 of these 8 cases the agency signed the adoption petition and in one there was no formal consent of the agency appearing in the petition. In 13 cases the agency had apparently informally acquired custody of the child and on this basis signed consent for its adoption. In two cases the child had been committed by the Juvenile Court to the agency. In two cases the mother and the agency signed consent. In one case the mother signed alone, and in one case in which the mother had deserted, consent to adoption was signed by the agency together with the maternal grandmother and maternal aunt.

Of the 10 illegitimate children over ten years old schedules were secured for eight. On these the following items of information occur the indicated number of times:

Child's name	8
Date of birth	8
Place of birth	8
Color	8
Legitimacy	8
When agency acquired custody	7
How agency acquired custody	5
Father's full name	4
Mother's full name	7
Relatives mentioned in any way	3
Names and addresses of relatives	3
Relationship of relatives to child	3

In all 8 of these cases the agency alone signed consent to the child's adoption. In two of these cases the mother had formally surrendered the child to the agency for adoption. In one case the mother had handed the child over to unsuitable guardians soon after its birth. In one case the child had been placed by the mother with the agency but without a formal surrender. In one case in which the mother was dead and the grandmother was an unfit guardian the child had been committed to the agency by the Juvenile Court. In one case the child had been deserted and had been living with the petitioners for sixteen years. In one case the parents had abandoned the child after it had been placed with the agency, and in one case there was no additional information.

Supplementary Information Regarding Children in Group V of Undetermined Legitimacy.

Of the 38 children in Group V whose status could not be determined additional information about the agencies' dealings with them was secured in 33 cases. Inasmuch as a large proportion of these children were foundlings or abandoned children the usual type of social investigation was not made. In 21 of these 33 cases the agency assigned a date of birth, as otherwise the child would not have had a birthday. Among the other 12 cases several birth dates are questionable. All of these adoptions were consented to either by the children's agency or by the Department of Public Welfare.

In this connection it should, perhaps, be noted that the complete abandonment of a child by parent or caretaker is a crime, but that the practices of communities differ greatly in their efforts to minimize it, through a careful investigation to reveal the parentage of the child and to apprehend the person who has committed the crime. Some communities have taken a great deal of trouble to make it difficult to abandon children and have met with considerable success in finding the absconding parents. One of the simplest ways of identifying a very young baby which has been abandoned is to take it immediately to the maternity hospitals, usually only a few to each community, where the large majority of illegitimate children are born. Very often physicians and nurses recognize the baby as one discharged from their care within the previous few days. It is possible in that way often to reunite the baby with its mother, who in many cases has been found to have regretted very much her abandonment of the child and who welcomes its quiet return to her. Even where the mother has, however, disappeared and cannot be found, the identification of the child is very helpful. It is in that way possible to learn its name and birthday and something of its social background. The identification of foundlings may, in the beginning, be a time-consuming process which seems perhaps, not to be productive of any special results of value to the individual child. It is important, however, in that it soon becomes known throughout the community that the abandonment of a child is regarded as a serious matter and that detection will probably follow.

In regard to those children who are passed on from hand to hand and the knowledge of their parentage lost in that process, there are several devices for fastening responsibility upon those who participate in the process of passing a child on. One of these consists of the provision that only an authorized agency may engage in placing out children. A recent enactment in New York state that "An authorized agency, and no one else, is hereby empowered or permitted to place out or board out any child,—but the provision of this section shall not restrict or limit the right of a parent or relative within the second degree to place out or board out a child." In a number of other States similar unlicensed child placing is forbidden.

Supplementary Information about Adopting Homes in Which Agencies Placed Children.

The selection, investigation, and supervision of foster homes in which children are placed for adoption or as free homes and also for boarding children at the expense of public or private charity has come to be a specialized branch of social work. Methods for securing information about families in which a child is to be placed have been highly developed by certain agencies and in certain communities. For the Children's Commission to seek information which would indicate how much an agency knew regarding a home in which it had placed a child was not, therefore, an academic or an unprecedented inquiry. One of the simplest tests of foster home work for children is the amount of information which an agency has regarding the home into which it places a child. It was not, however, to test or compare the work of individual agencies that this inquiry was made. It was rather to see in what proportion of cases certain items of information were a matter of record with the agencies It will be recalled that of the 214 children in which agencies participated in the adoption it was possible to make this supplementary inquiry in 175 cases. In 2 instances because of intimate contacts between the adopting people and those in authority in the social agencies no records of any investigation in the home were made. The following figures refer, therefore, to 173 recorded investigations. Of these 147 record the fact as to whether the family owned or rented its home; 32 report the length of time that it had lived in its present quarters; 53 record a previous address for the adopting family; 106 record both the occupation and the income of the adopting father; 40 give the occupation alone; 89 give the occupation, usually "housewife," of the adopting mother; 26 cases give neither occupation nor income of the adopting father; 33 make reference to savings, 25 to insurance. In only 49 instances are there any references to any other members of the household; of these, 31 give the relationship to the adopting family; in 25 are the age or ages of these other members mentioned; in 13 their occupations, and in 7 their physical condition. In only 60 cases is there any reference to the type of neighborhood in which the adopting family lives; 91 give the number of rooms in the home; in 132 instances is there some description of the general condition of the house; in 108 cases the quality of the housekeeping is described; in 137 cases the fact as to whether or not the child is to have a separate room is recorded; in 104 cases the type of bathing facilities is described; in 85 cases mention is made of any yard, porch or playground space. In 91 instances the fact as to whether or not household help is employed is mentioned; and in 43 the manner in which the laundry is done is given. In only 63 instances is there any indication as to whether the adopting parents understand child feeding; and in 70 cases the medical services employed by the family are a matter of record. In 133 instances the church connection of the adopting father and in 142 instances the church connection of the adopting mother is recorded. The recreational interests of adopting fathers are described in 19 cases and the recreational interests of adopting mothers are described in 20. Membership in clubs and lodges is given in 8 instances for adpoting fathers and in 4 instances for adopting mothers. The length of time that the adopting people had been married is given in 78 instances; their reasons for wishing to adopt the child are given in 145 instances. Indication of the educational attainment of the adopting father is mentioned in 65 cases; of the adopting mother in 70 cases; the physical condition of the adopting father is recorded in 20 cases, and of the adopting mother in 34 cases; some indication of the temperment of the adopting father is given in 96 cases and the temperment of the mother in 112 cases. The opinions of friends and neighbors, clergymen, physicians and other persons who know the family, were secured in 143 cases; the occupations of these references are given in 55 cases; whether or not they are related to the adopting people is given in 78 cases. The amount of information regarding the child which was given to the adopting people is a matter of record in 88 cases. This item of information is important because the policies of the agencies vary from telling adopting people everything that the agency knows about a child to telling nothing. For the agencies which tell everything and for the agencies which tell nothing it may perhaps, be assumed that in each individual case they followed their general policy. As, however, it is practically impossible to follow the latter policy, whatever amount of information, whether it be little or much, given the adopting parents should be a matter of clear record.

On the whole, it can be said that in a comparatively few cases were all the pertinent items of information regarding an adopting home found on the records. In a very large proportion of cases the investigations seem not to have been consistently thorough. An investigation may contain matters of relatively minor importance and omit matters seemingly of more fundamental concern. The fact that in but 49 cases the membership of the family group is definitely described while in 108 cases the quality of the housekeeping becomes a matter of record seems to illustrate this point. While it doubtless is very important to know whether or not the child will have a separate room, which was recorded in 137 cases, it would seem not less important to know the type of neighborhood in which the child was to grow up, which was recorded in 60 cases. It is, perhaps, not an unfair conclusion to draw that the investigations of the homes into which these 175 children were going could, with some few exceptions, have been done much more thoroughly.

It should be said, however, that inadequate as some of these investigations undoubtedly are, the picture which is obtainable from the agencies' records is so much more complete than the picture of the cases in which there was no agency participation that this work of investigating homes does stand out as leading the way which should be followed generally in adoption cases.

CHAPTER VI—CONCLUSIONS

A review of this body of material regarding the 1022 adoptions, of which 778 were for children under ten years, discloses the following aspects of the matter as standing out and requiring special consideration:

(1) It is evident that adoptions which expose young children to neglect and hardship and an adverse and unsuitable home life do actually and will continue to take place if the adoption process continues to be unattended by the exercise of judgement and discretion on the part of those in authority to decree adoptions and if adoption by deed continues to be legally authorized. Without certain legally prescribed measures safeguarding the child's welfare, the exercise of discretion on the part of the individual judges and other officials is and will be of an uncertain nature.

(2) As adoption is now handled in the Common Pleas and the Municipal Courts it seems evident that:

(a) It is possible for perjury to go undetected in an adoption proceeding. There is no requirement in the process which challenges any fairly plausible statement which may be made in the petition.

(b) In a large proportion of the cases the statements of affiants for the character of the adopting people are of no value. The statements themselves are so vague, general and conventionalized as to be meaningless for any practical purposes. The people who make the statements are in the vast majority of the cases unknown to the courts in large communities. Sometimes they are obviously relatives of the adopting people and in other cases they obviously have some material interest in getting the adoption decreed. (See Case G.) Ordinarily they are not accessible to the court for further questioning about their knowledge of the adopting people. In a large proportion of the cases not even their addresses are a part of their affidavits.

(c) The judge, frequently seeing none of the parties at interest, has no basis of judgement other than what appears in the petitions and what is said by the attorney for the adopting people unless he especially asks that the parties be present or calls upon some outside agency, public or private, to assist him. This is infrequently done and then not always attended with satisfactory results. (See Case Q.)

(d) The practice of decreeing an adoption on the same day or the day following the filing of the petition permits of no inquiry and little exercise of judgment.

(d) The practice of presenting an adoption petition in open court and of filing it where it is accessible to the general public operates to keep at a minimum the amount of information therein contained.

(3) The process of adoption of minors by deed carries no safeguards for the child and seems to have no possibilities, legal or administrative, for the development of such safeguards.

(4) Adoption by court decree has possibilities of development and should be the one process followed in all adoption proceedings of minors.

(5) The Common Pleas and the Civil Division of the Municipal Courts seem not to be parts of the judicial system best adapted to handling the adoption petitions since they are courts with dockets heavily loaded with business which has little or no relation to the problems presented by adoption.

(6) The annual number of adoptions is so small that if properly placed in the judicial system the administration of this service would present none of the difficulties growing out of a great volume of work in which standards of performance must be temporarily, at least sacrificed in the interests of serving great numbers of people. It should be possible for a community of the size of Philadelphia to give adequate attention to the three or four adoptions which occur in a week. Smaller communities which have a proportionately smaller number likewise can give the matter the requisite time to do a thorough piece of work.

(7) The proper safeguarding of adoptions necessitates three kinds of measures. Changes of a fundamental nature should be made in the law itself. There should be a development of uniform rules for court procedure. A simple way of enabling judges to secure a clear and minute understanding, on the one hand of the child, his family and their difficulties, and on the other hand, of the conditions of the home into which the child is to be adopted and the motives of the adopting people must be worked out. In the large communities a person in the employ of the court might combine this with other social service duties connected with the court. In small communities the court could in all probability make a suitable arrangement with some social service agency to secure this service.

Even when all of the undersirable adoptions that can be prevented by laws and rules of court, have been thus eliminated, there will still be a considerable margin of cases in which a discerning judge, after careful examination of all the facts, will hesitate to decree an adoption. People of obviously unsuitable temperments, homes which labor under handicaps of disgrace, of members with physical and mental afflictions, homes of uncertain income, all present serious problems which can be solved only by having a careful and tactful handling of each case on the basis of complete knowledge of all of the outstanding circumstances. Where an adoption could hardly be refused outright on any specifically defined legal basis, it could be delayed or the would-be adopting parents could be dissuaded by a judge who helps them to analyze their situation and who has a wealth of experience from which to draw in dealing with them and their perplexities. Judges and investigators connected with the court handling adoptions should know thoroughly both the legal technicalities and the social and personal problems which attach to the adoption process and should give the clients the benefit of their advice.

Careful observation and study of adoption in which there were serious personal or social problems either in the adopting home or where the adopted child comes from defective or diseased parentage should form the basis of an intelligent handling of the adoption work of the community. It seems hardly necessary to add that such observation and study of the problem would require that those responsible for decreeing adoptions should utilize all the resources of the community for securing medical and social information regarding the parties concerned.

The duties of the Children's Commission are confined to suggestions to the General Assembly for the improvement of the statutes. Discussion of the development of rules of court and proper machinery in the courts for handling adoption cases does not come within its purview

The suggested revision of the statutes on adoption will be found in the body of the report of this Commission to the General Assembly.

There are two kinds of problems which are not, perhaps, an integral part of the adoption process, but which are so closely related to it and can be so greatly affected by a scrupulous and painstaking adoption procedure and personal interest on the part of the judge decreeing the adoption that they deserve mention here. The first of these problems is the handing on of children from one person to another. Primarily that practice should be stopped by other laws. It can, however, be greatly discouraged by refusal of courts to decree the adoption of children whose parentage is said in the adoption petition to be unknown except possibly in the cases of abandoned children in the custody of public authorities.

New Jersey has sought through legislation to put an end to the use of the press as a way for parents and custodians to dispose of children through private channels. An Act passed in April 1920 specifies that: "Any parent, guardian or person having the custody or control of any minor child or children who desires to offer through the medium of the public press to surrender custody and control of such child or children to any person or persons whatsoever, for the purpose of indenture or adoption, shall, before making such public offer, notify the Commissioner of Charities and Correction of this State of such intention and secure from him his consent and approval in writing; and any such parent, guardian or person who shall fail to comply with this requirement, shall be deemed guilty of "cruelty and neglect of children" and liable under the Act to which this is a supplement, to the penalty therein specified; provided, however, that this supplement shall not apply to the New Jersey State Board of Children's Guardians, or any children's home or orphan asylum or children's aid society incorporated under the laws of this State, and endorsed by the Commissioner of Charities of this State. Approved April 15, 1920."

The second problem refers to the separation of very young children from their mothers. This also is a practice which should be controlled by other legal and social measures. The adoption process, however, should be brought into harmony with those other measures. The public should not sanction through adoption a practice prohibited by laws in some States. Maryland prohibits the separation of a child of six months of age from his mother in order to place him in an institution or a foster home, except on a certificate signed by two physicians to the effect that the separation is necessary, on court order, or on consent of the State Board of Aid and Charities. Other States have similar laws.

The work of any adoption court will be greatly colored by the attitude of those in authority regarding the very nature of adoption itself. Is adoption to be regarded as the right of any citizen who can find some parent or agency willing to give a child into his keeping, or is it a privilege which he may be allowed to enjoy provided he can show positive assets of security and of home life, of an ability to train and educate a child? The social customs of the communtiy to a very large extent condition the results in the adoption field. If children are handed on carelessly, if parents are encouraged to give up their children quickly and easily, if advertisement of a traffic in children is permitted, if children's agencies place children in homes carelessly selected, a series of situations will arise in which would-be adopting parents will have been allowed to become attached to children whom they will insist upon adopting and any court will find itself at a great disadvantage in attempting to balk their desires. If, on the other hand, the community and the agencies dealing with this problem can so arrange that parents in distress will seek the aid and assistance of those who will help them and, when children must be given up, who will have extensive information about the homes of people willing and equipped to give high-grade home life to an adopted child, the problems of the court will be materially reduced. The responsibility of the court, however, in decreeing an adoption of doubtful benefit or positive harm to the child, remains, whether or not the community has failed to prevent an undesirable situation. Moreover, it would seem to be the duty of such courts not only to dismiss such petition but also to report the case to those authorities whose business it is to protect children from gross neglect and abuse.

The opportunity lies before the courts to make their adoption practice and policies so sound and so far-seeing as to affect many related aspects of the work of protecting children and promoting their welfare.

APPENDIX II

SUMMARY OF A STUDY OF THE PRACTICE OF ADOPTION IN ALLEGHENY AND TWELVE OTHER COUNTIES OF THE STATE

It has been mentioned in the body of this report that the State Department of Welfare generously used a part of its resources to assist the Children's Commission in studying the practice of adoption in the State outside of Philadelphia. Allegheny and twelve other counties were thus covered.

Miss Clara J. McDonnell, of Pittsburgh, travelled for the State Department of Welfare during the summer and autumn of 1924 from one county to another and collected information on 1187 adoption records. This material was supplemented with information secured through (1) several hundreds of letters of inquiry, (2) schedules sent to participating social agencies and (3) interviews with many public officials and child welfare workers throughout the thirteen counties.

Although the Children's Commission has not been able to print the complete text of Miss McDonnell's report, which is in every way as illuminating as the study of the adoption practices in Philadelphia County, the Children's Commission does take pleasure in printing herewith a summary of the findings. In preparing this brief statement of the high lights of her extensive study Miss McDonnell has not only set forth the facts as she has found them in the thirteen counties but she has also collated those results with the facts found in Philadelphia. These similarities and the differences suggest interesting modifications in the adoption practice found in the different types of communities.

SUMMARY OF A STUDY OF THE PRACTICE OF ADOPTION IN ALLEGHENY AND TWELVE OTHER COUNTIES IN PENNSYLVANIA

Child Care a Century Ago.

An old indenture paper from the files of the Department of Welfare of the City of Pittsburgh gives us an insight into the methods of care of dependent children in Pennsylvania just 96 years ago.

"Whereas John Doe hath become chargeable to the City of Pittsburgh therefore, this indenture, made the 7th day of March in the year of our Lord eighteen twenty-nine 1829, witnesseth that said John Doe, aged six years by and with consent of the overseers of the poor doth voluntarily put himself an apprentice to George Smith until the said John Doe doth arrive at the full age of 21, and shall serve his said master in all lawful business according to his wit, power and ability, and shall honestly, orderly and obediently demean himself toward the said master who will instruct him in the art and mystery of a Saddler, and will provide and allow unto the said apprentice competent and sufficient meat, drink, washing, lodging and wearing apparel, and teach him to read and write the English language and cipher through the five common rules of arithmetic. At the end of the said term George Smith shall make, provide, allow and deliver unto the said apprentice two full suits of clothing, one of which at least shall be new."

This provision for physical care and intellectual training, not to mention vocational guidance, which seems to have been in vogue a century age, appears very antiquated to us now. At the mature age of six this child was already destined to be a saddler. We have a record of 1837 of an infant aged 9 months who was indentured to learn the trade, art and mystery of a boat carpenter.

Purpose of this Study.

It was to learn something of the provisions for the care of the John Doe of 1924, who has been committed through legal adoptions to the permanent care of the George Smith of today that the Children's Commission undertook to study adoptions in Pennsylvania.

Scope of Study.

Two separate studies were undertaken, one by the Children's Commission, the other by the State Department of Welfare. The Commission, through its staff, subjected to study the 1022 adoptions in Philadelphia County granted during a five and a half year period. The State Department of Welfare, through its Bureau for Children, undertook to study the practice of adoption in other parts of the State. As it was obviously impossible to cover the remaining 66 counties the Department made an effort to select those which would be typical of the State as a whole. Urban industrial, mining and rural counties were chosen with a view to securing a cross-section of the social conditions throughout the State. This study has accumulated information on 1187 adoptions, granted in thirteen counties of the State during 1922-23, so that in all 2209 adoptions have been brought under scrutiny.

Comparison of Rates of Adoptions.

On the basis of a two year study we find that the fourteen counties, representing 58% of the population, have an annual adoption rate of one per 6,569 inhabitants. This gives approximately 1,327 as the number of adoptions throughout the State each year.

The number of adoptions for each of the fourteen counties for the years 1922-23 is as follows:

County	1920 Population of County	Number of Adoptions 1922-23	Number of Inhabitants per One Adoption Based on Annual Number Adoptions
Philadelphia	1,823,779	350	10,421
Allegheny (including Pittsburgh)	1,185,808	450	5,270
Luzerne (including Wilkes-Barre)	390,991	133	5,879
Westmoreland (including Greengsburg)	273,568	77	7,105
Berks (including Reading)	200,854	58	6,926
Cambria (including Johnstown)	197,839	96	4,122
Washington (including Washington)	188,992	50	7,560
Fayette (including Uniontown)	188,104	43	8,749
Erie (including Erie)	153,536	130	2,362
Dauphin (including Harrisburg)	153,536	53	5,778
Blair (including Altoona)	128,334	65	3,949
Armstrong (including Kittanning)	75,568	19	7,955
Huntingdon (including Huntingdon)	39,848	4	19,924
Clarion (including Clarion)	36,170	9	8,038
	5,038,507	1,537	6,569

The above table shows what a striking difference there is in adoption rates in the various counties of the State. Allegheny County has twice the number of adoptions in proportion to population as Philadelphia. Erie, with a little less than four times the population of Huntingdon County, had over thirty-two times as many adoptions. It would be a matter of considerable interest were it possible to determine with any degree of exactness the factors operating to produce this wide variation in adoption rates. Certainly we have come to know that, as a rule, a high adoption rate is not a credit to a community; that good social conditions operate to keep families intact.

Two maternity homes and two child-placing agencies are alone responsible for 125 of the 450 adoptions in Allegheny County. A commercial maternity hospital in Erie County, securing its patients from all parts of the country and placing its babies (71 of them during 1922-23) throughout an equally wide area, can easily account for Erie's high adoption rate, since these adoption decrees are all granted through the Erie Court of Common Pleas. All parties to the transaction are in some cases non-residents.

An effort was made to secure some evidence which would throw light on the reason for the small number of adoptions in Huntingdon County. It had but one adoption in 1923 and four during the two-year period. Various interested individuals throughout the county gave the following opinions on this point: Huntingdon is a rural county with a native white population; there is little real poverty there, and though the illegitimacy rate if fairly high, it is the custom for the unmarried mother to keep her child. This is made possible by the substantial financial settlements which are made through the court for support of the child born out of wedlock.

It may be that some will think the Huntingdon attitude represents a lower moral plane than that of the community which is so horrified by illegitimacy that it disposes of the babies through subterranean channels; but at least it shows that the separation of mothers and babies can be prevented if the fathers are made to help in the support of their own children.

After Erie County, Blair, Cambria and Allegheny have the highest adoption rates in the order named. The three lowest rates, with the exception of Philadelphia, are in the counties of Huntingdon, Clarion and Fayette. Philadelphia's rate of one per 10,421 is on the basis of the adoptions for the period studied by the State Department of Welfare, 1922-23. The rate during the five and a half year period covered by the Commission's study is one per 9,805 persons.

In Luzerne County the annual number of adoptions averages 66.5 for 1922-23 compared with 59.5 for a ten year period, with the lowest number 38, in 1915, and the highest 92 in 1921. It would be interesting to know in how far the high rate in 1921 was an aftermath of the influenza epidemic.

Re-Adoptions.

In the State study of thirteen counties there were two instances in which a child was adopted twice during the period covered. In both cases the second adoption was by the natural parents of the child. This brings the total number of adoptees from 1187 down to 1185. In addition to this there were nine other individuals who had been originally adopted prior to 1922 and were re-adopted during this period. Of this number seven were re-adopted by natural parents.

Refusal of Adoption Petition.

In only one case, involving two children in the same family, was there any record of a petition being refused. No doubt other cases occurred, but it was impossible to get any data on them, as the papers are filed only after the decree is granted.

No consent.

There were 31 cases in which there was no consent signed to the adoption. The majority of these were instances in which the child had been for some time in the foster home. The petitioners were evidently considered as 'next friend' whose formal consent was sufficient.

Lost Records.

Twenty-three records appearing on the indexes or dockets could not be found when asked for in the Prothonotary's offices. Six counties had from one to eight records missing. One county had eleven records out, 3 of which were found and returned to the Courthouse. It was impossible to locate the other eight. The officials responsible seemed quite undisturbed by the fact that these documents of such grave importance to the individual child seemed to be irrevocably lost.

No Impounded Records.

No records were found impounded, as was the one in Philadelphia County.

Time between Petition and Decree.

In examining the time elapsing between the date of the filing of the petition and the issuance of the decree, it was discovered that out of 1160 adoptions through courts 380, or almost 33%, were granted the same day as the petition was presented; an additional 391 (another 33%) were granted within less than a week; that is, in at least two thirds of the cases the time between the date of petition and date of decree was so short as to preclude any adequate investigation of the fitness of the adoption home.

Trial Period.

It is a generally recognized rule in progressive child welfare agencies that good adoption procedure requires the child's residence for at least one year in the home before the adoption is consummated. Evidently our Pennsylvania courts do not recognize this standard. In 309 cases out of 1096 adoptions of minors (28%) there was no record of the time in the adoption home, while almost 100 children were not yet in the adoption home when the adoption was petitioned. The shortest time recorded in the foster home before the petition was presented was two days, the longest forty-four years. The youngest adoptee was five days old; the oldest forty-four years. This contrasts with Philadelphia's figures of five days and fifty-nine years.

Illiteracy in Adoption Homes.

In forty-seven instances children were adopted into homes in which one or both of the petitioners signed their mark, not their name. In only ten of these forty-seven cases were the adopting parents relatives of the child.

Addresses of Affiants.

Out of 1160 adoptions by court decree there were 732 cases in which no address was given for the affiant; 392 cases had no affidavits. There were but 36 cases in which names and addresses of affiants were given.

Attorneys as Affiants.

It was interesting to note that in 19 cases the attorney who was engineering the case was also the affiant, testifying as to the character and respectability of the adopting parent.

Misstatements in Adoption Petitions.

Among the instances of misstatements on adoption records may be mentioned the case of an illegitimate child in which the same name was given for both the father and mother, presumably to make it appear that the child was born in wedlock.

Statistics of Age and Legitimacy of Adopted Persons.

The following table sets forth the figures showing the distribution of the persons adopted by age and legitimacy.

AGE AND LEGITIMACY OF ADOPTED PERSONS IN ALLEGHENY AND TWELVE OTHER COUNTIES IN PENNSYLVANIA 1922-1923.

Age	Total	Legitimate	Illegitimate	Undetermined Legitimacy
Total	1,187	642	421	124
Under 1 year ...	201	51	139	11
1 to 5 years	480	230	211	39
6 to 10 years ...	211	171	24	16
11 to 15 years ..	99	75	13	11
16 to 20 years ..	52	42	4	6
Minors—age not specified	78	28	28	22
Adults	66	45	2	19

This table, showing age distribution and legitimacy of adopted persons, indicates several interesting things. First, the majority of adopted children had not been born out of wedlock, as is commonly supposed. It also shows that in the thirteen counties studied, 892 of the total number of adoptees (just 75%) were ten years of age or younger. The similarity between the findings of this study and that of the Children's Commission's study, which shows exactly three-quarters of the Philadelphia cases were under eleven years, is striking. Another similarity is that in both studies the largest single group, between one and five years of age, represented exactly 40% of the entire number of persons adopted.

Legitimacy.

It will be seen that 642, or 55% of the individuals adopted were of legitimate birth, 35%, or 421, were born out of wedlock. A third group, 124, or 10%, in which legitimacy could not be determined, was made up of those cases upon which sufficient data were lacking to place them in either the legitimate or the illegitimate group.

Of the 124 adoptees of undetermined legitimacy, 12 were foundlings. In 41 cases the father's name was not given on the adoption record. In 6 cases there was conflicting data on adoption records and reports from social agencies. In 11 cases the adoption records stated that both parents were deceased, but did not give their names. In 4 cases the father was deceased, his name not being given. In the 50 remaining cases the data on the adoption records and schedules from social agencies were to meagre to indicate whether the child was legitimate or not. We feel fairly safe in concluding that a large proportion of all these children were born out of wedlock.

Parental Condition.

Of the legitimate children, only 101 were full orphans, 95 were fatherless, 203 were motherless, 77 had both parents living, 41 had both parents divorced or definitely separated. Thus only 9% of the children adopted (1121 total minor adoptions) were full orphans but the number from broken homes is many times greater. The similarity between these figures and those of the Children's Commission's study, which showed 95 full orphans, 119 fatherless, 179 motherless, 89 with both parents living, 69 with parents divorced or definitely separated, is pronounced.

Boys and Girls.

Oddly enough, the number of boys and girls adopted were almost the same (48% boys, 52% girls), although it is generally supposed that girls are in much greater demand than boys for adoption. The Philadelphia study showed a much larger proportion of girls than appears in this group. It is possible that the larger proportion of rural population in the thirteen counties accounts for the larger proportion of boys in the adoption cases there.

Types of Adoption.

Following the plan of the Philadelphia study, the cases were thrown into six groups. A comparison of the groups of each study may not be without interest, especially as the figures exhibit a similarity, with the exception of a few instances.

		Phila-delphia	13 Other Counties	Totals Phila-delphia	Totals 13 Other Counties
Group I	Adults			48	64
Group II	Minors adopted by relatives			303	268
	Legitimate	241	208
	Illegitimate	60	52
	Legitimacy undetermined	2	8
Group III	Minors adopted by non-relatives, cases unknown to social agencies			246	309
	Legitimate	151	208
	Illegitimate	81	52
	Legitimacy undetermined	14	49
Group IV	Minors adopted by non-relatives, cases known to social agencies but not engineered by them			176	76
	Legitimate	87	50
	Illegitimate	89	21
	Legitimacy undetermined	0	5
Group V	Minors placed for adoption by social agencies			214	443
	Legitimate	48	126
	Illegitimate	128	277
	Legitimacy undetermined	38	40
Group VI	Adoption by deed			34	27
	Legitimate	16	5
	Illegitimate	7	17
	Legitimacy undetermined	11	5
	Record impounded			1	0
				1,022	1,187

The interesting difference in the proportion of group IV is probably due to the fact that in many of the counties there are few social agencies and frequently no central registering.

The divergence in group V probably results from the artificial stimulus to adoption given by the commercial maternity homes in the western part of the State and also to the practices of some child placement agencies to operate largely in the country districts.

The Adoption of Adults.

No attempt was made to study adult adoptions but perhaps no case could better illustrate the laxness of the Pennsylvania adoption laws than the following which came to our attention:

Case I.

A New York man of wealth and prominence attempted to adopt in a New York court the family governess. He met with considerable opposition on the part of his children, who were given three weeks by the court in which to gather evidence to show why the petition should not be granted. During this time Mr. D. withdraw the petition and the judge appointed a lawyer to safeguard the interests of Mrs. D., a patient in a mental hospital.

The judge stated that it would be impossible to secure an adoption elsewhere without notifying the court of the action. It was stated that the New York petition had not been granted because it was impossible to secure the signature of Mr. D.'s wife.

Seven months later Mr. D. and the governess came to one of our Pennsylvania cities, appeared before the judge, had him sign the decree on the same day that the petition was presented, and left the city that evening. About two and a half years later Mr. D. died, cutting off his children in his will and leaving his estate to his wife and adopted daughter, the latter to inherit the entire estate on the death of Mrs. D.

Within a year Mrs. D. died and the children attempted to break the will. They contended that the decree was null and void and produced through "fraud and suggestion". The counsel for the defense stated that the adoption was secured in Pennsylvania because there was not so much red tape and admitted that neither Mr. D.'s wife nor children were served with notice of the adoption as this is not required under the Pennsylvania law. As the illegality of the adoption could not be proven, the contest was finally dropped after a compromise had been effected. Shortly afterwards the adoptee married her attorney.

During this adoption study an attorney in the city where this adoption was granted, explained apologetically that Pennsylvania was chosen by Mr. D. simply because its adoption laws are so much more lax than those of other states.

Adoption by Relatives.

About one fourth of the total number of adoptions were by relatives; in about 30% of these cases the relative was the stepfather. In just 60% of the cases the paternal or maternal relatives were the adopting parents.

In the State study, 55 of the 268 miners adopted by relatives were known to social agencies. In many of these instances the relationship was not specified on the adoption record.

Adoption by Strangers.

For a study of the practice of adoption groups III and IV offer a kind of crucial test of what will be permitted.

Group III includes those cases of minors adopted by non-relatives with natural families unknown to social agencies. Group IV comprises those minors adopted by non-relatives with natural families known to social agencies but without participation in the adoption by the agencies.

The outstanding fact of grave importance is the vast number of children who are adopted through our courts without adequate study of the home from which they come and of the home to which they are going. As at present constituted a judiciary body in Pennsylvania is ordinarily not equipped to render this service. If his decision has been based upon social findings certainly any judge would have hesitated to consent to the adoption of a child, the offspring of a stepbrother and his low grade feebleminded sister. The mother is blind and tubercular, now an inmate of Polk. In addition there is definite insanity in both her family and that of her stepbrother.

On the other hand, if the court knew nothing of the adoptability of that child, did it know more of the suitability of the adoption home in the following cases?

Case II.

A petition was filed in March 1923, for the adoption of three children aged 7, 9 and 11 years. and the following day the decree of adoption was granted. The children had been in the home of the foster parents for four years. They had been placed there by their father, Mr. R. after the death of his wife. Mrs. W. had been considered a very fine woman, much respected in the community. She kept a neat home and gave her children splendid care. Mr. W. was a steel worker who drank to excess and never supported his family adequately. He was also a gambler.

The affidavit in the adoption record stated that Mr. and Mrs. R. were "persons of character and respectability, properly able to care for, maintain and support said children."

Shortly after the adoption had gone through the case came to the attention of a welfare agency. Through an attorney representing the township school district the agency was asked to make an investigation; the children had attended but four weeks of school during the 1922-23 term. When the children did appear in school they were poorly dressed and very dirty.

In its investigation, the welfare agency found the home (a farmhouse) very scantily furnished, extremely dirty and most untidy. The yard gave the same appearance and the back porch was piled high with boxes and rubbish. The R. family was well known to the District Attorney's office; Mr. R. had been arrested a number of times. The directors of the poor had furnished relief for the family.

In August 1924, Mr. and Mrs. R. were arrested for bootlegging when the County Detective and a detail of State Police put an end to what was said to have been important source of illegal liquor. A large amount of liquor was confiscated and a fifty gallon still was taken. Mrs. R. threatened during this raid to turn the ferocious dogs loose but the County Detective warned her he would shoot the dogs.

Mr. R. was sent to jail for six months and a fine of $200.00 was imposed. Mrs. R. was given a suspended sentence. Their farm was sold at sheriff sale and the children were placed temporarily in a children's home.

Here they were given a mental and physical examination. The welfare agency had previously met with no cooperation from the adopting parents when they suggested the children be brought to the city for a physical examination.

Tony, aged 12 and Annie, aged 9, both in the first grade, were found to be mentally inferior but not feebleminded. George, aged 7, also in the first grade was found to be in the dull-normal group. It was stated that all three children showed lack of care and training and that in all probability there would be a noticeable improvement in mental development if adequate care were given them. The children were stated to be primarily cases for medical and dental care. Removal of tonsils and adenoids was recommended for all three of them and correction of defective vision for two. Annie was afterwards sent to one of the sanitariums as she was found to be tubercular.

Mrs. R., incensed at the separation from the children, kidnapped them one morning from the children's home and caused much excitement on one of the down town streets. Traffic was tied up for about fifteen minutes and finally the woman and the children had to be taken to the mayor's office. The children were returned to the children's home and Mrs. R. was sent to jail. The case was heard in Juvenile Court which ordered the children to be cared for at the children's home until Mr. R. serves his sentence and then the case is to be reheard in court and a new decision handed down.

Case III.

Norman was deserted by his father in March 1923 and placed by his mother in a children's home. In August of the same year, when just two years old, the child was indentured by the home to Mr. N., no mention being made of the adoption. Mr. N.'s wife was not a petitioner. Three weeks later the decree of adoption was granted without any consent being signed. A very abbreviated form or adoption record was used. It did not conform to the usual papers in any way. There were no affidavits. The time in the adoption home was not stated; the name of the petitioner's wife was not given. It was said that the child was "without parents, or other known relatives." All the information except the indenture was contained on one page having but one date, so that the petition, if it could be called that, and the decree went through the same day.

The report by the local Red Cross follows: Mr. N. has been a worry and trouble to this office ever since 1919. According to his records he has had quite a checkered career. When a small boy he had been for a number of years in the House of Correction in Messina, Sicily. He entered service June 14, 1917, and was discharged on account of misconduct. His discharge certificate is marked 'Constitutional psychopathic.' He has three names and seems to have as many wives though proofs of his marriage cannot be secured. His second marriage took place in Chicago November 24, 1919. On January 6, 1920, the Red Cross had a letter from Chicago stating that Mr. R. was being held in the county jail there on the charge of bigamy.

"After three months in the Cook County jail he was released as, according to his own story, nothing could be proved. The following July he was married under another name. A copy of this marriage certificate is on file in the Red Cross office. Three months later, he was in the penitentiary for forgery. He has been a great traveller and it is no new thing for him to be stranded away from home and to appeal for funds.

"On December 22, 1924, Mr. N.'s mother-in-law came into the Red Cross office and asked that the local officials write to the Red Cross at Washington to protect her daughter from her husband's cruel treatment. A letter from a neighbor had been received which stated that he has been treating his wife very badly and threatening to kill her if she tried to leave him. The mother claimed that she has sent her daughter money to come home on but that her daughter did not dare leave. She also stated that Mr. R. wanted his wife to give up the adopted child but as she had grown fond of the boy she refused to do so. The wife's relatives seem to fear the man exceedingly and do not want to come in contact with him. In fact every one seems afraid of him."

It was learned through another source that Mr. N. is a prosperous bootlegger and that it was felt that his mental stability would be assured so long as the bootlegging business remains as lucrative as at present."

An effort was made to learn whether prospective adopting parents who had been refused a child by a standardized agency could subsequently succeed in securing an adoption decree from a court. That such can easily occur is rather strikingly illustrated by the following case of an adoption granted just eight days after the third social agency had refused to place a child with this woman.

Case IV.

On October 4, 1921, Mrs. X. applied to a child placing agency for a child to adopt. Her pastor would not recommend her so no investigation was made. Two weeks later, October 18, 1921, she applied to another child-placing agency in the same city asking for a baby girl for adoption. Upon investigation it was found that she kept a large rooming and boarding house. The Room Registery of the Y. W. C. A. described the place as "Not a good rooming house." The woman stated she had been promised a baby from a maternity home and had purhcased $50.00 worth of clothing but the home had disappointed her. Mrs. X.'s husband was reported dead but it was learned she was divorced from him. The second child-placing agency would not consider her as a foster-mother.

Nothing daunted by being refused a baby by three different agencies, Mrs. X. speedily secured a child, presumably through the medium of a newspaper advertisement and on October 26, 1921, just eight days after the last refusal, presented a petition in the Court of Common Pleas for the adoption of a five months old baby girl. The decree was granted the next day. There were no affidavits as to the character and respectability of the petitioner, nor was her address or marital status given. It was stated that the natural mother was unable to support said child who had been "in the care of petitioner for some time"—less than eight days!

Advertising Babies.

It was impossible to get any accurate idea of the amount of advertising carried on throughout the State both of babies for adoption and of requests for children. A survey made of the files of the Pittsburgh newspapers which specializes in "want ads" showed that during a six month period twenty-five babies were advertised for adoption while in ten cases prospective foster parents were advertising for babies.

It is significant that in many of the striking cases of bad adoptions such as the following, the advertisement of the child figured more or less conspicuously. It would seem that an enactment making it illegal either to secure or to dispose of a baby through the medium of the newspapers would be in line with common sense measures of child protection.

Case V.

In 1918 a case was brought against Mrs. D. for assault and battery and neglect of a foster child. In the testimony it was brought out that for hours she would leave the child locked in a room; would neglect to feed it; that she got into a bad temper very easily and would then swear and beat the child. After investigation the court had the child removed from her home.

In August, 1920, Mrs D.. answered an advertisement in a newspaper, offering a child for adoption. On January 23, 1922, after seventeen months in the foster home the child was legally adopted by Mrs. D. and her husband. As usual the affidavits testified that the petitioners were "Persons of good moral character." It is known that Mrs. D. is a prostitute. The there affiants were an alderman of rather dubious character, the real estate man from whom the D.'s rented and the child's grandmother who had advertised it for adoption.

Later the grandmother was much upset when she learned that the court had already taken away one child from the D.'s. Apparently she was in ignorance of the "character and respectability" of the petitioners to which she testified in the affidavit. The natural mother of the child, who has been diagnosed as a high grade defective, is now on the waiting list for Laurelton. She is also syphilitic. The chance of the child's securing the necessary observation and care to overcome, so far as can be, the handicaps of its mental and physical inheritance, is not bright.

Need for Investigation before Adoptions Are Decreed, Especially in Certain Classes of Cases.

If the court had some means of having a thorough investigation made by a trained case worker could such an adoption as the following have occurred?

Case VI.

Margaret, aged fifteen and Ethel, aged thirteen, at the time of their adoption in 1923, came from a home with no moral standards nor were they more fortunate in the foster home into which they were adopted. Their family had long been known to various social agencies because of the flagrant immorality of the mother and the poverty and shiftless character of both parents.

In June 1923, the girls disappeared and the Juvenile Court was asked to find them. They were located by the probation officer the following September four days after their adoption had been consummated. The consent to adoption had been given by the natural mother and the overseers of the poor. The whereabouts of the father was unknown as he had deserted some time before. In the petition, however it was stated that he was dead and the mother unable to support the two girls. The probation officer made an effort to ascertain whether Mr. and Mrs. Y., who were caring for Margaret and Ethel were fit persons to assume the responsibility of adopting parents. The affidavit in the petition to adopt stated that the adopting parents were "persons of industry, good character, and reputation." They were local representatives of a national "rescue" organization.

In answer to a querry addressed by the probation officer to this organization, the national director replied that these persons were worthy and should be encouraged in their work.

A few months later the case came into court when complaints were brought against both man and wife by the children. From evidence given in court it would appear that the children, unaccustomed to decent living standards, were not shocked by the lewd behaivor of their foster parents but were merely resentful of their own forced participation in these orgies.

The man was sent to jail for three years, on being convicted of his crime, but he escaped after serving a sentence of a few months.

The special need of investigation by courts of those adoptions in which there has been no participation by a social agency of recognized standing, seems to be obvious. This point of view is not held, however, in all quarters. A director of the poor stated to the investigator that in his county the adoption cases engineered by the directors of the poor and by the Children's Aid Society and other agencies assured the children adequate protection; but with regard to "private adoptions" as he called those falling in Groups III and IV, "they are nobody's business and any mother has a right to give her child to whom she will without interference from others." The question of the rights of the child to protection and to at least a minimum of education and proper nuture seemed not to occur to him. Is the prevention of such cases as the following outside the interest of the public authorities, and when they fail, outside the legitimate range of interest of a private incorporated agency to promote child welfare?

Case VII.

Francis, aged thirteen, recently made a personal application to a social agency stating that her foster father had been having sexual realtions with her for the last two years. Upon investigation living conditions were found to be very bad. The foster mother corroborated the child's statements.

Francis had been legally adopted in May 1918. She was sold to her foster parents by her mother for a quart of whiskey.

Adoption Cases Known to Social Agencies.

In six counties, Allegheny, Luzerne, Dauphin, Berks, Cambria and Erie, the adoption records were cleared through the local Social Service Exchange in order to find out the contact which parents and foster parents had had with the agencies. In the other counties the leading social agencies were asked to run through the list of adoptions to identify the cases with which they were familiar. It was found that 81 agencies throughout the State had some knowledge of the various families but were in no way responsible for the adoption. Another 54 agencies had been directly connected with the adoptions, having either placed the child in the adoption home or signed the consent or taken both steps.

Reports were secured from the 81 agencies and schedules filled out from the records of the 54 agencies or children's homes which had engineered the 443 adoptions which fall in Group V. It was interesting that of the 54 agencies engineering adoptions there were 37 (15 children's homes and 22 agencies, if the directors of the poor can be included) who were responsible for only one or two adoptions each.

Of the 443 cases in Group V, schedules were filled out for 413 or 93%. In 413 instances the child's own name was recorded; of these, 12 cases were foundlings so the name was fictitious; 173 recorded the fact as to whether the adopting parents owned or rented their home; 27 reported previous address for adopting family; 220 gave both occupation and income of the adopter; 123 gave occupation alone; 144 gave occupation of wife; 59 told how long they lived in present home; 57 made reference to savings; 56, to insurance; 113 referred to membership of household; 105 to type of neighborhood; and 107 schedules the number of rooms in the dwelling; 133 stated whether or not the child had a separate room. In 144 cases there was some reference to the general conditions of the home and in 141 to the quality of housekeeping. In 127 instances the type of bathing facilities was specified; 85 schedules recorded the manner in which the laundry was done and 109 contained some reference to household help. In 113 cases it was indicated as to whether or not the adopting parents had any understanding of child feeding. In 80 cases the type of medical service employed was recorded. The church membership of the adopting father was recorded in 163 cases and of the foster mother in 120 cases. In 181 instances the length of time the adopting parents had been married was recorded. In 216 cases the reason for adopting a child was mentioned. In 120 instances there was some comment on the temperament of the foster father and in 111 on that of the foster mother. The educational attainments of the foster father were mentioned in 158 cases, of the foster mother in 152. References for the adopting people were mentioned in 183 cases and of these the occupation of the sponsor was mentioned in 110 cases. Only 162 of the 413 schedules indicated how much information was given to adopting parents when the child was placed with them. The date of the child's birth was recorded in 324 instances; the place of birth in 272 cases. The date when the agency acquired custody was mentioned in 92 cases; how the agency acquired custody was a matter of record in 213 cases; 367 schedules state whether or not the child is legitimate. The natural father's name is given in 229 instances, the natural mother's in 290. In only 156 cases is there any mention of relatives though it is difficult to understand how any children's home or agency can take the responsibility of placing a child for adoption without first having been in touch with the relatives to learn if a satisfactory adjustment could have been made within the family circle. The time in the adoption home was indicated in 235 cases and in 180 instances it was stated whether or not the child was content in the foster home.

It is a matter of interest that the number of cases engineered by social agencies in Philadelphia County during a five and a half year period (214) exactly totals the number in Allegheny County for the two year period, 1922-23. Something over twice the number of children were placed for adoption by social agencies throughout the thirteen counties (443) as in Philadelphia County (214). This may in part be accounted for by the fact that in the State study we find 121 children placed for adoption by two maternity homes. One of them, a commercial maternity home which the investigator found to have about 30 babies in one room about 14 by 16 feet with 9 babies occupying 3 cribs, engineered 71 adoptions in 1922-23. As an example of its type of placement work we might cite the following case.

Case VIII.

Olive, at the age of six weeks was adopted from this commercial maternity home. Some time later the foster family was reported to the Humane Society because of cruelty but the Humane Society officer was unable to locate them because they had moved. After inquiry the officer of the Society made a further effort to find the family and reported as follows: "Baby Olive is now 20 months old. She looked well-nourished but was not very clean. The foster father is a truck driver. The foster mother is a highly excitable woman, extremely nervous and was much wrought up over the visit; is the type who might easily become unbalanced. She should never have been entrusted with a baby. At present they are doing light housekeeping in one room and they are evidently the sort that moves from one furnished room to another and never establishes a permanent home. Mrs. X. stated there was no trouble in securing the baby; they merely presented two written references at the maternity home and were given the baby. No subsequent visits or inquiries were made by any one from the home to determine the baby's welfare."

Adoptions by Deed.

Of the 1187 adoptions of the State study 27 were by deed as compared with 34 in the Philadelphia study. Of these 21 were in Allegheny County, 2 in Erie, 3 in Luzerne and one in Washington. The other nine counties reported no adoptions by deed for 1922-23; several of the counties had had none for the last five years. Armstrong County reported one adoption by deed in 1924.

The 27 adoptions by deed represent the number which could be found in the records. One attorney expressed the opinion that there were many other adoptions by deed which had never been recorded and stated it as his belief that the neglect to record the deed does not affect in any way the legality of the adoption since the statute says: "It shall be lawful to record" it. Since, however, it has been held by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania that a deed adoption to be valid must be recorded in order to complete the proceedings and that the recording must be done in the lifetime of the adopting parent, this attorney can hardly be correct in his interpretation. His opinion is cited to show the vagueness which prevails regarding this process.

A deed of adoption is a legal instrument by which the natural parent transfers all his rights to his child and the adopting parent is given complete responsibility and control of it. It is similar to a deed of property and is sworn to before a notary public. This document is filed with the Recorder of Deeds where it is copied into the deed books, with records of mortgages, etc. A person may thus deed away his child with as little ceremony as he disposes of a bit of real estate.

In the 27 cases an effort was made to learn what factor had conditioned the choice of this method in place of adoption by court decree. Among the reasons given by the different attorneys were: Adoption by deed is simpler, easier, takes less time, is cheaper and insures more privacy. It was interesting to discover that 13 of the 21 cases in Allegheny County emanated from one commercial maternity hospital no longer in existence. It bore a very poor reputation. It was not at all an uncommon occurrence for children to be given to foster parents the day they were born. Investigation and follow-up work were unknown. The attorney who engineered the cases has since married the matron of the hospital. He gives as the reason for using the deed rather than the petition method of adoption that the adopting parents do not wish their neighbors to know the child is not their own and that by using deeds in many cases they are successful in carrying out this deception. He added that the mothers of these illegitimate babies do not care which type of adoption is used.

The following cases may throw light on the reason why some children are adopted by deed rather than through the courts. They certainly illustrate the total lack of safeguards thrown around the child and the danger to the child inherent in this archaic form of adoption.

Case IX.

In 1921 Mr. E. applied to a children's agency to ask for assistance in securing guardianship of Edith Marie, aged 21 months.

Through the divorce papers which his wife had filed against him he had just recently discovered that the child was neither his nor his wife's but was born to Martha H. April 14, 1919 in the City Hospital. In answer to the newspaper advertisement of Mrs. E. asking for a child to adopt, Martha H. brought her three weeks old baby to the E. home where, for a month she posed as the nurse of the child. The husband now accused his wife of deceiving him with regard to the baby so as the more easily to cover up the fact of her immorality. The visitor from the social agency reported Mr. E. as seeming rather unbalanced though Martha H. verified the statement that she was the mother of the child.

In the midst of the intensive efforts of the children's agency to get at the truth of the situation and to work out some fairly satisfactory solution, Mrs. E.'s divorce lawyer, who is known in the community as specializing in criminal cases from the under world, engineered an adoption by deed on January 18, 1921. This was, of course, unknown at first to the agency or to Mr. E. When the latter finally heard reports of the adoption, he insisted that none could have taken place as he had signed no papers. He was most anxious to secure custody of the child but a few months later the divorce was granted giving to Mrs. E. the child, who was already legally hers by adoption. The grounds for the divorce were abuse, but Mrs. E. states she could have charged immorality.

Subsequently Mrs. E. went out to work to support herself leaving the two year old child in the care of the woman who kept the rooming house where she lived. Later there were reports of her being immoral.

With this environment it is extremely doubtful as to what Edith Marie's future will be, especially as her mother was epileptic and syphilytic, and according to a physician, showed clear signs of feeble mindedness.

Case X.

On February 28, 1923, Mrs. L. applied to a child placing agency for two or three children to board. An investigation was made and house and surroundings were found to be satisfactory but the references given by Mrs. L. could not vouch for her character. The burgess stated that she came from a good family but was known to be immoral. The physician said the same thing. A third reference stated definitely that she was immoral. The home was not used by the child placing agency.

Six weeks later, on April 14, 1923, a deed giving Margaret Jane to Mrs. L. was drawn up. It was recorded three days later. The adoption was engineered by an attorney retained by a commercial maternity home bearing a very poor reputation.

Case XI.

Mildred C. was adopted by deed August 9, 1923 at the age of five months. The deed was recorded on September 11, 1923. The mother occupied a place of responsibility and esteem in a neighboring state; the father was prominent politically. The child was illegitimate.

The mother after leaving the hospital in the Pennsylvania city placed the child with a friend and agreed to pay its board. Before returning to her home she saw a lawyer and arranged to give her friend power of attorney with power to dispose of the child as she saw fit. Her friend placed an advertisement in the paper offering the baby for adoption. A child placing agency had been called in to place the child but when they visited the friend's home the baby had been removed and they were unable to learn what had become of it.

The attorney stated that the adoption was put through by deed instead of petition because they were unable to secure the consent of the mother to an adoption by petition. Their letters to her had remained unanswered. He admitted they could have secured the consent of the directors of the poor and so have had the adoption go through the court but, because of the prominence of the parties involved, especially the father who was active in politics, they wished to keep the whole matter under cover as much as possible and so the adoption by deed was effected.

The following case shows that at least in one instance an adult was legally adopted without his being aware of the fact.

Case XII.

During the war John S. enlisted in the aviation branch of the service and went overseas. He did not know he was a foster child, taken by Mr. and Mrs. B. in 1899 when three years of age. In the event of his life being sacrificed for his country his foster parents would have been unable to secure insurance so their attorney had executed a deed of adoption in which the affidavits were signed October 23, 1918, though the signature of the grantee was not attached. The deed was recorded four years later when the foster mother died and left considerable property equally distributed among the natural children and the adopted son. The attorney does not know whether or not John is now aware of the fact that he was adopted in 1922.

Better Adoption Laws Imperative.

When our law forbidding the care of children in almshouses was about to be carried into effect, a petty official in the office of the directors of the poor was told to take two or three days off to dispose of the 48 children then in the county home. He was surprised to find the children's homes practically all full and said he had "quite a time" placing some of the children. The striking thing was that in telling of it the man gave no evidence of sensing the startling character of his statement.

If we think it enough to take "two or three days off to dispose of 48 children" our present adoption laws are adequate for they are quite in keeping with that attitude. But if we assume that the public wants the little John Doe of our enlightened today to receive sufficient attention when he comes to court to make sure that his interests will be safeguarded so that he may grow up an asset to his State, then the adoption practices of this State are clearly not meeting the public expectation. Laws designed to secure for the child sympathetic and intelligent service for his adequate protection seem to be gravely needed.

APPENDIX III

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON LEGAL ADOPTION IN PENNSYLVANIA

1. Q. Who may adopt a child?

   A. "Any person desirous of adopting any child."

2. Q. Can a corporation, such as an orphanage, adopt a child?

   A. No.

3. Q. What procedure must the person desirous of adopting a child take?

   A. Present his or her petition, declaring such desire and that he or she will perform all the duties of a parent to such a child.

4. Q. Where must he present his petition?

   A. To such court in the county where he or she may be resident.

5. Q. What courts are empowered in Philadelphia County to decree adoptions?

   A. The five Common Pleas Courts and the Civil Division of the Municipal Court. (See Question 83.)

6. Q. What is meant by residence as a qualification to petition these courts?

   A. Temporary residence has been adjudged sufficient to meet this requirement. "A temporary resident has been declared by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court to be synonymous with a sojourner."

7. Q. Can a non-resident person file a petition to adopt a child?

   A. It would seem that the above construction would include non-residents in the ordinary sense.

8. Q. Does the law provide specifically for the adoption of a resident child by a non-resident person?

A. Yes; a special act on this phase of the subject provides that if the resident child is under 21 years, the petition must be made by one of the following:
1. "Parents of the child, or either of such parents."
2. If no parents, the next friend of such child
3. Guardians or overseers of the poor.
4. Such charitable institution as shall have supported such child for at least one year (only in cases where child's parents are not living).

9. Q. Is this law regarded as sound from the legal standpoint?

A. No. The validity of the Act of July 2, 1901, has been judicially questioned.

10. Q. Who must consent to the adoption of the minor?

A. The right to give consent in the proceeding is conferred by different Acts, each intending to provide for a given set of circumstances. In all cases the law seems to require the consent of some one before the decree can be made.

11. Q. What are the various circumstances comprehended by all the unrepealed Acts?

A. (1) The ordinary case where the normal relationships of parent and child and surviving parent and child are present.
(2) The case wherein it is proven to the court that the mother or father from
(a) drunkenness
(b) profligacy
(c) or other cause should have
(1) neglected
(2) or refused to provide for his or her child for the period of one year or upwards and there is a non-neglecting parent.
(3) Where the above circumstances exist and there is no non-neglecting father or mother. This covers the case where
(a) both parents are dead
(b) both parents neglecting
(c) one parent is dead; the other parent neglecting.
(4) The case wherein the child has been judicially committed to the care of any person or corporation as being destitute, homeless, abandoned or dependent upon the public.
(5) The case wherein the child, having no parental care, has been committed to the care of any person or corporation.
(6) The case wherein the parent or parents have been thrice convicted of any crime or misdemeanor against or in relation to such child before any Magistrate, Justice of the Peace or Court of Record, or any one of them, and such child has been committed to the care of any person or corporation.
(7) The case in which a child, deserted by his parents or surviving parent, has no legal guardian.

12. Q. Whose consent is necessary to the validity of the proceedings where the circumstances above set forth exist?

A. (1) In number one the consent of the parents or surviving parent is necessary.
(2) In number two the consent of the non-neglecting parent is necessary.
(3) In number three the consent of the following in the alternative is necessary:
(a) next friend
(b) guardians or overseers of the poor
(c) such charitable organization as shall have supported the child for at least one year.
(4) In circumstance number four the consent of the person or corporation to which the child has been committed and also the consent of the non-neglecting or innocent parent, if any.
(5) In circumstance number five the same consent is necessary as in circumstance number four.
(6) In circumstance number six the same consent is necessary as in circumstance number four.
(7) The adoption shall be similar to the proceeding followed in the case of the parents' death.

13. Q. Can the legal guardian of a child give consent to its adoption?

A. No.

14. Q. How will the courts construe the expression set forth in circumstance number two, "If any mother or father from drunkenness, profligacy or other cause should have neglected . . . to provide for his or her child for a period of one year?"

A. Neglect to provide for "other cause" would seem to embrace the case wherein parents, because of poverty, fail to make provision of any kind for the child. Judge Lindsey, in his pamphlet, expressed it as his opinion that the policy of the law is against such construction. The ambiguity, nevertheless, exists.

15. Q. What other circumstance is provided by the statutes?

A. The case wherein the juvenile court awards the child to the care of any association or individual in accordance with the provisions of the Juvenile Court Act.

16. Q. What consent is necessary in the above circumstance? (Question number 15.)

A. The person or corporation thus appointed may be made the party to the adoption proceedings and the party either himself or by his attorney may consent to the adoption and such consent shall be sufficient.

17. Q. Has this portion of the Juvenile Court law been tested in the courts?

A. Judge Lindsey reports in October, 1915: "I know of no judicial construction of this provision."

18. Q. Is it probable that this clause would be held to abrogate the rights of parents to consent to adoption in the case of dependent children committed by juvenile courts to the care of associations and individuals?

A. In Judge Lindsey's opinion that is unlikely. This provision seems hardly within the title of the Act and there might be constitutional objections to an interpretation which resulted in an innovation in the adoption law and procedure.

19. Q. Does the death of a consenting parent prior to the filing of a petition by the adopting parents, affect the situation?

A. Yes. The Superior Court has held that the parent by death loses his or her power to consent, even though the consent be given, the parent died and the petition be filed all within the space of a few days. The facts stated in the petition "must be supposed to be made as of the date when the petition is presented."

20. Q. What is meant by "next friend" mentioned in number three of the answer to question number twelve?

A. The Superior Court has held that "next friend" in the adoption law means "one who is interested in the welfare of the child to such an extent as to see that a proper person is entrusted with its rearing. It is not necessarily the next of kin for the two terms are not synonymous. It is for the court to determine whether the person consenting is really the next friend." It would seem that the adopting person could hardly, under this definition, act as the "next friend" and thus give consent to the action which he himself is taking.

21. Q. Can any charitable institution act as "next friend" to a child?

A. No. A society incorporated in another State for the purpose of procuring children from their parents and having them adopted, which has no home or asylum in this State is not within the meaning of "charitable institution" as used in the adoption statutes.

22. Q. In what way should the natural parent give his consent to the adoption?

A. He should consent to the specific petition filed by the adopter. A valid consent without knowing the actual names of the adopters may also be secured from the parents, provided the parent or parents are informed of the particular adoption contemplated.

23. Q. Is abandonment of children anywhere more specifically defined in the law?

A. Yes. In two statutes. The older one provides that "if the father or mother of any child, under the age of seven years, or any person to whom such child shall have been confided, shall expose such child in any highway, street, field, house, outhouse or other place with intent to wholly abandon it, such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, be sentenced to an imprisonment not exceeding twelve months, and to pay a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars."

The more recent one provides that "a parent or other person charged with the care and custody, for nurture or education, of a child under the age of sixteen years, who abandons the child in destitute circumstances, and wilfully omits to furnish necessary and proper food, clothing and shelter for such child, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding two years, or both or either, at the discretion of the court. In case a fine is imposed, the same may be applied, in the discretion of the court, to the support of such child. Proof of the abandonment of such child in destitute circumstances, and omission to furnish necessary and proper food, clothing, or shelter, shall be prima facie evidence that such omission was wilful."

24. Q. Does abandonment in the adoption law mean the same thing as abandonment in the criminal law?

A. Apparently not precisely the same. In the adoption law abandonment has been variously defined.

25. Q. When, for purposes of adoption, can a parent be said to have abandoned a child?

A. When evidence has been produced to the satisfaction of the court that such was the real intent and purpose of the parent. "Placing a child in an institution or with a society willing to maintain it is not an abandonment but the opposite. As was said by Judge Allison, in Booth v. Allen, 'In what proper sense can a mother be charged with having entirely abandoned her child who has made careful provision for it; secured for it a home and a caretaker . . . one who has agreed to stand in the relation of parent to the infant, and perform for it the duties of a mother?' Of course, there may be an abandonment by the parent even after such a placing of the child. If, for instance, the parent ceases to communicate with the child or its foster parents, has left or removed from his place of abode without communication and his whereabouts are unknown, an abandonment may be fairly inferred from such facts, but they should sufficiently appear on the proceeding."

26. Q. If the child had been placed by the parent with an agreement to pay for its keeping, is the failure to pay as agreed an abandonment?

A. The mere neglect or failure to pay could hardly be considered such, but if coupled with failure to communicate or concealment of whereabouts or other like facts persisted in for a length of time sufficient so as not to be likely due to illness or temporary disability abandonment might reasonably be inferred. Probably no hard and fast rule is possible, and the facts should be fully set out and supported by affidavits of proof.

27. Q. Can the failure to pay board to an institution coupled with the agreement not to interfere in the care and education of the child be construed as "neglect" and "refusal to provide" for one year?

A. No; if it appears that before the adoption the parent had determined to reclaim the child and had given notice of such intention to the proposed adopting parent and the institution.

28. Q. Can a charitable institution that has supported the child for one year claim that the parent has abandoned it?

A. No. Actual abandonment must be proven to the satisfaction of the court.

29. Q. How is this done?

A. A letter sent to the last known address of the parent and returned as unclaimed by the postal authorities is sometimes accepted. Judge Lindsey advises that in all cases there should be the evidence or at least affidavits of persons knowing the facts relied on to show neglect or abandonment.

30. Q. Can the parent give the child over to some third party or association for adoption?

A. The consent of the parents provided for in the Act would seem to imply a consent to the specific application for the adoption by the petitioner and not a mere general willingness that the child be adopted by someone.

"A mere general assent that the child may be adopted or an authorization to some third person or society to consent to any adoption seems to me hardly in compliance with the Act." (May, 1915.)

31. Q. Are all these descriptive phrases used in circumstance number four, question number eleven, of essentially the same character and likely to be grouped together and treated as a whole in an interpretation?

A. No. Abandonment and abuse are quite different from those conditions arising out of sheer poverty—"homeless" and "dependent on the public." "It would seem to be more than doubtful—whether the existence of simple dependency, that is, that the parent is unable to support the child would in itself deprive the parent of his rights to the extent that an adoption might be had without notice to him."

32. Q. Is the consent of a minor over 14 years old necessary for an adoption?

A. No. "The consent of the minor to adoption may be assumed."

33. Q. Is the decree of adoption made by a court final, in the sense that once made, it cannot be undone without another adoption proceeding by which the adopting parents transfer their rights?

A. No.

34. Q. How is an adoption set aside?

A. Application is made to the court decreeing the adoption to set aside or vacate the decree.

35. Q. Can the court revoke an adoption decree on the petition of all of the parties who originally petitioned that the adoption be decreed?

A. Yes. The desire of a natural parent whose circumstances have changed accompanied by the acquiescence of the adopting parent was considered sufficient to revoke. It was held that the child acquired no vested rights by the decree.

36. Q. Will the courts always revoke a petition, even though all the parties to the original petition for the adoption decree, join in the petition for the revocation?

A. No. The courts have refused to revoke a decree on the ground that the child, a nineteen year old boy at the time of the adoption, soon afterward developed into a "prodigal and undutiful son." The court held that the statutes contained no provision for the rescission of an adoption decree. It was suggested that after the adopted child had come of age, he might enter into an agreement with the adopting parent to rescind the adoption. Until the boy came of age he was unable to give consent and no one could "waive his rights for him."

37. Q. On what grounds in contested cases will an adoption be set aside?

A. Various grounds may be advanced by the different parties at interest.
(1) The next of kin of the adopting parent may bring action on the ground of:
(a) unsoundness of mind of the adopting parent,
(b) undue influence
(2) Fraud on the court.
(3) That the court had no jurisdiction cannot be brought by next of kin of the deceased adopting parent after a lapse of years. Apparently it can be brought by the natural parent. From the standpoint of parental rights, the decree of a court is only valid if the court had jurisdiction to enter it and jurisdiction is always open to question.
(4) That it was made without notice to the parents.
(5) That it was made without the parent's consent.

38. Q. In what way can an adoption case be appealed from the Common Pleas Courts?

A. Appeal in adoption cases is not specifically provided for in the statutes. The only method of getting a review of an adoption case is on a writ of certiorari, which is required to be called an appeal by the statutes relating to this procedure.

39. Q. Upon what grounds can this form of appeal be taken from the Common Pleas Courts to the Superior and Supreme Courts?

A. Such appeal can be taken only on questions of law as distinguished from questions of fact.

40. Q. What points can be brought into review by the Supreme and the Superior Courts on an appeal?

A. In the Appellate Court the basis of the review must be to determine whether or not the record shows that the Common Pleas Court had jurisdiction and acted in accordance with what the adoption statutes authorize it to do. There is no appeal upon the merits of the case on the facts.

41. Q. Does acquiescence for a number of years by the natural parent estop him or her from claiming the child on the ground of an invalid adoption?

A. It has been held that a lapse of years will bar next of kin of the adopting parent from bringing action to invalidate an adoption on the grounds of lack of jurisdiction of the court, but it is doubtful whether such rule would hold in the case of a natural parent who was seeking to recover a child.

42. Q. If the natural parent who is contesting an adoption on the grounds that it was decreed without consent, dies while the suit is in progress, can his heirs continue the suit?

A. No. The natural parent's rights cease on his death, and his heirs cannot after his death carry on proceedings to revoke an adoption.

43. Q. What consideration is to guide the court in decreeing an adoption?

A. The court must be "satisfied that the welfare of such child will be promoted by such adoption." When a non-resident person adopts a child the court must satisfy itself "that the person adopting such child is a fit person to have the custody of the same." Many decisions and judicial opinions set forth that the welfare of the adopted child is the prime consideration, (assuming that the necessary consent has been given), upon which the judge is to base his decision.

44. Q. How does the court usually satisfy itself of this matter?

A. The statutes make no provision for the court's procedure except the petition and every court is consequently free to pursue its own methods in determining whether the adoption would be to the best interests of the child. It is, therefore, obvious that there is no danger of any procedure invalidating the adoption no matter how irregular the procedure may seem so far as meeting this requirement is concerned. The court having prescribed the procedure as a means of informing itself, the statutes are satisfied.

The usual practices are:

(1) To produce to the court the affidavits of two persons who swear that they know the petitioner or petitioners and that he or they are persons of good character and able to perform the duties of a parent toward the child. These affidavits are not, however, essential to the validity of an adoption. It has been judicially decided that "a sworn certificate of two residents as to the character of a petitioner need not accompany the petition, in the absence of a rule of court and where the court is satisfied otherwise that the welfare of the child will be promoted by the adoption.
(2) If a married person presents a petition as adopter, his wife or her husband is usually required to consent to the adoption in writing.
(3) The representations of the petitioner's attorney.
(4) If the child is fourteen years old, the written consent of the child itself is sometimes secured.

(5) One court (C. P. No. 4) has occasionally invoked the assistance of the City Department of Welfare to investigate the home of the petitioners, to make sure that they are fit places for the child.

45. Q. Are there any rules of court covering procedure in adoption?

A. The published rules of court for Philadelphia County contain no references to adoption.

46. Q. Does the Judge see the parties at interest in the case?

A. No; the petitioner's attorney represents them.

47. Q. What form does the Judge's decision take?

A. A decree of adoption.

48. Q. Are there any requirements regarding the time which must elapse between the filing of a petition and the granting of a decree?

A. No.

49. Q. How is an adoption proceeding recorded?

A. In the Prothonotary's office it is indexed and filed with all the other documents of Common Pleas and other courts.

50. Q. Is this a document open to the public?

A. Yes.

51. Q. Can privacy now be secured for the adoption records?

A. Yes. The Judge can order that the record be impounded in the safe. It can then be consulted only on the order of the Judge.

52. Q. Is this practice generally followed?

A. No. Out of 988 adoption records the Children's Commission found that only one had been impounded.

53. Q. What fees are charged in connection with adoption proceedings?

A. A fee of $5.00 is charged for filing the petition and listing it on the appearance docket in the Prothonotary's office; $1.00 is charged for a certified copy of the decree.

54. Q. What is the principal significance of this record?

A. Such record of the court shall be "sufficient evidence" to establish inheritance rights of both the adopting parent and the adopted child to the estate of the other.

55. Q. What are these rights?

A. The adopted child or adult and the adopting parent or parents shall inherit and take by devolution from and through each other, personal estate as next of kin, and real estate as heirs as fully as if the person adopted had been born a lawful child of the adopting parent or parents. The adoptive relatives of the adopted child shall be entitled to inherit and take from and through such persons to the exclusion of his or her parents, grandparents and collateral relatives. Neither shall an adopted child inherit or take from or through his or her natural parents, grandparents or collateral relatives. The inheritance rights existing between the adopted child and his spouse, his children, and his descendants, are the same as if he had not been adopted.

(Adoption will not cut off the child's right of inheritance from its natural parents unless so provided by statute—which is provided in this instance.)

56. Q. When a person who has made a will later adopts a child but fails to revise the will to make provision for the child, is the child an heir?

A. Yes; the will is revoked in the same way that it would have been had the testator acquired a spouse or natural child subsequent to the making of the will and the testator is deemed to have died intestate. In that event the adopted child stands in the same place as a natural child.

57. Q. When a testator leaves a life estate to an heir and directs that this life estate is to be conveyed upon the death of his heir to his or her child or children, does a child adopted by the heir, subsequent to the death of the testator, constitute an heir to this life estate?

A. No. The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania held in 1867 that "adopted children are not children of the person by whom they have been adopted, and the Act of Assembly does not attempt the impossibility of making them such."

Furthermore, "a devise to trustees for the sole and separate use of a married woman for life, and on her death to be conveyed to her children and heirs of her children forever, gave her nothing from her to her heirs, but only a life estate."

58. Q. Is there any way by which a testator leaving a life estate to a child with the stipulation that at death of this holder of the life estate, it is to go to his or her children, can include children adopted by this holder of a life estate?

A. Yes, by (1) specifically mentioning as heirs children which have been or may be adopted, or (2) providing that at the death of the holder of the life estate the principal is to be distributed to the heirs of the holder of the life estate in accordance with the intestacy laws of the Commonwealth.

59. Q. Is a child adopted by a married man, whose wife did not join in the petition, entitled to share in the wife's estate?

A. No. Even though the wife has given verbal consent and seemed to acquiesce, the adopted child acquires no inheritance rights with reference to the wife's estate.

60. Q. Is the child adopted by a married man whose wife did not join in the petition related in any way to the wife?

A. Apparently not. No "confidential relation" exists between the wife and the child and in business transactions they deal "at arm's length."

61. Q. What is the primary purpose of legal adoption?

A. To establish inheritance rights.

62. Q. Is adoption a contract?

A. No. It is the creation of the legal status obtaining between parent and child in cases where this does not naturally exist. It aims to confer on the parties all the legal rights and attributes which the law now affixes to the parent-child relationship.

63. Q. What rights other than inheritance and what duties are legally involved in the parent-child relationship?

A. Duties of the parent toward the child include: 1. Support to the age of sixteen, or if the child by reason of infirmity is unable to support itself, to twenty-one.

2. Duty of physical care at least during infancy and early childhood.
3. Moral guidance and education throughout childhood.

Rights of the parent include:

1. Custody of the child during its minority.
2. Control of the child's earnings.
3. Claim of support in dependent old age of parent (unless child is married woman without property).
4. Claims for compensation in case of injury to the child.
5. Right to consent to marriage.

64. Q. Is an adopted child a beneficiary under the Workmen's Compensation Act?

A. Yes, by special definition: "The terms 'child' and 'children' include adopted children. To receive compensation they must be under sixteen and members of the decedent's household at the time of his death."

65. Q. Is a widow eligible for mothers' assistance for children adopted by her and her husband prior to his death or his becoming permanently insane?

A. It has been ruled that she is not. The opinion is based on the legal definition of the word "mother" which is held to mean a woman who has borne a child.

66. Q. Can adopting parents recover damages for the death of their son?

A. No. It has been held that the right granted to the surviving father or mother to recover damages for the death of a son, is a right granted to the actual father or mother, and not to an adopting parent.

67. Q. Can a parent make a valid contract which obsolutely relinquishes his rights over his child?

A. Such contracts are void as against public policy.

68. Q. Can a parent transfer his rights to his child as a matter of traffic or for pecuniary gain?

A. No; such transferring of children is a criminal offense under the law, punishable by fine, or imprisonment or both.

69. Q. How does the relationship of guardian and ward differ from the relationship in adoption?

A. The status of guardianship and ward carries only certain of the incidents of the relationship of parent and child. It does not involve inheritance between the guardian and ward. It does involve custody of the ward's property and sometimes, though not necessarily so, the custody of the ward himself. Adoption is the only procedure which carries with it the right of inheritance of persons dying intestate.

70. Q. Is there any age limit applying to the person to be adopted?

A. No. One person of legal age may adopt another person of any age.

71. Q. Is the procedure the same for adults as for minors?

A. Only the consent of the adopted person and his or her spouse is required. The Act of May 9, 1889, required the consent of the parents or surviving parent of the adult, but this requirement was omitted in the Act of June 1, 1911.

72. Q. Is there any other way by which an adoption can be effected?

A. Yes; an existing statute provides for the adoption of a "child" by deed. Act of 1872 uses the word "child" but it is doubtful whether the word "child" is used as a synonym for "minor." It is not sufficiently broad to include adults.

73. Q. How is adoption by deed effected?

A. On proof of the due execution of the deed, it is recorded by the Recorder of Deeds.

74. Q. Who is competent to make such a deed for a child?

A. (1) The parents.
(2) The sole surviving parent, if of age.
(3) The mother of an illegitimate child, if she is of age.
(4) If she is not of age, her parents must also give consent.

75. Q. Are there any requirements regarding the adopting parent?

A. No; other than that he be of age.

76. Q. Is there any provision for the exercise of discretion by any public official to safeguard the child's welfare in this transfer of custody and guardianship?

A. No.

77. Q. Are there any residence requirements regarding any of the parties to the transaction?

A. The deed must be recorded in the county where the adopting parent resides at the date of its execution.

78. Q. Why is the adoption by deed called the "common law form of adopting a child?"

A. Reason unknown; the common law did not know a process of adoption. There is no legal method of adoption in England at the present time.

79. Q. Are there any precedents for this private form of adoption in the Roman law or the Code Napoleon, from which our other form of adoption derives?

A. No. Both in Roman law and in the Code Napoleon some special authority of law was necessary to constitute an adoption.

80. Q. Why was it provided for in Pennsylvania by Act of April 2, 1872?

A. It would seem that there was a practice in this State of adopting children by deed prior to that time. In 1872 this practice was legalized by a statute which is entitled a supplement to the adoption law of 1855. The Act of May 4, 1855, did not, however, mention this practice or provide for this method. There would seem to have been some confusion in the minds of the Legislature who drew up and passed this act.

81. Q. What fee is charged for recording an adoption deed?

A. A minimum charge of $2.50 is made. This permits a deed at least five hundred words in length; $1.00 is charged for each additional five hundred words.

82. Q. How is the child's name changed to that of the adopting parents?

A. The court may decree that such child shall assume the name of the adopting parent.

83. Q. Would it be possible, without further changes in the laws, to concentrate the adoption cases in one court in Philadelphia County?

A. Yes. The Civil Division of the Municipal Court is specifically given concurrent jurisdiction in adoption cases and it is provided that it is to have jurisdiction "in any civil cases transfererd to it by order of a majority of the judges of any Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia County." It would seem that power is thus given the Common Pleas Court to transfer all adoption cases to one court.

APPENDIX IV

TYPICAL ADOPTION PETITION AND DECREE AND DEED OF ADOPTION

IN RE : C. P. No. 9
ADOPTION OF : Dec. Term 1924
MAY WICKS : No. 10682

To the Honorable the Judges of the said Court the Petition of Warren M. Gambury and Susan Marie Gambury, his wife, Respectfully represents:

1. That your petitioners are citizens of Pennsylvania and reside in the City and County of Philadelphia, at 3692 Plum Tree Street,

2. That they are desirous of adopting May Wicks, minor, born June 11, 1920, and now aged four years and upwards, now residing with your petitioners, being the child of Henry D. Wicks, nod deceased, and Margaret Ann Wicks, his wife,

3. That the said Margaret Ann Wicks is unable properly to support and maintain the said May Wicks

4. That the said May Wicks has been wholly supported, cared for and maintained by your petitioners since December 12, 1923.

5. That Margaret Ann Wicks, the mother of the said child is willing that the minor should be adopted by your petitioners, her consent thereto being hereto attached.

6. That your petitioners are able to provide a proper home for the said minor and able to care for, support and maintain her in a manner conductive to her welfare and will perform all the duties of parents toward her.

7. That two affidavits by respectable citizens of Pennsylvania are hereto attached setting forth that in their opinion it is to the advantage of the said minor that she be adopted as prayed for therein.

8. Your petitioners pray your Honorable Court for leave to adopt said minor under the provisions of the Act of Assembly in such case made and provided, said minor to have all the rights of an actual child equally with any other children of your petitioners.

And they will ever pray, etc.

PART II

MANUAL OF GENERAL STATUTES OF PENNSYLVANIA RELATING TO CHILDREN.

One of the most important duties assigned to the Children's Commission by the General Assembly was the compilation of the Pennsylvania statutes relating to children. The Commission was empowered to request service from the Legislative Reference Bureau of the state to assist it in this large task. Fortunately the Legislative Reference Bureau was able to respond almost immediately and fortunately the Commission has had the financial resources for the equally prompt publication.

The Children's Commission regards this first official compilation of Pennsylvania's statutes relating to children as the logical starting point for the further study of these laws. Even in this, its beginning stage, it is hoped that this compilation will prove as useful to child welfare workers in their daily tasks as it has been to this Commission in its study of the needs for the revision, systematization and additions to the enactments regarding children.

In the opinion of this Commission, the people of Pennsylvania are greatly indebted to John H. Fertig, S. Edward Hannestad and Robert S. Frey, of the staff of the Legislative Reference Bureau, who have so ably and expeditiously compiled this large body of material.

Members of the Commission Appointed to Study and Revise the Statutes of Pennsylvania Relating to Children.

January 31, 1925.

To the Members of the Commission Appointed to Study and Revise the Statutes of Pennsylvania Relating to Children:

In compliance with your request, and pursuant to the provisions of section six of the act approved the eleventh day of July, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three, creating your Commission, I am transmitting herewith a compilation of the statutory laws of Pennsylvania of a general nature relating to the subject of children.

The full text of these laws is set forth in all cases where they are deemed of particular interest, to your Commission, and persons engaged in child welfare work. Other laws of lesser importance are referred to in notes only. The arrangement of the material is analytical, and is fully indicated in the table of contents preceding the text.

AN ACT

To provide for the appointment of a commission to suggest revisions and amendments to the statutes of the State of Pennsylvania which relate to children, especially those which relate to the dependent, defective, delinquent, neglected, incorrigible, or illegitimate children; defining the powers and duties of the commission; authorizing the examination of documents, records, and papers; and making an appropriation to meet the expenses of the said commission.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That the Governor of this Commonwealth is hereby authorized and directed to appoint a commission, consisting of seven citizens, of whom at least three must be women, to study all laws relating to child welfare, and to suggest revisions and amendments to the statutes of Pennsylvania which relate to children, especially to those which relate to the dependent, defective, delinquent, neglected, incorrigible, or illegitimate children. The commission shall have power to employ and to fix the salaries of the necessary persons to enable the commision to perform its duties properly. The members of the commission shall receive no compensation for their services, but shall be allowed their actual traveling and other necessary expenses incurred in the performance of their duties.

Section 2. It shall be the duty of the Commission to study the laws, conditions, and practice of this State relating to children welfare, to revise and consolidate such laws, and to recommend such amendments to existing statutes of the State of Pennsylvania which relate to children, especially to those which relate to the dependent, defective, delinquent, neglected, incorrigible, or illigitimate children, or to their treatment, care, maintenance, custody, control, or protection and reformation, and such additional laws, as may be needed to embody the best thought and experience on these subjects. All recommendations of the commission shall be accompanied by concise statements of the reasons for such recommendations.

Section 3. The Commission, or its authorized agent, shall have access to such documents, records, and papers belonging to or under the control of State, cities, counties, boroughs, and townships, and of institutions and societies dealing with children which are subject to State supervision, whenever such examination of documents, records, and papers is necessary for the compilation of statistics and facts that may be of use and value to the commission in its work.

Section 4. That said commissioners shall make a full report, in writing to the General Assembly which will convene in one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five, on or before the first day of February of said year.

Section 5. That for the purpose of said commission, the sum of five thousand dollars ($5,000), or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated. The said expenses shall be paid on warrants duly signed by the chairman of the commission and approved by the Auditor General.

Section 6. The Legislative Reference Bureau shall render such assistance to the commission as may be from time to time, requested.

Approved—The 11th day of July, A. D. 1923.

GENERAL STATUTES OF PENNSYLVANIA RELATING TO CHILDREN

I. STATUS

A. RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF PARENT AND CHILD

1. Duties and Liabilities of Parents

(a) Abandonment and Neglect. See Sub-division N.

(b) Desertion and Non-Support

1. Who Liable for Support of Poor Persons. The father and gradfather, and the mother and gradmother, and the children and grandchildren, of every poor person not able to work, shall at their own charge, being of sufficient ability, relieve and maintain such poor person, at such rate as the court of Quarter Sessions of the county where such poor person resides shall order and direct, on pain of forfeiting a sum not exceeding twenty dollars for every month they shall fail therein, which shall be levied by the process of the said court, and applied to the relief and maintenance of such poor person.

Sec. 28, Act of June 13, 1836, P. L. 539.
See the section immediately following.

2. Who Liable for Support of Poor Persons. The husband wife, the father, the mother, and the children, respectively, of every poor person shall, at their own charge being of sufficient ability, relieve and maintain such poor person, at such rate as the court of quarter sessions of the peace of the county where such poor person resides shall order and direct, on pain of forfeiting a sum not exceeding twenty dollars for every month they shall fail therein, which shall be levied by process of said court and be applied to the relief and maintenance of such poor person. And it shall be the duty of the directors or poor-law officers of such county, or either of them, to make a application to the said court by petition, under oath, setting forth the necessary facts in all such cases.

Sec. 4, Act of April 6, 1905, P. L. 112.

3. Person or Property of Parents to be Taken for Support of Children. If any man shall separate himself from his wife, without reasonable cause, or shall desert his children, or if any woman shall desert her children, leaving them a charge upon the district, in any such case, it shall be lawful for any one magistrate of the county upon complaint made by the overseers of the district, to issue their warrant to such overseers, therein authorizing them to take and seize so much of the goods and chattels, and receive so much of the rents and profits, of the real estate of such man or woman, as in the judgement of the said magistrate shall be sufficient to provide for such wife, and to maintain and bring up such children, which sum or amount shall be specified in such warrant; but if sufficient real or personal estate, cannot be found, then totake the body of such man (or woman) and bring him (or her) before such magistrate at a time to be specified in such warrant.

Sec. 29, Act of June 13, 1836, P. L. 547.

4. Security for Appearance to Answer Charge of Non-Support. It shall be lawful for such magistrate, on the return of such warrant, to require security from such man or woman, for his or her appearance, at the next court of Quarter Sessions of the county, thereto abide the order of the court, and for want of such security, to commit such person to the jail of the county.

Sec. 30, Act of June 13, 1836, P. L. 547.

5. Order for Support and for Sale of Goods of Parents. Commitment. The warrant aforesaid shall be returned to the next court of Quarter Sessions of the county, when it shall be lawful for the said court to make an order for the payment of such sums as they shall think reasonable for the purpose aforesaid, and therein authorizing the overseers to dispose of the goods and chattels aforesaid, by sale or otherwise, and to collect and receive the rents and profits aforesaid, or so much of either as in the judgment of the court shall be sufficient for the purpose aforesaid, but if there be no real or personal estate, it shall be lawful for the court to commit such person to the jail of the county, there to remain until he or she comply with such order, give security for the performance thereof, or be discharged by due course of law.

Sec. 31, Act of June 13, 1836, P. L. 547.

6. Arrest of Father for Separation from or Neglect to Maintain Children. In addition to the remedies now provided by law, if any husband, or father, being within the limits of this Commonwealth, has or hereafter shall separate himself from his wife, or from his children, or from wife and children, without reasonable cause, or shall neglect to maintain his wife or children, it shall be lawful for any alderman, justice of the peace, or magistrate of this Commonwealth, upon information made before him, under oath or affirmation, by his wife or children, or either of them, or by any person or persons, to issue his warrant to the sheriff, or to any constable for the arrest of the person against whom the information shall be made as aforesaid, and bind him over, with one sufficient security, to appear at the next court of quarter sessions, there to answer the said charges of desertion.

Sec. 1. Act of Apr. 13, 1867, P. L. 78
This act of April 13, 1867, P. L. 78 is not superseded by Act of March 13, 1903, P. L. 26, see Commonwealth v. Kenney, 80 super Ct. 418, nor repealed by the same act, see Commonwealth v. Mills, Appellant, 26 Super, Ct. 459.

7. Court to Make Order Against Father for Support of Children. Execution Against any Property of Father. Commitment Upon Default. The information, proceedings thereon, and warrant shall be returned to the next court of quarter sessions, or other court having jurisdiction thereof, when it shall be lawful for said court, after hearing, to order the person against whom complaint has been made, being of sufficient ability, to pay such sum as said court shall think reasonable and proper for the comfortable support and maintenance of the said wife or children, or both, and to commit such person to the county prison, there to remain until he comply with order, or give security, by one or more sureties, to the Commonwealth, and in such sum as the court shall direct for the compliance with the said order, the court may issue the appropriate writ of execution against any property, real or personal belonging to the defendant, and its writ of attachment execution against any money or property to which he may be in any way entitled, whether under what is known as a spendthrift trust or otherwise; and its said writ of attachment execution shall become a lien and continuing levy upon any money or property to which he may be in any way entitled, whether under what is known as a spendthrift trust or otherwise, which shall not exceed fifty per centum thereof, and shall remain a continuing levy until the order has been paid in full with costs. And it is further provided that the person against whom an order is made shall not be entitled to the benefits of any exemption law now in force or thereafter passed. And it is further provided that the provisions of this act shall apply to any trust, whether it is known as a spendthrift trust or otherwise, whether such trust was created or came into existence before or after the passage of this act. Where an attachment execution is issued the further proceedings thereon shall be in the manner heretofore practiced and allowed in the case of foreign attachments.

Sec. 1, Act of June 15, 1917, P. L. 614, amending Sec. 2, Act of Apr. 13, 1867, P. L. 78, as amended by Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 15, 1913, P. L. 72.

8. Costs of Proceedings. Husband and Wife Competent Witnesses. The cost of all proceedings by virtue of this act shall be the same as are now allowable by law in cases of surety of the peace, to be imposed in like manner; and all proceedings shall be in the name of the Commonwealth; and any wife, so deserted, shall be a competent witness on the part of the Commonwealth, and the husband shall also be a competent witness.

Sec. 3, Act of Apr. 13, 1867, P. L. 78.

9. Procedure for Arrest of Absconding Offender in County Other Than Where Warrant was Issued. Should any such person abscond, remove, or be found in any other county of the Commonwealth than the one in which said warrant issued, he may be arrested therein, by the said warrant backed by any alderman or justice of the peace of the county in which such person may be found, as is now provided for backing warrants, by the third section of the act of the thirty-first of March, one thousand eight hundred and sixty.

Sec. 4, Act of April 13, 1867, P. L. 78.
The third section of the Act of March 31, 1860, which provided for the endorsement of the name of the judge, alderman or justice of the peace of any city or county into which a person against whom a warrant had been issued by a magistrate of another county, has escaped or gone into, before it could be effectually served in the county in which he was apprehended, was repealed by the Act of May 2, 1899, P. L. 173, which made such endorsement no longer necessary, and made it lawful for the person to whom a warrant is issned to arrest the offender outside the jurisdiction of the magistrate issuing the same.

10. Discharge From Commitment When Unable to Pay. Whenever the court of quarter sessions of any county in the Commonwealth shall, under the second section of the act to which this is a supplement, commit the person complained of to the county prison, there to remain until he comply with their order, or give security, etc., it shall be lawful for the said court, at any time after three months, if they shall be satisfied of the inability of such person to comply with the said order, and give such security, to discharge him from imprisonment.

Sec. 1, Act of April 15, 1869, P. L. 75, supplementing Act of April 13, 1868, P. L. 78. See 71 Pa. 413.

11. Attachment for Person for Failure to Comply With Order for Support of Child Confined in County or Poor District Institutions. In all cases where an order has been made by the court of quarter sessions for the support of a husband, wife, father, mother, child, grandfather, grandmother, or grandchild; or where an order has been made upon a husband, wife, father, mother, child, grandfather, grandmother, or grandchild of a person confined in any hospital, asylum, home or other institution, at the charge of any county or poor district, for the support of the said person, so maintained as a charge by said county or poor district; and the said order, made for the support or maintenance of any of the said persons heretofore mentioned, has not been complied with by the person on whom the said order has been made, for a period of thirty days; the court of quarter sessions wherein the said order shall have been made, or any judge thereof, upon affidavit or petition filed, setting forth that the person on whom the said order has been made has not complied with the said order, shall issue an attachment, directed to the sheriff or other proper officer of the county, directing and commanding that the person named as having failed to comply with said order be brought before the court forthwith, or at such other time as the court may in its discretion direct. Whereupon, if it shall appear to the court, after hearing that the person on whom the said order was made has wilfully neglected to comply with the said order made upon him, the court may adjudge said person in contempt of court.

Sec. 1, Act of June 15, 1911, P. L. 973.

12. Commitment of Person for Failure to Comply With Order. If the court, after hearing, shall adjudge the person on whom the said order has been made to be in contempt of court, it shall be lawful for the court, in the exercise of its discretion to commit the said person to the county jail for a period not exceeding six months.

Sec. 2, Act of June 15, 1911, P. L. 973.

13. Commitment Upon Failure to Obey Order of Court. Disbursement of Wages Paid During Commitment at Hard Labor. Whenever in any proceeding brought against any man, wherein it is charged that he has, without reasonable cause, separated himself from his wife or children, or from both, or has neglected to maintain his wife or children; or in any proceedings where any father of an illegitimate child has neglected to comply with the order of court made against him, in fornification and bastardy proceedings, or in any other proceedings for the support of such child, for the payment to the mother of expenses incurred at the birth of the child; or in any procedings where any child of full age has neglected or shall neglect to maintain his or her parents, not able to work or of sufficient ability to maintain themselves,—the court having jurisdiction shall commit the defendant to imprisonment, for want of a bond with security;* or, otherwise, the court may order the defendant to be imprisoned at hard labor under existing laws, or laws that may hereafter be passed, in such penal or reformatory institution in this Commonwealth as the court shall direct; or the court may discharge a defendant upon his own recognizance, in the custody of a desertion probation officer or other person, subject to such condition as the court may, in its discretion, impose.

Whenever any defendant shall be ordered to be imprisoned at hard labor, under the provisions of this act, there shall be paid by the official in charge of the penal or reformatory institution in which such defendant is imprisoned, to the person designated in the order of the court as the proper recipient of such money, to be disbursed by the said recipient as the order of court may direct, the sum of six-five cents for each day, Sundays and legal holidays only excepted, during which he remains imprisoned. Such sum shall be paid as wages, and shall be paid at such times and in such manner as other wages are paid by cities and counties, and shall be charged as one of the general running expenses of such institution; and, if the labor done in such institution is not sufficient to pay the running expenses of such institution, such sum shall be charged to and paid by the county from which such defendant was committed.

This act re-enacts the provisions of the act of June 12, 1913, P. L. 502, Sec. 2 of which was declared unconstitutional in Fedorowoicz v. Probst, 62 Super. Ct. 458, aff. 254 Pa. 338, because of defect in title of the act. Sec. 3, provising for probation officers, was not reenacted. This section three reads as follows:

"Whenever the court having jurisdiction of such proceedings may deem it necessary or desirable, it may appoint one or more discreet persons of good character to serve as desertion probation officers during the pleasure of the court, for the performance of such duties as the court shall direct. Said probation officer or officers shall receive a salary to be determined by the court, and this together with the necessary expenses incurred while in the actual performance of duty, shall be paid monthly by the county as directed by the court. It shall be the duty of the Probation officer or officers so appointed to make such investigation as may be required by the court, to furnish to the court such information and assistance as the court may require, to take such charge of any defendant before or after trial as may be directed by the court, and, when so directed, to collect and pay over to the proper persons money ordered to be paid by any defendant, and, in general, to do and perform such service as the court may direct."

*This semi-colon should be omitted, see Insolvency of Hogan 83 Super. Ct. 221.

14. Attachment Upon Violation of Order of Court. Forfeiture of Bond and Distribution of Proceeds. If the defendant in any such proceeding shall violate the terms of the order of court, the court may issue an attachment upon the petition of such defendant's parent, wife, child, or children, or of any other person or persons having knowledge of the facts.

In case of the forfeiture of a bail-bond in any such proceedings, the court may order that any sum collected, by suit or otherwise, shall be paid, in whole or in part, to such parent, wife, child, or children. In case of the forfeiture of any bond or recognizance with or without surety, given as security under any order of court, any sum collected, by suit or otherwise, shall be paid to such parent, wife, or children. Such payment shall not bar or in any way affect the power of the court to enforce its order against the defendant by attachment or otherwise.

Sec. 2, Act of May 24, 1917, P. L. 268.

15. Execution Against Any Property of Husband, Including Spendthrift Trusts. Whenever any court of competent jurisdiction has made an order or entered a decree or judgment against any husband requiring him to pay any sum or sums for the support of his wife or children or both, the court may issue the appropriate writ of execution against any property, real or personal, belonging to the defendant to enforce said order, decree, or judgment, and the said court may issue a writ of attachment execution, or writ in the nature of attachment execution, against any money or property to which said husband is entitled, whether under what is known as a spendthrift trust or otherwise: and the said writ of attachment execution shall become a lien and continuing levy upon any money or property to which he may be in any way entitled, whether under what is commonly known as a spendthrift trust or otherwise; and, in cases of levy on, or attachment of, any trust, said levy or attachment shall only be for fifty per centum thereof, and shall remain a continuing levy until the order, decree, or judgment has been paid in full, with costs; and, in cases where the order, decree, or judgment requires the payment of stated sums at stated intervals, said writ of attachment shall remain a lien and continuing levy until the last payment due under such order, decree, or judgment has been made, with costs. The person against whom such an order, decree, or judgment is made shall not be entitled to the benefits of any exemption law now in force or hereafter passed. The provisions of this act shall apply to any trust, whether it is such a trust as is known as a spendthrift trust or otherwise, whether such trust was created or came into existence before or after the passage of this act. Where an attachment execution is issued, the further proceedings thereon shall be in the manner heretofore practiced and allowed in cases of foreign attachment.

Sec. 1, Act of May 10, 1921, P. L. 434.

16. Execution Against Real Estate of Husband and Wife by Entireties. Attachment for Rents. Whenever hereafter an order shall be made against any husband by any court of quarter sessions, or other court of competent jurisdiction, for the comfortable support and maintenance of his wife or children, or both, or whenever hereafter a judgment shall be rendered by any court of common pleas, or other court of comptetent jurisdiction, in favor of any wife against her husband in any action brought upon any articles of separation, or other contract made between such husband and wife, stipulating or conditioned for the support and maintenance of such wife, it shall be lawful for such court to enforce compliance with said order, or in execution of said judgment, to issue its appropriate write of execution against any real property owned by said husband and said wife by entireties and the purchaser at the sheriff's of such estate by entireties in virtue of said writ shall, upon compliance with the terms of said sale, be vested with the title theretofore held in entirely by said husband and said wife; or said court may, for the purpose aforesaid, issue a writ of attachment execution, attaching in the hands of any person or persons any rents, issues or profits of such estate. The proceeds of such sale, or of any attachment execution after the satisfaction of such order or such judgment thereout, shall be divided between such husband and such wife equally. The procedure on said writs of execution and attachment execution issued by the said court of quarter sessions, or other court of competent jurisdiction, shall be the same as provided by law in cases of similar writs on judgments entered in the courts of common pleas. The remedies herein provided are in addition to those heretofore provided by law for the enforcement of such orders or for the execution of such judgments.

Sec. 1, Act of June 11, 1913, P. L. 468.

17. Order for Support Entered as a Judgment Where Real Estate is Held by Entireties. Execution Thereon. Whenever a husband and wife shall hold real estate by entireties and the wife as heretofore secured or shall hereafter secure a sentence, order or decree of court against the husband for the support of herself and a child or children of her said husband, or either or any of them, and a copy of such sentence, order, or decree has been certified to any court of common pleas of any county in this Commonwealth in which the real estate so held by entireties is situated, the said order, decree, or judgment shall be entered in the said court of common pleas as a judgment therein with like force and effect as if the same had been recovered therein as a judgment of the latter court; and it shall be lawful to issue execution on such judgment against such real estate so held by entireties and to sell the same in the manner provided by law for the sale of real estate on execution issued on a judgment, but, in any such writs of execution thereon, the defendant therein shall not be entitled to the benefit of any exemption laws, and said real estate may be sold without inquisition. The sale of any such real estate, under the provisions of this act, shall convey to the purchaser or purchasers thereof a good and valid title to such real estate, and shall vest in him or them the entire title of both the husband and wife in the same manner and to the same effect as if both husband and wife has joined in the conveyance of same.

Sec. 1, Act of May 24, 1923, P. L. 446.

18. Interest of Wife in Proceeds of Sale of Real Estate Held by Entireties, Sold for Support of Children. The wife shall be entitled out of the proceeds of such sale to such sum of money as represents her share in such property, based on the proportionate part of the original purchase money furnished by her for the purchase of such property. She may petition the court of common pleas of the county where such real estate is situate, either before or after the sale of such property by execution, setting forth her claim, and the said court shall fix a day to hear the same. Service upon the defendant in such case shall be made personally, or in the manner provided in the act of General Assembly, approved the sixth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine (Pamphlet Laws, three hundred and eighty-seven), entitled "An act to authorize execution of process in certain cases in equity, concerning property within the jurisdiction of the court, and on defendants not resident or found therein." Service having been made as aforesaid, the court shall, upon hearing the claim, make such decree as shall be proper. In such hearing both husband and wife shall be competent witnesses. If such hearing is held before the sale of the property on the judgment, the court shall determine the proportionate part of the real estate that belongs to the wife.

Sec. 2, Act of May 24, 1923, P. L. 446.

19. Distribution of Proceeds of Sale by Trustee After Sale to Enforce Order of Support. The court of common pleas shall at the time of the hearing, or thereafter, appoint a trustee, who shall receive from the sheriff the proceeds of the sale of such property after the costs have been paid. Such trustee shall, out of such funds, pay to the aforesaid wife such amount of money as the court may have decreed to her as her share in the property sold, or if such decree has been made prior to the sale, then such proportionate part of the said proceeds as the court has found the wife to have contibuted towards the purchase of the property, and also such sums of money, and interest thereon from the time the respective items making up the same became due and payable, which are then due and payable by virtue of the order of support herein mentioned, and the trustee shall also pay to her such further sums as she may be entitled to under any order of court for the support of herself or of the children of her said husband.

Sec. 3, Act of May 24, 1923, P. L. 446.

20. Credit to be Given Wife when Purchase at Sale of Real Estate to Enforce Order of Support. Should the wife become the purchaser at said execution sale, she shall be entitled to a credit on the purchase price thereof for such sums as may have been found by the court to represent her share in such property, and also for such sum or sums of money as may be due her from the defendant, under the order of support upon which the execution was issued, at the time of the said sale, together with interest on said sums due her for support from the time the respective sums became due. Such credit shall be allowed her by the sheriff, or she may assign the several sums due her, as aforesaid, to the purchaser of said property, whereupon credit shall be given the purchaser by the sheriff for the amount so assigned.

Sec. 4, Act of May 24, 1923, P. L. 446.

21. Interest of Divorced Women in Proceeds of Sale of Real Estate Held by Entireties, Sold to Enforce Order for the Support of Her Children. Upon and after the divorce of any woman who is tenant by entireties of real estate with her former husband, such divorced woman shall be entitled to all the rights and remedies provided in this act for the collection of any sums of money ordered and directed by any competent court of this Commonwealth to be paid to her for the support of the children of such former husband, as fully as if she had not been divorced from such person. Upon the sale of said real estate for the collection of any money due her under any order or decree of any court, she shall be entitled to receive therefrom such sum of money as represents her share of such property, based on the proportionate part of the original purchase money furnished by her, as decreed by the court under the provisions of section two herein, together with such sums as may be due to her under and by virtue of an order or decree of support against the defendant.

Sec. 5, Act of May 24, 1923, P. L. 446.

22. Execution on Estates of Absent Husbands of Feme Sole Traders to Amount Spent for Support of Children. Where any mariners or others are gone or hereafter shall go to sea, leaving their wives at shopkeeping, or to work for their livelihood at any other trade in this province, all such wives shall be deemed, adjudged and taken, and are hereby declared to be, as feme sole traders; and shall have ability and by this act are enabled to sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded at law in any court or courts of this province, during their husband's natural lives, without naming their husbands in such suits, pleas or actions; and when judgments are given against such wives, for any debts contracted, or sums of money due from them, since their husbands left them, executions shall be awarded against the goods and chattels in the possession of such wives, or in the hands or possession of others in trust for them, and not against the goods and chattels of their husbands; unless it may appear to the court, where those executions are returnable, that such wives have, out of their separate stock or profit of their trade, paid debts which were contracted by their husbands, or laid out money for the necessary support and maintenance of themselves and children; then and in such case, execution shall be levied upon the estate, real and personal, of such husbands, to the value so paid or laid out, and no more.

Sec. 1, Act of Feb. 22, 1718, 1 Sm. L. 99.

23. Sale of Lands by Absent Husbands Without Provision for Maintenance of Children, Void. If any of the said absene husbands, being owners of lands, tenements or other estate in this province, have aliened, or hereafter shall give, grant, mortgage or alienate from his wife and children, any of the said lands, tenements or estate, without making an equivalent provision for their maintenance, in lieu thereof, every such gift, grant, mortgage or alienation shall be deemed, adjudged and taken to be null and void.

Sec. 2, Act of Feb. 22, 1718, 1 Sm. L. 99.

24. Sale of Lands by Absent Husbands, Lawful in Certain Cases. Provided, That, if such absent husband shall happen to suffer ship wreck, or be by sickness or other casualty disabled to maintain himself, then and in such case, and not otherwise, it shall be lawful for such distressed husband to sell or mortgage so much of his said estate, as shall be necessary to relieve him, and bring him home again to his family.

Sec. 3, Act of Feb. 22, 1718, 1Sm. L. 99.

25. Estates of Absent Husbands to be Taken in Execution for Support of Children in Certain Cases. Attachment to Issue. But if such absent husband, having his health and liberty, stays away so long from his wife and children, without making such provision for their maintenance, before or after his going away, till they are liable to become chargeable to the town or place where they inhabit; or in case such husband doth or shall live in adultery, or cohabit unlawfully with another woman, and refuses or neglects, within seven years next after his going to sea, or departing this province to return to his wife and cohabit with her again; then and in every such case, the lands, tenements and estate belonging to such husbands, shall be and are hereby made liable and subject to be seized and taken in execution, to satisfy any sum or sums of money, which the wives of such husbands or guardians of their children shall necessarily expend or lay out for their support and maintenance; which execution shall be found upon process of attachment against such estates, wherein the absent husband shall be made defendant.

Sec. 4, Act of Feb. 22, 1718, 1 Sm. L. 99.

26. "Children," "Separation" And "Nonsupport" Defined. As used in this act, the word "children" shall be limited to mean children under sixteen years of age, and also such children over sixteen and under twenty-one years of age as, by reason of infirmity, are incapable of supporting themselves; and further that "separation" or "nonsupport" within the meaning of this act, shall include every case where a husband has caused his wife to leave him by conduct on his part which would be ground for divorce, or father has neglected to provide for maintenance, support and care of his wife or children or wife and children.

Sec. 1, Act of July 12, 1919, P. L. 939.

27. Neglect of Father to Maintain Children a Misdemeanor. Order for Support. Competent Witnesses. In addition to the remedies now provided by law, if any husband or father, being within the limits of this Commonwealth, shall hereafter separate himself from his wife or from his children or from wife and children, without reasonable cause, or shall wilfully neglect to maintain his wife or children, such wife, or children, being destitute or being dependent wholly or in part on their earnings for adequate support, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, be sentenced to imprisonment not exceeding one year, and to pay a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or either, or both, at the discretion of the court; such fine, if any, to be paid or applied, in whole or in part, to the wife or children, as the court may direct:

Provided, That no such conviction, payment, or fine, or undergoing imprisonment shall in any manner affect the obligation of any order for support theretofore made against the defendant in the court of quarter sessions or the municipal court in the manner now provided by law: And, provided further, That upon conviction the court may suspend sentence upon and during compliance by the defendant with any order for support theretofore made against him, as already made or as may thereafter be modified in the manner now provided by law, and, if no such order shall have been made, then the court trying the defendant may make such order for the support by the defendant of his wife and children or either of them, which order shall be subject to modification by the court on cause shown, and may suspend sentence upon and during the compliance by defendant with such order, then made or as thereafter modified, and entry of bond by defendant, with surety of proof by the court, conditioned on compliance with such order.

In any proceedings under this act, the wife or any person having the care, custody, or control of minor children shall be a competent witness.

Sec. 2, Act of June 12, 1919, P. L. 939.

This Act of 1919, substantially reenacts every provision of the Act of March 13, 1903, P. L. 26. See Commonwealth ex rel. Appellant v. John A. Steele, Sheriff, 78 Super. Ct. 352.

28. Jurisdiction. Jurisdiction in all cases for the failure of parents to support children is vested in the court of quarter sessions, except in Philadelphia County where such jurisdiction is vested in the municipal court under Act of July twelfth, one thousand nine hundred and thirteen, (P. L. 711) and its amendments and supplements, and in Allegheny County where it is vested in the Allegheny County Court under Act of May five, one thousand nine hundred and eleven, (P. L. 198) and its amendments and supplements.

Compiler's Note.

(c) Support of Children in Extraordinary Cases.

29. Support by First and Second Class of Families of Persons Confined to Prisons. Cities of the first and second class may appropriate moneys for the maintenance and care of destitute families of persons sentenced in such city to imprisonment, whose families are, and were at the time of the conviction of such person, domiciled within such cities of the first and second class.

Sec. 1, Act of June 23, 1917, P. L. 639, as amended by Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 12, 1923, P. L. 65.

30. Control of Appropriations Made by First and Second Class Cities for Relief of Families of Prisoners. The councils of such cities of the first and second class shall designate a department of the city government to have the control and disbursement, of any such appropriation, and may provide such employes, and fix their salaries, as may be necessary to carry this act into effect.

Sec. 2, Act of June 23, 1917, P. L. 639, as amended by Sec. 2, Act of Apr. 12, 1923, P. L. 65.

31. Application for Assistance to Families of Prisoners. The family of any person, sentenced in such city to imprisonment, which is in destitute circumstances, may apply for assistance to the department having the disbursement of the appropriation. Upon the receipt of any such application, the persons in charge of this work shall investigate the facts of the case, taking into account the number of dependents in each case, and shall either refuse or allow such assistance as may be considered necessary.

Sec. 3, Act of June 23, 1917, P. L. 639.

32. Payment of Assistance by City Treasurer. In all cases where assistance is allowed to any family, the same shall be paid by the city treasurer, upon the warrant of the department having the control of such appropriation, countersigned by the controller.

Sec. 4, Act of June 23, 1917, P. L. 639.

33. Support Allowed to Families of Prisoners by Cities to be in Addition to Payments Received under Laws Permitting Employment of Prisoners. In all cases where assistance is allowed to any destitute family, the person making such allowance shall take into consideration any moneys which may come into the possession of such family under the provisions of an act, approved the thirteenth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three (Pamphlet Laws, one hundred and twelve), entitled "An Act to abolish the contract system in the prisons and reformatory institutions of the State of Pennsylvania, and to regulate the wages of the inmates;" and of an act, approved the first day of June, one thousand nine hundred and fifteen (Pamphlet Laws, six hundred and fifty-six), entitled "An act providing a system of employment and compensation for the inmates of the Eastern Penitentiary, Western Penitentiary, and Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory at Huntingdon, and for such other correctional institutions as shall be hereafter established by the Commonwealth, and making an appropriation therefor;" and of an act, approved the fourth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and fifteen (Pamphlet Laws, eight hundred and twelve), entitled "An act authorizing and regulating the employment of convicts and prisoners on the public highways."

Sec. 5, Act of June 23. 1917, P. L. 639.

34. Support of Children of Lunatic or Feeble-Minded by Guardian from Estate of Lunatic. The guardian, so appointed shall have precisely the same powers, and be subject to the same duties, as a committee on lunacy in the state of Pennsylvania. The court appointing such guardian shall have full power over the same, in directing an allowance for the said ward and for the support and maintenance of his wife, or his other children, and the education of his or her minor children; and shall enter a decree of sale, mortgaging, leasing, or conveyance upon ground-rent of the real estate or any part thereof, of the said ward, whenever in the opinion of the court it is necessary for the support and maintenance of the said ward or his family, or the education of his or her minor children or the payment of his or her debts, or where it is for the interest and advantage of the said ward that the same shall be sold, mortgaged, leased, or let on ground-rent; and all absolute sales in fee simple, except as hereinafter provided, shall be by public sale or vendue, and may be either entirely for cash or partly on credit, and after full advertisement for at least twenty days by handbills, posted in at least twenty of the most public places in the city or county where the said premises shall be situated, and in at least two newspapers, not less than three times in each: Provided, That if the court shall be of the opinion that, under the circumstances, a better price can be obtained by private sale than at public sale, the court may decree and approve the same. Such sale, mortgage, leasing, and lettering on ground-rent shall be upon terms and rates to be approved by the court.

When the said real estate is situated in the same county in which the said person shall reside, or in another county, or counties, and the court shall be satisfied of the propriety of a sale, mortgaging, or leasing, or lettering on ground-rent, upon such real estate, or any part thereof, not within their jurisdiction, it shall be lawful for such court to make an order or decree authorizing such guardian to sell, mortgage, lease, or let upon ground-rent all the real estate of the ward, or so much thereof as the court may think necessary and as it may designate. Thereupon it shall be the duty of the court of common pleas of the county wherein the real estate so designated is situated, upon the petition of such guardian, to make an order for the sale, mortgaging, leasing, or letting upon ground-rent of said real estate, or so much thereof as the court appointing said guardian by it sorder shall designate; and such guardian shall, in all cases, make a return of his proceedings to the said court, in the county in which the real estate was sold, mortgaged, leased or let upon ground-rent shall be found, only. If the same be approved by the court, it shall be found, only. If the same be approved by the court, it shall be confirmed, and said guardian shall make a return of said proceedings to the court by which said guardian was appointed.

The said guardian shall give such bonds and file such accounts, at such periods, as the court shall determine.

Sec. 6, Act of May 28, 1907, P. L. 292.

This section is amended by Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 15, 1915, P. L. 124 (No. 59) but the amendment refers only to the filing of accounts by guardians of lunatics etc., and the audit and appeal therefrom. It in no way affects the interests of children of such lunatics, etc.

35. Support of Children of Public Officers or Employees Enlisted in the Military or Naval Service of the United States. Any said officer or employe, so enlisting, enrolling, or drafted, and having a dependent or dependents as aforesaid, may, at the time of his enlistment, enrollment, or draft, or immediately thereafter, file with the head or chief of the department, bureau, commission, or office in which he is employed, a statement in writing, executed under oath, setting forth the fact and date of his enlistment, enrollment, or draft, his intention to retain his said office or employment, and to resume the duties thereof after the expiration of his service in the military or naval service, or any branch or unit thereof; and the names and addresses of his wife, children and dependent parent or parents, if any such he have; and requesting and directing that one-half of the salary or wages of his said office or employment, not exceeding two thousand ($2,000,00) dollars per annum, shall be paid during his service in the military or naval service or any branch or unit thereof as follows: If he have a wife, to his wife, for her use and that of his children; if he have children and no wife, then to such person as he may designate for the use and benefit of his children. If he have a dependent parent or parents, then he shall direct such sum as he has theretofore been accustomed to contribute to their support to be paid to them, and the amount payable to his wife or children, if any he have, shall be proportionally decreased. If he have no wife or children, he may direct the entire one-half of his said salary or wages, not exceeding two thousand ($2.000.00) dollars per annum, to be paid to his dependent parent or parents, if any such he have; all sums so directed to be paid shall be paid to the person designated, in the same proportional instalments, as nearly as may be, as the salary or wages of such person were theretofore paid to him. With such statement he shall also file powers of attorney, authorizing the proper dependent to receive their proportion of said salary or wages as aforesaid.

Sec. 2, Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 600.

The "officers or employees" referred to in this section are described in section one of the act of 1917, P. L. 600 as any appointive officer or employee, regularly employed by the Commonweatlh or by any department, bureau, commission or office thereof or by any county, municipality, township or school district who shall in time of war enlist, enroll or be drafted into the military or naval service of the United States.

36. Evidence of Dependency. The statement required to be filed by section two of this act shall be prima facie evidence of the dependency of any person named as a dependent in said statement; but the head of any department, bureau, commission, or office may in case of doubt, satisfy himself as to the fact of such dependency, and if the person so nominated as a dependent was not, in fact, dependent upon the officer or employed enlisting, enrolling, or drafted in the military or naval service or any branch or unit thereof, at the time of his enlistment, enrollment, or draft, shall refuse to make any payment to such person on account of the salary or wages of such officer or employe. Such head of a department, bureau, commission, or office shall also satisfy himself, before making payments to dependents under the provisions of this act, that the officer or employe was alive during the period for which any payment is made. No payment shall be made under the provisions of this act to any officer or employe enlisting, enrolling, or drafted, as aforesaid, and so much of the salary or wages of such officer or employe as is not paid, under the provisions of this act, to his dependents and his substitute, shall be recovered back into the fund from which said salary or wages is paid.

Sec. 3, Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 600.

37. Distributing to Children of Compensation Payable Under Workmen's Compensation Act upon Death of Parent. In case of death compensation shall be computed on the following basis, and distributed to the following persons:

1. To the child or children, if there be no widow nor widower entitled to compensation, thirty per centum of wages of deceased, with ten per centum additional for each child in excess of two, with a maximum of sixty per centum, to be paid to their guardian.

2. To the widow or widower, if there be no children, forty per centum of wages.

3. To the widow or widower, if there be one child, fifty per centum of wages.

4. To the widow or widower, if there be two or more children sixty per centum of wages.

5. If there be neither widow, widower, nor children entitled to compensation, then to the father or mother, if dependent to any extent upon the employer at the time of the accident, twenty per centum of wages: Provided, however, That in the case of a minor child who has been contributing to his parents, the dependency of said parents shall be presumed; And provided further, That if the father or mother was totally dependent upon the deceased employe at the time of the accident, the compensation payable to such father or mother shall be forty per centum of wages.

6. If there be neither widow, widower, children, nor dependent parent entitled to compensation, then to the brothers and sisters, if actually dependent to any extent upon the decedent for support at the time of his death, fifteen per centum of wages for one brother or sister, and five per centum additional for each additional brother or sister, with a maximum of twenty-five per centum; such compensation to be paid to their guardian.

7. Whether or not there be dependents as aforesaid, the reasonable expense of burial, not exceeding one hundred dollars, which shall be paid by the employer or insurer directly to the undertaker (without deduction of any amounts therefore paid for compensation or for medical expenses).

Compensation shall be payable under this section to or on account of any child, brother, or sister, only if and while such child, brother and sister, is under the age of sixteen. No compensation shall be payable under this section to a widow, unless she was living with her deceased husband at the time of his death, or was then actually dependent upon him for support. No compensation shall be payable under this section to a widower, unless he be incapable of self-support at the time of his wife's death and be at such time dependent upon her for support. The terms "child" and "children" shall include step-children and adopted children and children to whom he stood in loco parentis, if members of decedent's household at the time of his death, and shall include posthumous children. Should any dependent of a deceased employe die or remarry, or should the widower become capable of self-support, the right of such dependent or widower, to compensation under this section, shall cease: Provided, however, That upon the remarriage of any widow, other than a nonresident alien widow, the employer shall pay to such widow the then value of the compensation payable to her, during one-third of the period during which compensation then remains payable but not exceeding one hundred weeks, calculated in accordance with the provisions of section three hundred and sixteen of this article. If the compensation under this section to any person shall, for any cause, cease, the compensation to the remaining persons entitled thereunder shall thereafter be the same as would have been payable to them had they been the only persons entitled to compensation at the time of the death of the deceased.

The wages upon which death compensation shall be based shall not in any case be taken to exceed twenty dollars per week, nor be less than ten dollars per week.

This compensation shall be paid during three hundred weeks, and, in the case of children entitled to compensation under this section, the compensation of each child shall continue after said period of three hundred weeks until such child reaches the age of sixteen, at the rate of fifteen per centum of wages, if there be but one child, with ten per centum additional for each additional child, with a maximum of fifty per centum. The board may, if the best interest of a child or children shall so require, at any time order and direct the compensation payableto a widow or widower on account of any child or children to be paid to the guardian of such child or children, or, if there be no guardian, to such other person as the board as hereinafter provided may direct. If there be no guardian or committee of any minor, dependent, or insane employe or dependent on whose account compensation is payable, the amount payable on account of such minor, dependent, or insane employe or dependent may be paid to any surviving parent, or to such other person as the board may order and direct, and the board may require any person, other than a guardian or committee, to whom it has directed compensation for a minor, dependent, or insane employe or dependent to be paid to render, as and when it shall so order accounts of the receipts and disbursements of such person, and to file with it a satisfactory bond in a sum sufficient to secure the proper application of the moneys received by such person.

Sec. 1, Act of July 11, 1923, P. L. 1060, (No. 432) amending Sec. 307, Act of June 2, 1915, P. L. 736, as amended.

38. Life Insurance for Benefit of Children Exempt From Claims of Creditors. The net amount payable under any policy of life, insurance or under any annuity contract upon the life of any person, heretofore or hereafter made for the benefit of or assigned to the wife or children or dependent relative of such person, shall be exempt from all claims of the creditors of such person arising out of or based upon any obligation created after the passage of this act, whether or not the right to change the named beneficiary is reserved by or permitted to such person.

Sec. 1, Act of June 28, 1923, P. L. 884 (No. 335)

(d) Support of Illegitimate Children. See Subdivision S. Sections

2. Rights of Parent and Child

(a) Actions for Injuries to Child

39. Who Entitled to Recover Damages for Injuries Resulting in Death. The persons entitled to recover damages for any injuries causing death shall be the husband, widow, children, or parents of the deceased, and no other relatives; and that such husband, widow, children, or parents of the deceased shall be entitled to recover, whether he, she, or they be citizens or residents of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or citizens or residents of any other State or place subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, or of any foreign country, or subjects of any foreign potentate; and the sum recovered shall go to them in the proportion they would take his or her personal estate in case of intestacy, and that without liability to creditors under the laws of this Commonwealth.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 26, 1855, P. L. 309, as amended by Act of June 7, 1911, P. L. 678.

40. One Action Only to be Brought for Parent and Child. Whenever any injury, not resulting in death, shall be wrongfully inflicted upon the person of a child, and a right of action for such wrongful injury accrues to the child and also to the parent, these two rights of action shall be redressed in only one suit, brought in the names of the parent and child.

Sec. 1, Act of May 12, 1897, P. L. 62 (No. 49).

This right of action by the parent and child arises under the common law. This statute simply requires these rights to be redressed in one action.

41. Waiver of Right of Action. Separate Verdicts, Judgments and Executions. Either the parent, or the child by its duly appointed guardian, may waive his or her right of action, and his or her failure to join in the suit within twenty days after service of a rule to join or be barred shall be conclusive evidence of such waiver. But if both parent and child join in the suit, separate verdicts shall be rendered, one verdict determining the right of the child, and the other verdict determining the right of the parent, and separate judgments shall be rendered thereon with the right to separate executions. The rule herein referred to may be entered by the court of its own motion.

Sec. 2, Act of May 12, 1897, P. L. 62 (No. 49)

42. Costs and Witness Fees. If judgment be entered in favor of both plaintiffs, or of either plaintiff, the docket costs and the plaintiff's witness bill may be taxed upon whichever judgment the plaintiffs or the successful plaintiff may direct, but if the defendant recover a judgment against either plaintiff, he may tax his witness bill upon the judgment recovered against the unsuccessful plaintiff.

Sec. 3, Act of May 12, 1897, P. L. 62 (No. 49)

(b) Rights of Parents to Custody of Child.

(For appointment of tentamentary guardian See Sec. 90-94 Infra.)

43. When Mother Contributes to Support, etc., of Child. Hereafter a married woman, who is the mother of a minor child and who contributes by the fruits of her own labor or otherwise toward the support, maintenance and education of her said minor child, shall have the same and equal power, control and authority over her said child and shall have the same and equal right to its custody and services as is now by law possessed by her husband, who is the father of such minor child: Provided, however, That the mother of such minor child is otherwise qualified as a fit and proper person to have the control and custody of said child.

Sec. 1, Act of June 26, 1895, P. L. 316.

44. Award of Custody in Case of Dispute Between Father and Mother. That in all cases of dispute between the father and mother of such minor child, as to which parent shall be entitled to its custody or services, the judges of the courts shall decide, in their sound discretion, as to which parent, if either, the custody of such minor child shall be committed and shall remand such child accordingly, regard first being had to the fitness of such parent and the best interest and permanent welfare of said child.

Sec. 2, Act of June 26, 1895, P. L. 316.

45. When Father Neglects or Refuses to Provide for Children. Exceptions. Whenever any husband or father, from drunkenness, profligacy or other cause, shall neglect or refuse to provide for his child or children, the mother of such children shall have all the rights and be entitled to claim, and be subject to all the duties reciprocally due between a father and his children, and she may place them at employment and receive their earnings, or bind them to apprenticeship, without the interference of such husband, the same as the father can now do by law: Provided, always, That she shall afford them a good example, and properly educate and maintain them according to her ability: And provide, That if the mother be of unsuitable character to be entrusted as aforesaid, or dead, the proper court may appoint a guardian of such children, who shall perform the duties aforesaid, and apply the earnings of such children for their maintenance and education.

Sec. 3, Act of May 4, 1855, P. L. 430.

No decree of Court is necessary in aid of this power. Black v. Tricher, 59 Pa. 13, 18; People S. Bank v. Christ Denig, 131 Pa. 241, 254.

46. Right to Services of Minor Child. Whenever the father of any minor shall not have supported or contributed to its support during a period of six months, or where the mother of such minor shall be charged by law with the support of such minor, such mother shall have the same right to the services of such minor, and the same right to be compensated for the loss of such services, as are now by law possessed by the father of any such minor.

Sec. 1, Act of May 5, 1911, P. L. 177 (No. 137)

47. Binding out by Mothers and Guardians. That in all cases where, by any law of this Commonwealth, the guardian for the relief and employment of the poor of any city, district or township, are authorized to bind any orphan to any city, the said binding may be made by the mother, guardian or next friend of the said orphan, and shall be of the same force and effect, and as binding upon the said orphan, as if the indenture were executed by the guardians of the poor.

Sec. 1, Act of May 23, 1887, P. L. 168 (No. 99)

(For appointment of testamentary guardian see sec. 90-94 infra.)

(c) Change of Name of Parents.

48. Change of Name of Parent or Adopting Parent. Whenever in pursuance of this act a decree is made changing the name of anyone who is at the time thereof the parent of a minor child or children or adopted minor child or children, then under the care of such parent, the new name of such parent shall thereafter be borne likewise by such minor child or children or adopted minor child or children: Provided, That any minor child or children or adopted child, upon attaining their majority respectively, shall also be entitled to the benefits of this act.

Sec. 4, Act of Apr. 18, 1923, P. L. 75.

3 Marriage

49. Requirements for Persons under 21 to secure License. Appointment of Guardian. The clerk of the court shall require of the parties applying, either separately or together, for marriage license, as aforesaid, on oath or affirmation, relative to the legality of the contemplated marriage, the age of the parties, the consent of parents or guardians of such as are under the full age of twenty-one years, and any prior marriage or marriages and its or their dissolution; and, if there be no legal objection thereto, he shall grant such marriage license; or, the parties intending marriage may, either separately or together, appear before any magistrate, alderman, notary public, or justice of the peace of the township, ward, or county wherein either of the contracting parties resides, and in the county where the license is desired, who may and is hereby authorized to inquire of them touching the legality of their contemplated marriage, the age of the parties, the consent of parents or guardians, when required, and such prior marriage and dissolution thereof; and such inquiries and the answers thereto, having been subscribed and sworn to by the parties before such officer, may be forwarded to the clerk of the court, who, if satisfied after an examination thereof that the same is genuine and that no legal objection to the contemplated marriage exists, shall grant a license therefor. If any of the persons intending to marry by virtue of such license shall be under twenty-one years of age, the consent of their parents or guardians shall be personally given before such clerk, or certified under the hand of such parent or guardian, attested by two adult witnesses, and the signature of such parents or guardian shall be properly acknowledged before a notary public or other officer competent under the laws to receive acknowledgements. The certificate and oath shall be filed of record in said office, and entry of the same shall be made by the said clerk on the marriage license docket, as a part of the records of the issuing of said license; and for which he shall receive as his fee the sum of fifty cents in addition to the marriage license fee. When any such minor has no guardian, and the judge of the orphans' court is absent or not accessible, for any reason, the clerk of the orphans' court, or a duly appointed assistant clerk of said court, may appoint for such minor a guardian pro hac vice. A magistrate, alderman, notary public, or justice of the peace, for services rendered by him under the provisions of this act, shall be entitled to fifty cents.

Sec. 1, Act of May 28, 1915, P. L. 636, amending part of Sec. 3, Act of June 23, 1885, P. L. 146.

The Act of July 24, 1913, P. L. 1013 which regulates the issuing of marriage licenses, provides in section 5 that the act shall not be construed to authorize the marriage of persons not of legal age without the consent of parent sand guardians.

B. ILLEGITIMATES.

50. To be Known by Name of Mother. Rights and Privileges. Illegitimate children shall take and be known by the name of their mother, and the common law doctrine of nullius filius shall not apply as between the mother and her illegitimate child or chidlren. But the mother and her heirs, and her illegitimate child and its heirs, shall be mutually liable one to the other, and shall enjoy all the rights and privileges one to the other, in the same manner and to the same extent, as if the said child or children had been born in lawful wedlock.

Sec. 1, Act of July 10, 1901, P. L. 639.
This act gives the mother of an illegitimate child the right to recover damages for the negligent killing of such child. Thompson v. D. L. & W. R. R. Co. 41 Super Ct. 617.

51. Illegitimate Children Iegitimated. In any and every case where the father and mother of an illegitimate child or children shall enter into the bonds of lawful wedlock and cohabit, such child or children shall thereby become legitimated, and enjoy all the rights and privileges as if they had been born during the wedlock of their parents.

Sec. 1, Act of May 14, 1857, P. L. 507, (No. 567.)
This act was repealed by the Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 443, in so far as it relates to inheritance.

52. Illegitimate Children born prior to May 14, 1857. Legitimated. The act entitled "An act to legitimate children born out of lawful wedlock", passed the 14th day of May, 1857, shall be taken to apply to all cases within the terms of that act, prior to its date, as well as those subsequent thereto: Provided, That no estate already vested shall be divested by this act.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 21, 1858, P. L. 413, supplementing the Act of May 14, 1857, P. L. 507, (No. 567) above.

53. Children of Certain Marriages Legitimated. All marriages heretofore contracted between parties within the degrees of affinity, as prescribed in the 39th section of the act of 21st March, 1860, of which issue is born, are hereby legalized, and the child or children of such marriages shall have all the rights and privileges of children born in lawful wedlock: Provided, That nothing in this act shall relate to marriages within the degrees of consanguinity as now prohibited by law.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 6, 1868, P. L. 67.

54. Father of Bastard Child to Give Security for Support. If any person shall commit fornication, and be thereof convicted, he or she shall be sentenced to pay a fine, not exceeding one hundred dollars, to the guardians, directors or overseers of the poor of the city, county, or township where the offense was committed, for the use of the poor of such city, county or township; and any single or unmarried women having a child born of her body, the same shall be sufficient to convict such single or unmarried woman of fornication; and the man by such woman charged to be the father of such bastard child, shall be the reputed father, and she persisting in the said charge, in the time of her extremity of labor or afterwards in open court, upon the trial of such person so charged, the same shall be given in evidence, in order to convict such person of fornication; and such person being thereof convicted, shall be sentenced in addition to the fine aforesaid, to pay the expenses incurred at the birth of such child, and to give security, by one or more sureties, and such sum as the court shall direct, to the guardians, directors or overseers of the poor of the city, county, or township where usch child was born, to perform such order for the maintenance of the said child, as the court before which such conviction is had shall direct and appoint.

Sec. 37, Act of Mar. 31, 1860, P. L. 382.

55. Father of Bastard Child to be Prosecuted in County where Child is Born. If a bastard child is begotten out of the state, and born within the state, or begotten within one of the counties of this state, and born in another, in the latter case, the prosecution of the reputed father shall be in the county where the bastard child shall be born, and the like sentence shall be passed as if the bastard child had been or shall have been begotten within the sam county; and in the former case, viz: of a bastard begotten without the state and born within it, the like sentence shall be passed, except in the imposition of a fine, which part of the sentence shall be omitted.

Sec. 38, Act of Mar. 31, 1860, P. L. 382.

56. Support of Illegitimate Child. Any parent who shall wilfully neglect of refuse to contribute reasonably to the support and maintenance of a child born out of lawful wedlock shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars ($500.) or imprisonment not exceeding six months, or both, with or without hard labor in the dicretion of the court.

Sec. 1, Act of July 11, 1917, P. L. 773. (No. 290) On cases arising before act see 73 Super Ct. 349. Commonwealth v. Palmer, Appellant.

57. Prosecution for Failure to Support Illegitimate Child to be Brought Within Two Years of Birth—Exceptions. Proceedings under this act may be instituted upon complaint made, under oath or affirmation, by the parent of such child. All prosecutions under this act must be brought within two years of the birth of the child: Provided, however, That where the reputed father shall have voluntarily contributed to the support of the child, or shall have acknowledged in writing his paternity, then a prosecution under this act may be brought at any time within two years of any such contribution or acknowledgement by the reputed father.

Sec. 1, Act of July 21, 1919, P. L. 1075, amending Sec. 2, Act of July 11, 1917, P. L. 773 (No. 290).

58. Illegitimate Child to be Supported Regardless of Where Begotten or Born. This act shall apply whether such child shall have been begotten or shall have been born within or without this Commonwealth.

Sec. 3, Act of July 11, 1917, P. L. 773 (No. 290).

59. Order of Support on Father of Illegitimate Child Instead of Fine. Before the trial, with the consent of the defendant indorsed on the bill of indictment, as now provided by law, or at the trial on entry of a plea of guilty, or after conviction, instead of imposing the fine herein provided, or in addition thereto, the court in its discretion, having regard to the circumstances and to the financial ability and earning capacity of the defendant, shall have the power to make an order, which shall be subject to change by the court, from time to time, as circumstances may require directing the defendant to pay a certain sum periodically, for such time and to such person as the court may direct; and the court shall have the power to suspend the sentence herein provided, and release the defendant from custody on probation in manner provided by "An act for relief of wives and children deserted by their husbands and fathers within this Commonwealth," approved the thirteenth day of April, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, and the supplements thereof; provided that the defendant has entered into a recognizance, in such sum, with or without surety, as the court shall direct, for compliance with such order.

Sec. 4, Act of July 11, 1917, P. L. 773 (No. 290).

60. Parents Supporting Illegitimate Children under Order of Court Not to be Subject to Fine or Imprisonment. Whenever a parent is paying for the support of the child, under an order of court made in any other proceeding, civil, criminal, or quasi-criminal, said parent shall not be subject to proceedings for support for the same child under this act: Provided, however, That if said parent, as defendant in such other proceedings, has failed to obey such order of court, said parent shall be subject to all the provisions of this act.

Sec. 5, Act of July 11, 1917, P. L. 773, (No. 290).

61. False Statements as to Parentage of Child. Any person who shall, at any state of the proceedings under this act, knowingly make false statement as to who is the parent of the child, shall be guilty of the crime of perjury.

Sec. 6, Act of July 11, 1917, P. L. 773, (No. 290).

C. MINOR'S RIGHTS AND DISABILITIES IN GENERAL (CIVIL STATUS)

62. When Minor Children of a Decedent Entitled to $500 Exemption. When a husband dies testate or intestate without a widow or leaving a widow who has forgeited her rights, the children, forming part of the family of the decedent may retain or claim either real or personal property or the proceeds thereof, belonging to the estate, to the value of five hundred dollars; and in case such children are minors section twelve of the Act of 1917, P. L. 447 provides as follows:

In the case of any decedent leaving to survive him any minor child or children forming part of his family, and no widow, his administrator or executor, without request made to him by any one, shall have appraised and set aside, for the use and benefit of all such minor children of said decedent, property to the full value of five hundred dollars. The guardian of said child or children, and, if there be none, the administrator or executor, with the appraisers, shall make selection of the property to be set aside; and in so doing the said guardian, or the said administrator or executor, with the appraisers, shall be governed by the necessities of such child or children, under the circumstances of each case.

Compiler's Note.

63. Membership in Mutual Life Insurance Companies. It shall be lawful for minors who have attaned the age of eighteen years to make all needful contracts to become members of mutual life insurance companies organized and doing business under the laws of this Commonwealth.

Sec. 430, Act of May 17, 1921, P. L. 682.

64. Memberships in Fraternal Benefit Societies. Any such society may admit to beneficial membership any person not less than sixteen and not more than sixty years of age, and it shall be lawful for minors who have attained the age of sixteen years to make all needed contracts and assume all needful obligations to become members. Each applicant shall be examined by a legally qualified physician, and the examination supervised and approved in accordance with the laws of the society. Any beneficial member applying for a certificate providing for disability benefits need not be required to pass an additional medical examination therefor. Nothing herein contained shall prevent such society from accepting general or social members.

Sec. 7, Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 916.

"Such Society" refers to a fraternal benefit society organized solely for the benefit of its members and their beneficiaries, not for profit, having a lodge system with ritualistic work and a representative form of government and which makes provision for the payment of benefits.

65. Banks may Permit Minors to Withdraw Money by Them Deposited. The board of trustees of any bank in this Commonwealth shall have full power, at their discretion, to pay, on application, the check, proper receipt or order of any minor or married woman such money, or any part thereof as he or she may have deposited to his or her credit, or any interest or dividend accruing thereon, without the assent or approbation of the parent or guardian of such minor, or the husband of such married woman, as the case may be; and it shall not be lawful for the parent or guardian of such minor, or the husband or creditors of the husband of such married woman, to attach, or in any manner interfere with any deposit, interest or dividend thereon to such minor or married woman.

Sec. 1, Act of May 15, 1874, P. L. 193.

66. Hunting and Trapping by Minors. It is unlawful for any person:

(a) Except in the defense of person or property, to hunt or chase or to shoot at or kill or pursue with intent to take, kill, or wound any wild birds or wild animals with firearms or with a device of any kind propelling with force a leaden or metal pellett or bullet, or through the use of traps, or with any other device, or instrument, or by the use of dogs, without first securing a license and license tag, and wearing such tag and showing and displaying such license as required by the provisions of this article. Nothing in this clause shall be construed to prevent any person under the age of sixteen years to trap for fur-bearing animals or vermin without securing a license;

(b) Under the age of fourteen years to receive a hunting license under any circumstances whatsoever;

(c) Under the age of sixteen years to receive a hunting license without presenting a written request therefor, bearing the signature of his father or mother or legally constituted guardian;

(d) Under the age of sixteen years to use firearms of any kind for the purpose of hunting any wild birds or wild animals unless accompanied by a person twenty-one years of age, or over, unless such hunting is done on the premises whereon such person resides;

Part of Sec. 311, Act of May 24, 1923, P. L. 359.

67. Right to take Rabbits in Box Traps. That residents under the age of fourteen years may take rabbits, not exceeding the bag limits provided by this act, through the use of box-traps, during the open season upon the lands whereon such persons reside if visited at least once every thirty-six hours.

Clause (c) Sec. 703, Act of May 24, 1923, P. L. 359. The bag limits fixed by this act for five in one day and forty in one season: See Sec. 502, of the Act of May 24, 1923, P. L. 359.

68. Fishing in the Waters of the Commonwealth. The resident fish license law of May 16, 1921, P. L. 559, as amended by the act of May 24, 1923, P. L. 423 requires all citizens over the age of eighteen years to secure a license before angling or fishing in any of the waters of the Commonwealth. Since there is no provisions for citizens under the age of eighteen years it follows that such persons may fish without a license; but citizens of the United States who are not citizens of Pennsylvania, regardless of age, must secure a license before angling or fishing in the waters of the Commonwealth: See the act of July 8, 1919, P. L. 778.

Compiler's Note.

69. Minors over the Age of Sixteen Years may be Licensed to Drive Motor Vehicles. No person shall operate a motor vehicle upon any public highway of this Commonwealth until such person shall have obtained from the department a license or permit for such purpose: Provided, Any person sixteen (16) years of age or over who has not been refused, and who has not had his motor vehicle operator's license suspended or revoked, may operate a motor vehicle with a learner's permit while under the instruction of, and accompanied by, a Pennsylvania licensed operator, who shall have full control of the motor vehicle as provided by law. No such license shall be issued until the applicant therefor has signed and filed with the department an application under oath,—except that renewals from the year just previous need not be under oath,—stating such information as the department shall require; nor shall such license be issued until the commissioner is satisfied that the applicant is sixteen (16) years of age or over, and is a proper person to receive such license. Before granting a license to any applicant who has not held a Pennsylvania motor vehicle operator's paid driver's or chauffer's, or owner's driver's, license during the preceding year, the commissioner shall require such applicant to demonstrate personally to him or his representative, in such manner as said commissioner may direct, that such applicant is a proper person to operate a motor vehicle, has sufficient knowledge of the mechanism of motor vehicles to insure their safe operation by him, and a satisfactory knowledge of all laws concerning motor vehicles and the rules of the road: Provided, When any such applicant shall have held an operator's license from a State where a similar examination is required the commissioner may waive part or all of such examination in his discretion. When the commissioner is satisfied as to the ability and competency of any applicant he may issue to him a license either unlimited or containing such limitations as the commissioner shall deem advisable; Provided, That the applicant is not mentally impaired and is not physically incapacitated, which incapacitation includes the following: Any person who has lost the use of one hand or both, or who has lost the use of both feet, or whose eyesight is so impaired that with the aid of glasses he cannot distinguish substantial objects clearly at a distance of one hundred fifty (150) feet, or who shall have less than twenty (20) per centum of normal vision (to possess twenty (2) per centum of normal vision one must be able, with one eye to read all the letters on the line marked twenty (20) of standard test type, at a distance of four (4) feet), or shall have less than two (2) per centum of normal hearing (to possess two (2) per centum of normal hearing one must respond when addressed in a natural tone of voice by another standing one (1) foot behind):

Provided, That the Commissioner may, at his discretion, issue a license or permit to a person who has lost the use of one hand only, or who has lost the use of both feet, or who has less than two (2) per centum of normal hearing, and upon the receipt of such evidence or demonstration as shall satisfy him that such person has had sufficient experience in the operation of a motor vehicle to enable him to do so without endangering the safety of the public: Provided, That persons who have less than two (2) per centum of normal hearing shall not be permitted to operate any motor vehicle unless same is equipped with a mirror or other device that will enable such operator to see traffic approaching from the rear.

The commissioner shall issue a learner's permit to persons sixteen (16) years of age or over, not mentally or physically incapacitated as defined in this act, who may desire to learn to operate a motor vehicle; such permit shall be issued for a period of thirty (30) days, but shall be valid only when such person is accompanied by a licensed operator, who shall have full control of the motor vehicle as provided by law.

Such license or permit shall be numbered and shall set forth the name and residence, and such license or permit shall be carried at all times when operating a motor vehicle, but shall not be valid until signed by the owner thereof.

All licenses shall expire on the last day of February of each year.

Any person knowingly making any misstatement of facts his application for a license or permit shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be subject to a fine of not less than one hundred ($100) dollars or more than two hundred ($200) dollars, or to undergo imprisonment not exceeding six (6) months, or both, at the discretion of the court; and the clerk of the court in which such conviction is had shall certify forthwith such conviction to the commissioner, who shall suspend or revoke the license issued to such person, and no other license shall be issued to such person for a period of one (1) year following such suspension or revocation.

Sec. 8 Act of June 14, 1923, P. L. 718, amending Sec. 10, Act of June 13, 1919, P. L. 678 as amended.

70. Exemption from Arrest for Nonpayment of Taxes. Sections twenty-one and thirty-five of the Act of April 15, 1834, P. L. 509. provide for the imprisonment of delinquents who have failed to pay their county or township taxes and who do not have sufficient personal property to obtain satisfaction by distress and sale of such property. But Section forty-five of this act of April 15, 1834, as amended by the Act of May 8, 1923, P. L. 169 prohibits the use of this remedy against infants. The provisions of this latter section are as follows:

Nothing herein contained shall authorize the arrest or imprisonment for nonpayment of any tax of any infant or person found by inquisition to be of unsound mind.

Compiler's Note.

D. ADOPTION

(Note: For effect of change of name of adopting parent, see Sec. 4, Act of April 18, 1923, P. L. 75. Section above).

71. Procedure in Adoptions. It shall be lawful for any person desirous of adopting any child as his or her heir, or as one of his or her heirs, to present his or her petition to such court in the county where he or she may be resident, declaring such desire, and that he or she will perform all the duties of a parent to such child; and such court, if satisfied that the welfare of such child will be promoted by such adoption may, with the consent of the parents or surviving parent of such child, or if none, of the next friend of such child, or of the guardian or overseers of the poor, or of such charitable institution as shall have supported such child for at least one year, decree that such child shall assume the name of the adopting parent, and have all the rights of a child and heir of such adopting parent, and be subject to the duties of such child, of which the record of the court shall be sufficient evidence; Provided, That if such adopting parent shall have other children, the adopted shall share the inheritance only as one of them in case of intestacy, and he, she or they shall respectively inherit from and through each other, as if all had been the lawful children of the same parent.

Sec. 7, Act of May 4, 1855, P. L. 430. "Such court" referred to in the above section is the Court of Common Pleas, named in the fourth section of the said Act of May 4, 1855, P. L. 430.

This section does not make the adopted child the child of the person adopting it, except as specifically provided in the section itself. Schafer v. Eneu, 54 Pa. 304. Temporary residence in the county by the person seeking to adopt is sufficient. Brown's Adoption, 25 Super. Ct. 259. Wolf's Appeal, 22 W. N. C. 93.

"Next friend" construed, McGinness's Adoption, 74 Super. Ct. 523.

The act contemplates a proceeding in court after all parties interested have had due notice, and the consent of all parties interested to the particular adoption has been obtained; and the assent of the parties mentioned in the act in giving or waiving a right should affirmatively appear. Keeler's Adoption, 52 Super. Ct. 516, Vandermis v. Gilbert, 10 Super. Ct. 570.

This section of the Act of 1855 was amended by Sec. 1, of the Act of May 19, 1887, P. L. 125, so as to read:

72. That it shall be lawful for any person desirous of adopting any child as his or her heir, or as one of his or her heirs to present his or her petition to such court in the county where he or she may be resident, declaring such desire, and that he or she will perform all the duties of a parent to such child; and such court, if satisfied that the welfare of such child will be promoted by such adoption, may, with the consent of the parents or surviving parent of such child, or if the mother or father from drunkenness, profiligacy, or other cause, shall have neglected or refused to provide for his or her child or children for the period of one year or upwards, proven to the court, with the consent of the non-neglecting father or mother alone, or, if none, of the next friend of such child, or of the guardians or overseers of the poor, or of such charitable institution as shall have supported such child for at least one year, decree that such child shall assume the name of the adopting parent, and have all the rights of a child and heir of such adopting parent, and be subject to the duties of such child, of which the record of the court shall be sufficient evidence: Provided, That if such adopting parent shall have other children, the adopted shall share inheritance only as one of them, in case of intestacy, and he, she, or they shall respectively inherit from and through each other, as if all had been the lawful children of the same parent.

This section was amended by Sec. 1, of the Act of April 22, 1905, P. L. 297 so as to read.

73. That it shall be lawful for any person desirous of adopting any child as his or her heir, or as one of his or her heirs, to present his or her petition to such court in the county where he or she may be resident, declaring such desire, and that he or she will perform all the duties of a parent to such child; and such court if satisfied that the welfare of such child will be promoted by such adoption, may, with the consent of the parent's or surviving parent of such child, or, if such child shall have been judicially committed to the care of any person or corporation, as being destitute, homeless, abandoned or dependent on the public, or having no parental care, or if, upon a third conviction of the parent or parents of such child of any crime or misdemeanor against or in relation to such child, before any magistrate, justice of the peace or court of record, or any one of them, such child shall have been committed to the care of any person or corporation, then with the consent of such person or corporation having the custody and control of such child and that of the non-neglecting or innocent parent alone, if one be living; or, if the father or mother, from drunkenness, profligacy or other cause, shall have neglected or refused to provide for such child for the period of one year or upwards, proven to the satisfaction of the court, then with the consent of the nonneglecting father or mother alone, or, if none, of the next friend of such child, or of the guardians or overseers of the poor, or of such charitable institution as shall have supported such child for at least one year; decree that such child shall assume the name of the adopting parent, and have all the rights of a child and heir of such adopting parent, and be subject to the duties of such child, of which the record of the court shall be sufficient evidence: Provided, That if such adopting parent shall have other children, the adopted shall share inheritance only as one of them, in case of intestacy, and he she or they shall respecitvely inherit from and through each other, as if all had been the lawful children of the same parent.

This section was amended by Sec. 1, of the Act of May 28, 1915, P. L. 580, so as to read:

74. That it shall be lawful for any person desirous of adopting any child as his or her heir, or as one of his or her heirs, to present his or her petition to such court in the county where he or she may be resident, declaring such desire, and that he or she will perform all the duties of a parent to such child; and such court, if satisfied that the welfare of such child will be promoted by such adoption, may, with the consent of the parents, or surviving parent, of such child; or, if the father or mother from drunkenness, profligacy, or other cause, shall have neglected or refused to provide for his or her child or children for the period of one year or upwards, proven to the court, with the consent of the non-neglecting father or mother alone; or, if none of the next friend of such child, or the guardians or overseers of the poor, or of such charitable institution as shall have supported such child for at least one year—decree that such child shall assume the name of the adopting parent, and be subject to the duties of such child; and said adopting parent and said child shall, respectively, inherit and take by devolution from and through each other personal estate as next of kin, and real estate as heirs in fee simple, or otherwise, under the intestate laws of this Commonwealth, as fully as if the person adopted had been born a lawful child of the adopting parent, of which the record of the court shall be sufficient evidence: Provided, That, if such adopting parent shall have other children, the adopted shall share inheritance only as one of them in case of intestacy, and he, she or they shall respectively inherit from and through each other, as if all had been lawful children of the same parent.

This section of the Act of 1855, as amended by the Acts of 1887, 1905 and 1915 was repealed in so far as it relates to inheritance and devolution by the intestate laws by the Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 429.

75. Inheritance Between Adopted Person and Adopting Parents. Between Adopted Person and Adoptive Relatives. Natural Kindred Excluded. Any minor or adult person adopted according to law, and the adopting parent or parents shall, respectively, inherit and take by devolution from and through each other, personal estate as next of kin, and real estate as heirs, under the provisions of this act, as fully as if the person adopted has been born a lawful child of the adopting parent or parents.

The person adopted shall, for all purposes of inheritance and taking devolution, be a member of the family of the adopting parent or parents. The adoptive relatives of the person adopted shall be entitled to inherit and take from and through such person, to the exclusion of his or her natural parents, grandparents, and collateral relatives; and the surviving spouse as such adopted person, and the children and descendents of such adopted person, shall have all his, her and their respective rights under this act. Adopted persons shall not be entitled to inherit or take from or through their natural parents, grandparents, or collateral relatives, but each adopted person shall have all his or her rights under this act in the estates of his or her spouse, children and descendants.

Sec. 16, Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 429.

76. Rights and Powers of Association or Individual to Whom Child Has Been Committed. In any case where the court shall award a dependent child to the care of any association or individual, in accordance with the provisions of this act, the child shall, unless otherwise ordered, become a ward, and be subject to the guardianship of the association or individual to whose care it is committed. Such association or individual shall have authority to place such child in a family home, with or without indenture, and may be made party to any proceedings for the legal adoption of the child, and may, by its or his attorney or agent, appear in any court where such proceedings are pending and assent to such adoption. And such assent shall be sufficient to authorize the court to enter the proper order or decree of adoption. Such guardianship shall not include the guardianship of any estate of the child.

Sec. 5, Act of April 23, 1903, P. L. 274. See Comm. Query: Does this section change the adoption statutes relating to the consent of parents as construed in Keeler's Adoption 52 Super. Ct. 516, and Vandermis v. Gilbert 10 Super. Ct. 270, or affects the rights of parents having no notice of an adoption proceedings?

77. Adoption by Person Living in Another State. From and after the passage of this act the several courts of Common pleas of the state of Pennsylvania are authorized to decree the adoption of children, under the age of twenty-one years, who are residing in the county in which the application is made at the time of such application by a person living in another state, upon the petition of the parents of such child, or either of such parents, or, if none, the next friend of such child, or of the guardians or overseers of the poor, or of such charitable institution as shall have supported such child for at least one year, and the court shall be satisfied that the person adopting such child if a fit person to have the custody of the same. This act to apply as well to proceedings now pending as to subsequent proceedings.

Sec. 1, Act of July 2, 1901, P. L. 606, (No. 301) The validity of the above section has been questioned in Smith's Adoption 14, D. R. 769.

78. Child Deserted by Parents. Whenever it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court of common pleas of any county, that any minor child has been deserted by its parents or surviving parent, and that it has no legal guardian, it shall be lawful for any person desirous of adopting the said child, to adopt the same, in the manner now provided by law in the case of the death of the parents.

Sec. 10, Act of June 11, 1879, P. L. 142, (No. 151)

79. Recording Deeds of Adoption. Effect. In all cases heretofore, as well as hereafter, when the common-law form of adopting a child by deed has been practiced or done, it shall be lawful, on proof of due execution of the deed, to have the same recorded in the proper office for the recording of deeds, in the county where the adopting parent resides at the date of its execution: and duly certified copy thereof shall be received in evidence, with the same force and effect as the record of adoption would have in the mode provided in the act to which this is a supplement.

Sec. 1, Act of April 2, 1872, P. L. 31, (No. 20) Adoption was unknown to the common law. The above section created a new method of adoption. Carroll's Est., 219 Pa. 440; Ballard v. Ward 89 Pa. 358.

E. GUARDIAN AND WARD. TRUSTEES.

80. Jurisdiction of Orphans' Court Over Guardians. The jurisdiction of the several orphans courts, whether separate or otherwise, shall extend to and embrace:—

The appointment, control, removal, and discharge of the guardians of minors, and the settlement of their accounts;

Part of Sec. 9, Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 363.

81. Appointment of Guardians. Bonds. Allowances for Minors Accounts. (a) The orphans' court of each county shall have the care of the persons of minors resident within said county, and of their estates, and shall have power to admit such minors, over the age of fourteen, when and as often as there shall be occasion, to make choice of guardians, and to appoint guardians for such as are under the age of fourteen or otherwise incompetent to make choice for themselves. Such appointment or admission of a guardian, by the orphans' court of the county in which the minor resides, shall have the like effect in every other county in this Commonwealth as in that by the orphans' court of which he shall have been so admitted or appointed.

(b) Persons of the same religious persuasion as the parents of the minors shall, in all cases, be preferred by the court, in their appointment as guardians of the persons of such minors.

(c) No executor, administrator, or trustee shall be admitted or appointed, by the orphans' court, guardian of a minor having an interest in the estate under the care of such fiduciary: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to the case of a testamentary guardian.

(d) The orphans' court shall not appoint the father or the mother of a minor as guardian of the estate of said minor: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to the case of a testamentary guardian: And provided further, That where the estate of the minor shall be of the value of one hundred dollars or less, the court may, in its discretion, authorize payment or delivery thereof to the natural guardian of the minor or the person by whom the minor is maintained, without the appointment of a guardian by the court or the entry of security.

(e) The orphans' court of each county shall have power to appoint guardians of the estates of minors residing out of the Commonwealth, in all cases where such minors are possessed of estates lying within the jurisdiction of said court, upon the petition of the minors, if over the age of fourteen, and if it be reasonably practicable for such minors to present their own petitions, and, in other cases, on the petitions of persons qualified to act as their next friend, without requiring the said minors to appear in court to make choice of such guardians.

(f) The orphans' court of each county shall have power to appoint guardians of the persons and estates of minors, residents of such county, who may be absent in the service of the United States, or who may be physically unable to appear and choose for themselves, or who may be so distant from the seat of justice of the county as to make it unnecessarily expensive for them to appear, upon the petition of the minors, if over the age of fourteen, and if it be reasonably practicable for such minors to present their own petitions, and, in other cases, on the petitions of persons qualified to act as their next friends, without requiring the said minors to appear in court to make choice of such guardians: Provided, That, when the appointment shall be made on petition of next friend, the minor, if of the age of fourteen, or on attaining that age, may subsequently appear and choose his guardian.

(g) The orphans' court having jurisdiction, whenever they may deem it proper, may require a bond, with good and sufficient corporate security, or with two good and sufficient individual sureties, from every guardian of a minor, whether admitted or appointed by the court or appointed by will; or, in the case of a corporation duly authorized by its charter or by law to act as guardian, said county may permit such corporation to give its own bond without surety. Guardians' bonds shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the court, and be considered in trust for all persons interested; the bonds shall be taken to the Commonwealth in such penalties as the court shall direct, and the condition shall be in the following form:

The condition of this obligation is such, that if the above-bounden A. D., guardian of C. D., a minor child of E. F., (late of .....deceased) shall, at least once in every three years, and at any other time when required by the orphans' court for the county of ....., render a just and true account of the management of the property and estate of the said minor, under his care, and shall also deliver up the said property, agreeably to the order and decree of the said court, or the directions of law, and shall, in all respects, faithfully perform the duties of guardian of the said C. D., then the above obligation shall be void, otherwise it shall be and remain in full force and virtue.

Provided, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to deprive a minor of any action or remedy to which he may be entitled at the common law, against his guardian, for any cause whatever.

(h) Every guardian shall, within thirty days after any property of his ward shall have come into his hands or possession, or into the hands and possession of any person for him, file in the office of the clerk of the court a just and true inventory and statement, on oath or affirmation, of all such property or estate.

(i) When any one shall die, leaving an infant child or children, without having made an adequate provision for the support and education of such child or children during their minority, the orphans' court may direct a suitable periodical allowance, out of the minor's estate, for the support and education of such minor, according to the circumstances of each case; which order may, from time to time, be varied by the court, according to the age of the minor and the circumstances of the case.

(j) 1. Every guardian, whether required by the court to give security or not, shall, at least once in every three years, and at any other time when so required by the court, render an account of the management of the minor's property under his care; which accounts shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the orphans' court, for the information of the court and inspection of all parties concerned.

2. After the filing of such account or accounts, such guardian, or any person qualified to act as next friend of the minor, may petition the orphans' court of the respective county for leave to have said account or accounts examined or audited and confirmed, with the same force and effect as executors', administrators', and trustees' accounts are examined or audited and confirmed.

3. Such petition shall set forth why such account or accounts should be examined or audited and confirmed, and shall contain full information as to who may be next of kin or nearest relative of age to such minor or minors, and all others interested in the minor's estate, together with their addresses of it is possible to give them.

4. The court may thereupon direct to whom, and what notice, if any, shall be given to such next of kin, or nearest relative of age, or the parties interested in said minor's estate, including the minor or minors if fourteen years of age or over, of the filing of said account or accounts and presentation of said petition.

5. After the filing of due proof of the service of said notice, if any be required by the court, the court may, if it be satisfied that any reasonable necessity exists, for the examination or audit and confirmation of such account or accounts, asked by said petition, thereupon appoint some suitable person to act as guardian ad litem for the minor or minors interested in said account or accounts; and the same shall be thoroughly examined by said guardian ad litem, who shall make report to the court of the result of his examination; or the court may examine and audit said account itself; and, after said examination or audit is completed, a final decree of confirmation as to the matters contained in said account or acoounts, and said report or reports, and said audit or audits, shall be made by the court, which decree of confirmation shall be final and conclusive as to matters contained in said accounts, reports, or audits and decrees, with the same force and effect as such decrees now have in respect to the accounts of executives, administrators, and trustees and the audits thereof.

6. The costs of said audits or examinations, including a fee for said guardian ad litem to be fixed by the court, shall be allowed as part of the administration expenses, and be paid by such guardian out of the property of the ward in their hands, and allowed as credits in said decrees; or the said costs shall, in the discretion of the court, be paid by the said guardians personally.

7. Appeals from such decrees, and rehearings of such accounts, shall be allowed, in the same manner and form, and with the same force and effect, as are, allowed in the similar cases of other fiduciaries.

8. Every such guardian, unless previously discharged or removed, shall, on the arrival of his ward at full age, file in the register's office a full and complete account of his management of the minor's property under his care, including all the matters embraced in each partial account; except where an examination or audit, and final decree of confirmation, has taken place as hereinbefore provided, in which case said final account shall include only such matters as were not included in such former accounts and decrees aforesaid. And the decree of the orphans' court upon such final account shall, like other decrees of the court, be conclusive upon all parties, unless reversed, modified, or altered on appeal.

(k) In all cases in which proceedings may be had in any orphans' court affecting the interest of a minor, notice of such proceedings shall be given to the guardian of such minor in the same manner as is provided by law in the case of persons of full age. If such minor has no guardian appointed by an orphans' court of this Commonwealth, or by will probated within this Commonweatlh, the orphans' court in which such proceedings shall be pending shall appoint a guardian ad litem for such minor, in the same manner as is provided by this act in the case of ordinary applications for the appointment of guardians. If such minor or his next friend shall fail or refuse to apply for the appointment of a guardian ad litem, as aforesaid, then such guardian shall be appointed by said court on petition filed by any person interested in such proceedings. Notice shall be served, as aforesaid, upon such guardian ad litem whenever notice shall be requisite.

Sec. 59, Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 447.

82. Leases of Real Estate by Guardians. Unless it be otherwise provided by the will, any testamentary trustee, shall have power to make a lease of real estate included in the trust, for a term not exceeding five years; and any guardian shall have power to make a lease of real estate belonging to his ward, for a term, not exceeding five years, that shall expire before the minor, if living, would attain his majority. If any testamentary trustee or guardian shall deem it advisable to make such lease for a longer period than aforesaid, the orphans' court of the county wherein such real estate shall be situated, on the application of such trustee or guardian, being aided where necessary by the report of a master, may authorize, such trustee or guardian to lease such real estate, and such terms and conditions, at such rental, and for such period as shall appear just and equitable to said court, with the same force and effect as though said lease were made by the beneficial owner or owners, and he or they were sui juris and owned the property in fee. In all cases where such application shall be approved by any orphans' court, the court may direct said trustee or guardian, before making such lease, to file his bond in said court, in such sum as the court shall direct, and with good and sufficient corporate security, or with two good and sufficient individual sureties, approved by said court, conditioned for the faithful application or payment by him of all rents to be received under said lease: Provided, That where such trustee or guardian shall be a corporation duly authorized by law, the court may, in lieu of security as aforesaid, permit such corporation to enter its own bond without surety.

Sec. 31, Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 447.

83. Suits Against Guardians Not Resident in County Where Court Has Jurisdiction of Accounts. In all cases where executors, administrators, guardians, or trustees shall not reside within the county the orphans' court of which has jurisdiction of their accounts, proceedings may be had and suits may be brought against them by creditors and others interested in the estates in the counties where such accounts are to be settled; and process may be served on said fiduciaries in any other county by the sheriff of such other county, who shall be deputized for that purpose by the sheriff of the county in which the process issues, or process may be served upon any surety on the official bonds of such fiduciaries.

Sec. 37, Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 447.

84. Guardians of Minors to Agree to Organization of Corporations by Fiduciaries and Investment Therein of Estate Belonging to Minors. (a) Fiduciaries may themselves, or jointly with others, organize a corporation to carry on the business of the decedent, whether he die testate or intestate, whether the business was owned solely by him or in partnership with others, if such business be one for which a charter could have been obtained in the lifetime of the decedent, and may contribute all or part of the property of the estate which was invested in the business, at the time of the death of the decedent, as capital to such corporation and accept stock in the corporation in lieu thereof.

(b) No such corporation shall be organized without the approval of the orphans' court having jurisdiction of the accounts of such fiduciaries first had and obtained, upon petition filed setting forth all the facts and circumstances and the proposed terms and conditions of the organization. Such notice as shall be prescribed by said court shall be given to all persons having any beneficial interest, vested or contingent, in the estate of the decedent, who are in being at the time of the filing of such petition; and the said court shall approve such organization only after inquiring into the circumstances and the proposed terms and conditions of such organization, aided, if necessary, by the report of a master and only with the written consent of all persons interested who shall be sui juris, and of the guardians or committees of such as shall be under age or non compos mentis.

(c) The stock of any such corporation issued to such fiduciaries shall be held by them for the same uses, trusts, and persons as the estate and property were held before the organiaztion of such corporation; they shall have the same right and power to vote such stock, subject to the same control by the court, as prescribed by section forty-three of this act regarding shares of stock belonging to the decedent; and they shall have the right to sell such stock under the direction of the court.

Sec. 42, Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 447.

85. Removal of Guardians. (a) Any orphans' court having jurisdiction of the accounts of executors, administrators, guardians or trustees shall have executive power to remove such executor or administrator and vacate the letters testamentary or of administration, or to remove such guardian or trustee, as the circumstances of the case may require, in any of the following cases:—

1. When such fiduciary is wasting or mismanaging the estate or property under his charge, or is likely to prove insolvent, or has neglected or refused to exhibit true and perfect inventories, or render full and just accounts of such estate or property, come to his hands or knowledge;

2. When such fiduciary has been duly declared a lunatic, habitual drunkard, or weak-minded person;

3. When such fiduciary has become incompetent to discharge the duties of his trust, by reason, of sickness or physical or mental incapacity, and it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court that such incompetency is likely to continue to the injury of the estate under his control;

4. When such fiduciary has removed from this state, or has ceased to have any known place of residence therein during the period of one year or more.

5. When any guardian, whether testamentary or otherwise, mismanages the minor's estate, or misconducts himself in respect to the maintenance, education, or moral interests of the minor.

6. When such fiduciary fails or neglects to pay over the principal or income of the estate, according to his duty under the trust, or fails or neglects to comply with any order or direction of the court made in relation to said trust;

7. When any trustee of property held in trust, under the provisions of any will and testament, for religious, educational, or charitable purposes, or for use as a burying-ground, neglects or abuses such trust;

8. When, for any reason, the interests of the estate or property are liable to be jeopardized by the continuance of any such fiduciary;

9. When all the cestuis que trust, or a majority of them having the life estate under any trust, shall desire the removal of the trustee or trustees upon any substantial ground not hereinbefore enumerated, and the court upon petition filed by them or any of them, shall be satisfied that such substantial ground for removal exists; in which case the court may remove said trustee or trustees, and appoint another or others as chosen by said parties;

Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect the jurisdiction of any court of common pleas in proceedings pending at the date of the approval of this act.

(b) Whenever it shall be made to appear to the orphans' court having jurisdiction of the accounts of any fiduciary, on the oath or affirmation of any person interested, that there exists any one or more of the grounds for removal of such fiduciary enumerated in the last preceding clause of this section, such court may issue a citation to such fiduciary, requiring him to appear on a day certain to answer the charge so preferred, and may make all such necessary rules and orders as the said court may deem proper for bringing the matter complained of to a hearing. If, on such hearing, the said court shall be satisfied of the truth of the matters charged, it may remove such executor or administrator and vacate the letters testamentary or of administration. or remove such guardian or trustee as aforesaid, and direct the issuance of new letters testamentary or of administration, or appoint a new guardian or trustee; and make such orders for the security of the trust property, and for the delivery of such property and the books, accounts, papers, and moneys belonging or relating to the trust to the successor of such fiduciary, as the circumstances of the case may require.

(c) Any orphan's court having jurisdiction of the accounts of any fiduciary shall have power in a case of emergency, when the exigencies of the case shall appear to the satisfaction of the court to require it. in order that the rights of creditors and parties interested in the assets of the estate shall be protected, summarily to remove such executor or administrator and vacate the letters testamentary, or of administration, or summarily to remove such guardian or trustee, or any of the grounds enumerated in clause (a) of this section, and to direct the issuance of new letters or to appoint a successor to such guardian or trustee, on the ex parte petition of any creditor or party interested in the estate; and, further, to make such orders for the security of the trust property, and for the delivery of such property and the books, accounts, papers, and moneys belonging or relating to the trust to the successor of such fiduciary, as the circumstances of the case may require: Provided, That it shall be lawful for any such fiduciary, so removed, to apply by petition to said court to have such decree of removal vacated, and to be reinstated in his office.

(d) No decree removing one of several co-fiduciaries shall suspend the power or prejudice the acts of any of the other fiduciaries.

(e) If such superseded fiduciary shall neglect or refuse to comply with any order or decree of the court, made under the provisions of this section, the court shall have power to enforce obedience thereto by attachment, with or without sequestration, execution, or otherwise, as to such court shall seem necessary and proper for the due protection of the rights and interests of any and all parties interested; or the succeeding fiduciary may proceed at law against the superseded fiduciary and his sureties, if any therebe, or against any other person who may be possessed of any goods or chattels belonging to the estate of the decedend or minor, as the case may be, or be indebted to him; or the remedies by execution and suit at law may be pursued at the same time, if the case so require, until the end be fully attained.

Sec. 53, Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 447.

86. Security to be Required of Guardians. Procedure. (a) 1. In any of the cases enumerated in section fifty-three, clause (a) of this act, the court may, upon the return of the citation, require such security of an executor, or such other and further security of an administrator, guardian, or trustee, as they may think reasonable, conditioned for the performance of the trust; which security shall be taken in the name of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and filed in the said Court, and shall be deemed and considered in trust for the benefit of all persons interested in such estate: Provided, That if it shall be made to appear to the said court that such fiduciary is about to remove from this Commonwealth, or that the property under his charge may be wasted or materially injured before he can be reached by the ordinary process of the court, it shall be lawful for such court to issue a writ of attachment, under which the same proceedings may take place as in other cases of attachment on mesne process in the orphans' court; and, on the return of such attachment, the court may proceed as on the return to the citation.

2. If such fiduciary shall neglect or refuse to give such security, or such further security, so ordered, then the said court may remove such executor or administrator and vacate such letters testamentary or of administration, or remove such guardian or trustee, and direct the issuance of new letters, or appoint a new guardian or trustee, as aforesaid.

(b) Application may be made to the orphans' court, in any of the cases mentioned in clause (a) of section fifty-three of this act, by any surety on the bond of such fiduciary, and upon the petition of such surety, duly verified by oath or affirmation, the like proceedings may be had, for the purpose of compelling such fiduciary to give security; and thereupon the court may order such fiduciary to give such counter-securities as they shall judge necessary to indemnify the surety against loss by reason of his suretyship. If such fiduciary shall refuse or fail to give such security, within such reasonable time as the court shall order, it shall be lawful for the court to direct such fiduciary to pay or deliver over forthwith to such surety, or to some other person for him, all of the property, moneys, books, accounts, and papers whatsoever for which such surety may be accountable, or which may belong or relate to the trust: Provided, That such surety shall first give, to the satisfaction of the court, sufficient security, faithfully to preserve and account therefor, and deliver and dispose of the same according to the order of the court.

(c) It shall be lawful for the orphans' court having jurisdiction of the accounts of any fiduciary, on the petition of any surety of such fiduciary, or of the personal representatives of a deceased surety, to issue a citation requiring such fiduciary, at the return thereof,—not less than thirty days' notice to be given of the presentation of such petition,—to file an account of his management of the trust or estate. The said citation, upon such petition, and affidavit filed of the facts connected with the execution and position of the trust funds or estate, shall further direct the said fiduciary to show cause why the petitioner or his estate should not be discharged from all future liability, if the court, after due notice to all parties interested, deem it reasonable and proper. If the court on due consideration shall discharge such surety or his estate, the fiduciary shall thereupon give a new bond, with surety or sureties, as the court shall order, and on failure or refusal so to do, within such time as is ordered by the court, shall be removed from the trust, and some other person or corporation appointed. When a new bond is required, under the provisions of this clause, the surety in the prior bond or his estate shall be liable for all breaches of the conditions thereof committed before the new bond is approved according to law.

Sec. 54, Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 447.

87. Investments by Guardians. (a) 1. When a fiduciary shall have in his hands any moneys, the principal or capital whereof is to remain for a time in his possession or under his control, and the interest, profits, or income whereof are to be paid away or to accumulate, or when the income of real estate be more than sufficient for the purpose of the trust, such fiduciary may invest such moneys in the stock or public debt of the United States, or in the public debt of this Commonwealth, or in bonds or certificates of debt now created or hereafter to be created and issued according to law by any of the counties, cities, boroughs, townships, school districts or poor districts of this Commonwealth, or in bonds of one or more individuals secured by mortgage on real estate in this Commonwealth, which may be either a single bond secured by a mortgage or one or more bonds of an issue of bonds secured by mortgage or deed of trust to a trustee for the benefit of all bondholders, or in ground rents in this Commonwealth: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall authorize any fiduciary to make any investment contrary to the directions contained in the will of the decedent in regard to the investment of such moneys.

Sec. 41, (a), of the Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 447, as amended by Sec. 1, Act of June 29, 1923, P. L. 955.

88. Statement of Investments to be Made by Fiduciaries. Accounting. Removal. In case any surety or sureties, or the personal representatives of any deceased surety or sureties, upon the bond of any fiduciary, or any person interested in the trust, shall apply to the fiduciary for a complete and detailed statement of the nature and character of the securities in which the trust funds are invested, and the said fiduciary shall fail for the space of ten days to furnish such statement, or if, such statement having been furnished, it shall appear to the said surety or sureties, or the representatives of said surety or sureties, or other person interested in said trust, that the funds in the hands of the said fiduciary are bady invested so as to be likely to result in a loss to the trust, the said surety or sureties, or the representatives of said surety or sureties, or other person interested in the trust, may present a petition to the orphans' court having jurisdiction of said trust, praying that an order be made requiring the said fiduciary to file an account of the administration of his trust, which account shall include a complete and detailed statement of the manner and securities in which said trust funds are invested, within twenty days after the service of said order, unless the time be enlarged by the court. Thereupon the said court shall make such order and if, upon the audit of such account, it shall appear to the court that the said fiduciary has been guilty of any act of fraud or mismanagement, or has invested the trust funds in securities not authorized by law or by the will of the testator, or has made investments which are likely to cause a loss to the trust, said court may remove the said fiduciary, and order payment of the assets to his successor or into court.

Sec. 55, Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 447.

89. Foreign Fiduciaries and Guardians. (a) Except as hereinafter provided, no letters testamentary or of administration or otherwise, which may be granted out of this Commonwealth, purporting to authorize any person to intermeddle with the estate of a decedent, shall confer upon such person any of the powers and authorities possessed by an executor or administrator under letters granted within this State; nor, except as hereinafter provided, shall any appointment of a trustee of a decedent's estate or any part thereof by will probated out of this Commonwealth, or by any court out of this Commonwealth, confer upon such person any of the powers and authorities possessed by a trustee under a will probated within this State or appointed by an orphans' court of this State.

(b) Except as hereinafter provided, no appointment of a guardian made or granted by any authority out of this State, shall authorize the person so appointed to interfere with the estate, or control the person of a minor in this State: Provided, That such foreign guardian may, at the discretion of the orphan's court having jurisdiction, be appointed by said court, on giving security for the due performance of his trust.

(c) It shall be lawful for any executor, administrator, trustee, or other person duly authorized to take charge or possession of the personal estate of any decedent, or for any guardian or other legal representative of the estate of a minor, acting under letters testamentary or of administration, or other authority, granted by or under the laws of any other State, Territory, or possession of the United States of America, or of any foreign country, to assign and transfer, and to receive the dividends or interest of, any public debt or loan of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or of any county, city, borough, township or school district thereof, or any stocks or bonds of any corporation incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth, standing in the name of, or belonging to, the decedent minor or cestui que trust, or any mortgage debt or indenture of mortgage held by, or belonging to, the decedent minor or cestui que trust, upon real estate situate within this Commonwealth, and to enter or cause to be entered satisfaction upon the record of such indenture of mortgage. Before any such act shall be done by any such executor, administrator, trustee, guardian, or other person, there shall be filed in the office of the register of wills for the county in which is located the office for the transfer of such loans, stocks, or bonds, or, in the case of a mortgage, of the county where the mortgaged real estate may be situated, when such person is acting under letters or other authority granted by or under the laws of any other State, Territory, or possession of the United States of America, a copy of the will, probate and letters issued thereon, or of such other grant of authority, duly authenticated in accordance with the acts of Congress; or, when such person is acting under letters or other authority granted by or under the laws of any foreign country, a copy of such will, probate and letters issued thereon, or of such other grant of authority, certified by the official custodian of such documents or records, under his official seal, if any, to be a true and correct copy of the originals thereof in his possession or under his control, together with the certificate of the presiding judge or the officer having jurisdiction or authority over such custodian that the attestation is in due form and by the proper officer: Provided, That before any such executor, administrator, or trustee shall assign or transfer any such loans, stocks, bonds or mortgages, or receive any interest or dividends thereon, or enter satisfaction of any such mortgage, he shall also file with said register of wills, an affidavit stating that the said decedent is not indebted to any person in this Commonwealth, and that the proposed transfer, assignment, receipt, or entry of satisfaction is not made for the purpose of removing any of the assets of said decedent beyond the reach of any of the creditors in this Commonwealth; and such transfer, assignment, receipt, or entry of satisfaction, without first making and filing such affidavit, shall be void.

(d) Whenever a citizen of the United States, non-resident in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, shall have died owning real estate in this Commonwealth, and by his last will and testament shall have empowered his executor or trustee to sell and convey his real estate, it shall be lawful for said executor or trustee, or his duly appointed successor, although not a resident in this Commonwealth, from and after the expiration of one year from the death of such decedent, to execute any power of sale contained in said last will and testament, and to sell and convey to the purchaser the whole or any part of such real estate located in this Commonwealth: Provided, That before executing the power of sale, a copy of the last will, probate, and letters testamentary, and of the degree appointing such successors, if any there be, duly authenticated as provided in clause (c) of this section, shall be filed in the office of the register of wills of the county where the land is situated: Provided further, That nothing in this clause shall change or modify the acts of Assembly relating to collateral inheritances.

(e) It shall be lawful for foreign executors or administrators to cause to be issued, in their names as such executors or administrators, writs or scire facias within this Commonwealth, on all judgments in favor of their decedents, the lien of which judgments is about expiring: Provided, That, before any further proceedings are had, letters testamentary, or of administration must be granted within this Commonwealth, as provided by law.

(f) It shall be lawful for the orphans' court having jurisdiction of the accounts of any fiduciary to award personal property to the foreign executor or administrator of a deceased nonresident creditor, legatee, or distributee, when it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court, by affidavit or other evidence, that there are no creditors, of such nonresident decedent within this Commonwealth; and when it shall further appear by certificate of the register of wills, surrogate, or court of the proper jurisdiction, duly authenticated as required by the acts of Congress, if the domicile of such nonresident creditor, legatee, or distributee was in another State, Territory, or possession of the United States of America, or by the proper diplomatic or consular officer appointed by the United States of America, under his official seal, if such domicile was in a foreign country, that the person claiming to receive such award is authorized under the laws of such State, Territory, possession, or country to receive the property of his decedent: Provided, That the benefits of this clause shall not extend to any case in which it shall appear that the rights of any resident of this Commonwealth may be adversely affected by such transfer of property to such foreign executor or administrator.

(g) 1. In all cases where any guardian and his ward, or trustee and his cestui que trust, or committee and his lunatic, or any other fiduciary and the person in whose interest he is acting, shall both be nonresidents of this State, and such ward or cestui que trust shall be entitled to money, personal property of any description, or the proceeds of any sale of real estate in this State, under the control or jurisdiction of any orphans' court; and such guardian, trustee, or other fiduciary shall produce satisfactory proof to said court, by certificates, that he has given bond and security, with special reference to the money or personal property to be removed, in the State or country in which he and his ward or cestui que trust reside, in double the amount of such money or of the value of such property, as guardian, trustee, or other fiduciary; and it shall be found that a removal of the property will not conflict with the terms or limitations attending the right by which the ward or cestui que trust owns the same; and that no right of any resident of this Commonwealth will be prejudiced by such removal,—then any such guardian, trustee, or other fiduciary may demand or sue for and remove any such money or property to the place of residence of himself and his ward or cestui que trust. If such guardian, trustee, or other fiduciary and his ward or cestui que trust reside in another State, Territory, or possession of the United States of America, such certificate shall be authenticated as required by the acts of Congress, and, if they reside in a foreign country, shall be made by the court having jurisdiction of such guardian, trustee, or other fiduciary, and authenticated by and under the official seal of a diplomatic or consular officer appointed by the United States of America and residing in such country: Provided, That if it shall appear by such certificate that, under the laws of such State, Territory, possession or foreign country, such guardian, trustee, or other fiduciary is not required to enter security, but that the interests of his ward or cestui que trust are safeguarded by a deposit of the money or property in the court having proper jurisdiction,—then it shall be lawful for the orphans' court of the proper county in this State to cause suitable orders to be made authorizing the delivering and passing over of such money or property to such court without the entry of security.

2. When such nonresident guardian or trustee shall produce an exemplification under the seal of the office, if there be a seal, of the proper court in the State or country of his residence, containing all the entries on record in relation to his appointment and giving bond, and authenticated as required by the acts of Congress, or by a diplomatic or consular officer appointed by the United States of America, as provided in paragraph one of this clause, the orphans' court of the proper county in this State may cause suitable orders to be made, discharging any resident fiduciary and authorizing the delivery and passing over of such personal property, and also requiring receipts to be passed and filed, if deemed advisable; Provided, That in all cases thirty days' notice shall be given to the resident fiduciary, if such there be, of the intended application for the order of removal; and the court may reject the application and refuse such order whenever it is satisfied that it is for the interest of the ward or cestui que trust that such removal shall not take place, or that the claims of residents of this Commonwealth are not fully protected.

(h) When all the persons for whose benefit a valid trust shall have been created by will, for a term of years or for life, shall have removed from this State into any other State, Territory, or possession of the United States, to reside permanently therein, the orphans' court having jurisdiction of such trusts is hereby authorized and empowered, on application by or on behalf of all the persons interested in the trust, to direct the trustee or trustees appointed in and by said will to pay over said trust moneys, or transfer the securities in which they may have been invested, to a trustee or trustees duly appointed by the court of such other State, Territory, or possession, upon the production to said court of satisfactory proof, by certificates of the appointment of such trustee or trustees in the other State, Territory, or possession, the authority of such trustee or trustees to receive such moneys or securities, and the entry of bond and security, or proof of the fact that under the laws of such State, Territory, or possession security is not required, such certicate to be authenticated in the manner provided in clause (g), paragraph one of this section, and upon the production of satisfactory proof that the removal of the property will not conflict with the terms or limitations attending the rights which the cestuis que trust have in such money or securities.

Sec. 58, Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 447.

90. Appointment of Testamentary Guardian by Father. Custody of Child. (a) Every person competent to make a will, being the father or adopting father of any minor child unmarried, may appoint a testamentary guardian for such child during his or her minority, or for any shorter period: Provided, That such testamentary guardian shall not be entitled to the custody of the person of such child unless the mother or adopting mother, if surviving, shall relinquish such custody, or unless the best interests of the child shall require that such surviving mother or adopting mother should not retain the custody of the person of such child.

Sec. 8, Clause (a), Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 403.

91. Appointment of Testamentary Guardian by Mother. (b) Every person competent to make a will, being the mother or adopting mother of any minor child unmarried, may appoint a testamentary guardian for such child during his or her minority or for any shorter period, whenever the father or adopting father of such child shall be deceased and has not appointed such a guardian. Whenever the father or adopting father of such child has for one year or upwards, immediately preceding the death of the mother or adopting mother, wilfully neglected or refused to provide for such child, such mother or adopting mother, who shall leave to such child an estate, either real or personal, may appoint a testamentary guardian for such child. Such mother or adopting mother, who shall leave to such child an estate, either real or personal, may appoint a testamentary guardian for such estate of the child, whether the father or adopting father of such child shall be living or dead, and whether he shall or shall not have appointed a testamentary guardian for such child.

Sec. 1, Act of June 12, 1919, P. L. 443, amending Sec. 8, Clause (b), Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 403.

92. Provisions for Appointment of Testamentary Guardian by Mother in Certain Cases only to Apply After 1917. This amending act shall apply to the wills of all persons dying on or after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand nine hundred and seventeen.

Sec. 2, Act of June 12, 1919, P. L. 443.

93. Parents who Neglect to Provide for Children not Permitted to Appoint Testamentary Guardians. (c) No father who shall have, for one year or upwards previous to his death, wilfully neglected or refused to provide for his child or children, and no mother who shall have for a like period deserted her child or children or failed to perform her parental duties, shall have the right to appoint any testamentary guardian for such child or children.

Sec. 8, Clause (c), Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 403.

94. Appointment of Guardian Where Father Neglects Child and Mother is Dead or an Unfit Person. Whensoever any husband, or father, from drunkenness, profligacy or other cause, shall neglect or refuse to provide for his child or children, the mother of such children shall have all the rights and be entitled to claim and be subject to all the duties reciprocally due between a father and his children, and she may place them at employment and receive their earnings or bind them to apprenticeship, without the interference of such husband, the same as the father can now do by law: Provided, always, That she shall afford to them a good example, and properly educate and maintain them according to her ability: And provided, That if the mother be of unsuitable character to be entrusted as aforesaid, or dead, the proper court may appoint a guardian of such children, who shall perform the duties aforesaid, and apply the earnings of such children for their maintenance and education.

Sec. 3, Act of May 4, 1855, P. L. 430.

95. Appointment of Guardians for Children when Persons Charged with Their Custody are Convicted of a Violation of Act Protecting Them From Cruelty. Whenever any person having the custody or control of any minor, shall be convicted of a violation of any of the provisions of this act, it shall be lawful for any person to apply to the orphans' court of the county wherein the offense has been committed, for the appointment of a proper guardian for the person of such minor; and the said court may, in its discretion, make such appointment, having due regard in the selection of a guardian to the religious persuasion of the parent or former guardian, or it may place such child in an asylum or home for children, with the powers of a guardian of the person, as may be most expedient: Provided, however, That the children of the Roman Catholic parents shall be placed in asylums under the control and care of that denomination. And the said court may order the parent to pay such a reasonable sum towards the maintenance of such child, and at such times and in such amounts, as the said court may see fit; and such courts may, at any subsequent time, upon being satisfied that the parent has become a fit person to resume the custody of said minor, and upon reasonable security, to be fixed by the court, being given for the faithful observance of the provisions of this act, remand such minor to the custody of such parents; subject, nevertheless, to the obligation of any indentures or legal engagements already entered into on be half of said minor by his or her guardian.

Sec. 7, Act of June 11, 1879, P. L. 142, (No. 151).

Section 1 of this act provides penalties for cases where "any person shall cruelly ill-treat, abuse or inflict unnecessary cruel punishment upon any infant or minor child", or where "any person having the care, custody or control of any minor child, shall wilfully abandon or neglect the same." (See Section 602).

96. Appointment of Trustees by Court of Common Pleas. Section 15 of the Act of June 14, 1836, P. L. 630, confers jurisdiction on the court of common pleas over all trusts, excepting assignments for the benefit of creditors and trusts created by will and vested in executors or administrators, and Section 18 of this same act provides that:

"In case of the infancy or temporary absence of any trustee, it shall be lawful for the court having jurisdiction as aforesail, to appoint a trustee during such infancy or absence, and the trustee so appointed, shall, during such period, have all the powers necessary for the due administration of the trust."

Compiler's Note.

This section 18 of the Act of June 14, 1836, P. L. 630 was repealed by the Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 539, so far as it related to testamentary trustees.

97. Escheats. Where property of a minor has been escheated, if the minor did not appear in the proceedings by his guardian or the attorney for the guardian, he or she may at any time within three years after reaching majority traverse the finding or adjudication of such escheat, under the proceedings set forth in Section 22 of the Act of May 2, 1889, P. L. 66, as amended by the Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 946; and if in such proceedings it is ascertained the property had not escheated, the person is entitled to recover the property back, or if sold to receive the money paid into the Treasury of the Commonwealth.

99. Proceedings to Establish Title to Land where Claimants Have Not Been in Possession for Twenty-One Years. Whenever persons claiming or having any apparent interest in or title to real estate, but not having been in possession for a period of twenty-one years, are unknown, or being known, their residence cannot be ascertained, proceedings may be had under the Act of April 18, 1905, P. L. 202, by persons in possession of the land and claiming title to the same to force the persons not in possession to bring an action in ejectment to try the title to the land in question; and Sections 2 and 3 relate to cases where claimants to the title of the land but not in possession are minors. These sections are as follows:

"Whenever any person or persons claiming, or having an apparent interest in or title to, real estate, but not having been in possession thereof as aforesaid, shall have been served by publication in the manner precribed in the preceding section, are unknown, or are minors, under the age of twenty-one, or are lunatics, or are suffering under any other legal disability, and shall fail to appear within six months after the date of such service, it shall be the duty of the court to appoint a trustee for such unknown parties, or minors or lunatics, or parties suffering under other legal disability, upon whom the rule to bring ejectment, as aforesaid, shall be served; and it shall be the duty of such trustees to investigate the matters set forth in said petition, and to appear and make answer thereto, within sixty days of the date of the sevice of such rule upon him, if, upon such investigation, such trustee should decide that an appearance and answer are required to properly protect the interest of the parties unknown, or minors or lunatics, or parties suffering under any legal disability, as aforesaid."

"Whenever any person or persons claiming, or having an apparent interest in or title to, real estate, but not having been in possession thereof as aforesaid, shall have been served by publication in the manner prescribed in the preceeding sections, and shall fail to appear and show cause why such action of ejectment cannot be brought, within six months after such service; and, in case of unknown parties, or lunatics, or persons suffering under other legal disability, within sixty days after the service of such rule upon the trustee for such unknown parties, minors, lunatics, or persons suffering under other legal disabilities, as aforesaid; it shall be the duty of the court to make the rule absolute, and enter judgment against the person or persons so served, which judgment shall be final and conclusive between the parties, their heirs and assigns; and thereafter no action of ejectment for the recovery of said real estate shall be brought by such person or persons claiming, or having an apparent interest in or title to said real estate, but not having been in possession thereof, as aforesaid, or any person claiming by, from or under such person or persons.

Provided, That if the party or parties served shall fail to appear and show cause, within the period of six months, as aforesaid, he, she or they shall not in any event be liable for costs which costs, in the discretion of the court, may include a reasonable compensation for any trustee appointed by virtue of this act."

Compiler's Note.

100. Proceedings to Discharge Encumbrance From Land. Proceedings in courts of record may be had under the Act of May 8, 1895, P. L. 44, where under any deed, will, mortgage, dower, recognizance, judgment, decree, obligation or instrument, any money has been charged upon land, and twenty-one years has elapsed since the principal of the encumbrance has become due, and no payment made within said period of twenty-one years on account of such encubrance by the owner or owners of the land; and after the recording of the petition and decree in the Recorder's office the record operates as a release and discharge of the land from the encumbrance. The second section of this act relates to cases where minors are involved and is as follows:

"The court in which any proceeding provided for in the first section of this act shall be commenced shall appoint guardians, as litem, for any minors who may appear to be interested in the encumbrance or charge on land, if such minors do not appear from the allegations of the petition to have guardians, and service of all notices, rules, orders and other process shall then, be made upon such guardians, ad litem."

Compiler's Note.

101. Partition. Partition proceedings in the Orphans' Court are regulated by the Act of June 7, 1917, P. L. 337, and under Section two of this act, if the party is a minor, the petition shall be filed by the guardian of the minor. The Act of April 7, 1807, P. L. 155, regulates partition proceedings in the courts of common pleas, and provides, where minors are defendants, for service of the writ upon the guardian.

Compiler's Note.

102. Mortgaging, Conveying, Leasing, Etc., or Real Estate, Etc., Owned or Controlled by Minors. Revised Price Act. "The Revised Price Act" of June 7, 1917, P. L. 388, as amended by the Acts of May 2, 1919, P. L. 111, and June 29, 1923, P. L. 952, with regard to real estate and ground rents issuing thereout, provides the procedure for the sale, mortgaging, conveying on ground rent and leasing thereof, or the extinguishment or assignment of ground rents issuing thereout, the partition and exchange thereof, the squaring and adjusting of lines between adjoining owners, the consolidation and combination of mining lands with other adjoining mining lands and the leasing thereof, the joining of owners or undivided interests in making and taking conveyances in order to change the route or location of any right of way or passage upon adjoining lands, and the subdivision of premises so as to command the highest price or greatest rents, in cases where the legal title is held by a wife whose husband is a minor, or by a married minor whose spouse is a minor, or where any interest in the real estate is held by any person under legal disability to dispose thereof. The act makes specific provisions that guardians shall be notified and appear for their wards, and if minors have no guardian the court may appoint one for them, and such appointment may be made on the petition of any party interested with notice to the persons, who shall be charged with the duty of petitioning for the appointment of guardians.

F. EDUCATION

(Note: For provisions relating to continuation schools, see subdivision H. Child Labor. For provisions relating to special schools for juvenile offenders, see Subdivision J. Department, Neglected and Delinquent Children. For provisions relating to schools for defective children, see subdivision M. Defective Children).

1. Pupils and Attendance. Transportation.

103. Age of Children Entitled to School Facilities. Every child, being a resident of any school district in this Commonwealth between the ages of six and twenty-one years, may attend the public schools in his district, subject to the provisions of this act.

Sec. 1401, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

104. What Children are Residents. Non-Resident Living in District. A child shall be considered a resident of the school district in which his parents or the guardian of his person resides. When a resident of any school district keeps in his home a child of school age, not his own, supporting the child gratis as if it were his own, such child shall be entitled to all free school priveleges accorded to resident school children of the district, and shall be subject to all the requirements placed upon resident school children of the district: Provided, That before accepting such child as a pupil, the board of school directors of the district may require such resident to file with the secretary of the board a sworn statement that he is a resident of the district, that he is supporting the child gratis, that he will assume all personal obligations for the child relative to school requirements, and that he intends to so keep and support the child continuously and not merely through the school term.

When a nonresident child is placed in the home of a resident of any school district by order of court or by arrangement with an association, agency, or institution, having the care of neglected and dependent children, such resident being compensated for keeping the child, any child of school age so placed shall be permitted to attend the public school of the district in which he is placed; and the state shall reimburse the district for the education of such child to an amount not exceeding the actual average cost of tuition, textbooks, and supplies for the district's children of similar grade; such reimbursement to be made out of the money appropriated by the General Assembly for the maintenance and support of the public schools of this Commonwealth: Provided, That the school district may not be required to accept such children in its schools when their acceptance would involve additional provision for transportation by the district, or would require the district to provide additional teachers or rooms, at an expense greater than the amount of reimbursement paid to the district by the State.

Any resident of any school district, before accepting custody of a nonresident child of school age for compensation by order of court or by arrangement with an association, agency or institution having the care of dependent or neglected children, must secure, from the superintendent of schools, supervising principal, or school board in that district, a statement in writing that the child can be accommodated in the schools of the district or that the child cannot be so accommodated and the reasons therefor. If such statement be not furnished within two weeks after a request in writing has been made to the board's secretary, the supervising principal, or the superintendent of schools, the board's assent shall be assumed, and the child shall be admitted to the schools of the district as a pupil. If such statement sets forth conditions such as to exempt the district under this section from accepting the child as a pupil, and if such exemption be not disapproved on appeal by the Superintendent of Public Instruction, and if other arrangement for the child's schooling satisfactory to the country or district superintendent be not made, the child may not be placed in the district.

Appeal from the claim of any school district for exemption as provided in this section may be taken to the Superintendent of Public Instruction, and his decision thereon after investigation shall be final. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Sec. 1402, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, as amended by Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 1032.

Note: Sec. 1402 was amended for the attendance of children of Orphans' Homes. This amendment was declared unconstitutional in Comm. v. Schumaker 255 Pa. 67.

105. Admission of Beginners. Unless otherwise directed by the board of school directors, the admission of beginners to the public schools shall be confined to two periods, namely, during the first two weeks of the annual school term, and during the first two weeks of school following the first day of January in any school year; Provided, That beginners becoming six years of age after the beginning of the school term, and before the first day of January of any year, shall be admitted during the period at the beginning of the school term, and beginners becoming six years of age between the first day of January and the close of the term shall be admitted during the period following the first day of January: Provided further, That the board of school directors in any school district may fix such other periods for the admission of such beginners as it may determine.

The term beginners, as used in this section, shall mean any child that could enter the lowest grade of the primary school or the lowest primary class.

Sec. 1403, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

106. Attendance of Residents in Schools of Adjacent Districts. Where any pupil in any school district in this Commonwealth resides one and one-half miles, or more, by the public road, from the nearest public elementary school in the district, such pupil, unless proper, free transportation be furnished to a suitable school in the district, on obtaining the consent of the board of school directors thereof, may attend any public elementary school in another school district more convenient of access, without the consent of the board of school directors of the district where such pupil resides; and the district where such pupil resides shall promptly pay, to the districts where such pupil attends, the cost of his tuition, text-books, and the school supplies only, which shall not exceed that of the tuition, text-books and school supplies of other pupils pursuing similar courses or studies in the same schools.

The board of school directors of any district in this Commonwealth may, on account of convenience of access, or other reasons, permit any pupil to attend the schools of another district, on such terms as the two boards of school directors may mutually agree upon.

The board of school directors in any school district in this Commonwealth may, out of the funds of the district, provide for the free transportation of any pupil to and from the public schools.

Sec. 1404, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

107. School Districts to be Subdivided for Convenience of Pupils. The board of school directors of every school district in this Commonwealth shall, for the purpose of designating the schools to be attended by the several pupils in said district, sub-divide the same in such manner that all the pupils in each school district, shall be assigned to, and reasonable accommodated in, one of the public schools in said school district: Provided, That the board of school directors may, upon cause shown, permit any pupil or pupils in any school district to attend such other school in said district as the board may deem proper, or may classify and assign the pupils in the district to any such school or schools therein as it may deem best, in order to properly educate the same: Provided further, That hereafter it shall be unlawful for any school director, superintendent, or teacher to make any distinction whatever, on account of, or by reason of, race or color of any pupil or scholar who may be in attendance upon, or seeking admission to, any public school maintained wholly or in part under the school laws of the Commonwealth.

Sec. 1405, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

108. Consolidation of Schools. Transportation of Pupils. The board of school directors of any school district in this Commonwealth may, on account of the small number of pupils in attendance, or the condition of the then existing school building, or for the purpose of better graduation and classification, or for economical or other reasons, close and consolidate any one or more of the public schools in its district, and upon such school or schools being so closed, the pupils who belong to the same shall be assigned to other schools: Provided, That whenever the average term attendance of pupils regularly enrolled at any one-room school in any school district of the fourth class is ten or less than ten, the board of school directors shall close such school, and provide proper transportation for the pupils of such closed school to and from the nearest or most convenient school, to which the pupils shall be assigned. If the board of school directors do not deem it feasible to close such school, they may present their petition to the State Board of Education, showing the reasons why such school should not be closed; thereupon the State Board of Education, shall consider such petition, and shall make such order as may seem just in the premises: Provided further, That in any district of the fourth class, pupils who belong to any such closed school shall not have transportation provided if they reside less than one and one-half miles, by the public road from the school to which they are assigned: Provided further, That in any district of the fourth class, pupils who belong to any such closed school, and reside one and a half miles or more from the school to which they are assigned, shall be furnished proper transportation, at the expense of the district, to and from the school to which they are assigned, except in case where schools are closed because there are ten or less than ten pupils regularly enrolled, in which case one-half of the cost of such transportation, not to exceed one dollar per diem per pupil, shall be paid by the Commonwealth, provision for which shall be made by separate appropriation in the general appropriation act.

Sec. 1406, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, as amended by Act of July 22, 1919, P. L. 1117.

109. Method of Transportation of Pupils. Computation of Distance to Schools. Where, by the terms of this act, any distance is specified between the residence of any pupil and any public school to be attended by him, or any transportation is provided for within or beyond any particular distance, in computing such distance no allowance shall be made for the distance that the dwelling house of the pupil is situated off the public highway. All such distance shall be computed from the school building to which the pupil has been assigned by the highway to the nearest point where a private way or private road connects the dwelling house of the pupil with said highway: Provided, That the free transportation of pupils, as required or authorized by this act, may be furnished by using electric railways, school conveyances, or other public transportation, when the total distance which any pupil must travel between his residence and the school, in addition to such transportation, does not exceed one and one-half miles, and when stations or other proper shelters are provided for the use of such pupils where needed.

Sec. 1408, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, as amended by Sec. 4, Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 1038.

110. Attendance of Non-Residents. Terms. The board of school directors of any school district in this Commonwealth may permit any non-resident pupil to attend the public schools in its district, upon such terms as it may determine, subject to the provisions of this act.

Sec. 1409, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

111. Authority of Teachers During Attendance of Pupils. Every teacher in the public schools of this Commonwealth shall have the right to exercise the same authority as to conduct and behavior over the pupils attending his school, during the time they are in attendance, including the time required in going to and from their homes, as the parents, guardians, or persons in parental relation to such pupils may exercise over them.

Sec. 1410, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

112. Suspension of Pupils. Every principal or teacher in charge of a public school in this Commonwealth may temporarily suspend any pupil on account of disobedience or misconduct, and any principal or teacher suspending any pupil shall promptly notify the district superintendent, supervising principal, or secretary of the board of school directors; and the board may, after a proper hearing, suspend such child for such time as it may determine, or may permanently expel him: Provided, That such hearing, suspension, or expulsion may be delegated to a duly authorized committee of the board.

Sec. 1411, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

113. Attendance of Children who are Inmates of Institutions. The board of school directors of any school district in this Commonwealth in which there is locatel any orphan asylum, home for the friendless, children's home, or other institution for the care or training of orphans or other children, shall permit any children who are inmates of such homes, but not legal residents in such district, to attend the public schools in said district, either with or without charge for tuition, text-books, or school supplies, as the directors of the district in which such institution is located may determine. If a charge is made by any school district for tuition for the inmates of any such institution, the officers of the institution shall submit to the board of school directors a sworn statement, setting forth the names, ages, and school district liable for tuition of all children who are inmates thereof and desire to attend public school in the district. If any of said inmates have been received from outside of Pennsylvania, or if the institution cannot certify as to their residence, their tuition shall be paid by the institution having the care or custody of said children. The tuition of such other inmates as are included in the sworn statement to the board of school directors shall be withheld by the Superintendent of Public Instruction from any moneys due to the district liable for said tuition upon receipt of a sworn statement setting forth the names, ages, tuition charges, and school district liable for tuition of said inmates; and all moneys thus withheld shall be paid by him to the district entitled to receive the same. The district so charged with tuition may file an appeal with the Superintendent of Public Instruction, in which it shall be the complainant, and the institution the respondent. The decision of the Superintendent of Public Instruction as to which of said parties is responsible for tuition shall be final.

The cost of tuition in such cases shall be fixed as is now provided by law for tuition costs in other cases, except where, for the accommodation of such children, it shall be necessary to provide a separate school or to erect additional school buildings, in which cases the charge for tuition for such children may include a proportionate cost of the operating expense, rental, and interest on any investment required to be made in erecting such new school building. The tuition herein provided for shall be paid annually by the Superintendent of Public Instruction or the institution as the case may be.

Sec. 1412, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, as amended by Act of May 19, 1913, P. L. 192, and May 20, 1921, P. L. 978.

114. Compulsory School Attendance. Private Schools. Every child having a legal residence in this Commonwealth, as herein provided, between the ages of eight and sixteen years, is required to attend a day school in which the common English branches provided for in this act are taught in the English language; and every parent, guardian or other person, in this Commonwealth, having control or charge of any child or children, between the ages of eight and sixteen years is, required to send such child or chidlren to a day school in which the common English branches are taught in the English language; and such child or children shall attend such school continuously through the entire term, during which the public elementary schools in their respective districts shall be in session: Provided, That the certificate of any principal or teacher of a private school, or of any institution for the education of children, in which the common English branches are taught in the English language, setting forth that the work of said school is in compliance with the provisions of this act, shall be sufficient and satisfactory evidence thereof. Regular daily instruction in the English language, for the time herein required, by a properly qualified private tutor, shall be considered as complying with the provisions of this section, if such instruction is satisfactory to the proper county and district superintendent of schools.

Provided, further, That the board of school directors in any district of the fourth class may, at a meeting held at any time before the opening of the school term, reduce the period of compulsory attendance for pupils twelve years of age or more to not less than seventy per centum of the school term as fixed in such district, in which case, however, the board of school directors must, at the same time, fix the period for the compulsory attendance to begin.

Sec. 1414, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, as amended by Acts of Apr. 18, 1919, P. L. 58, and July 21, 1919, P. L. 1084.

Note: These two amendments of 1919, amending the same section, do not conflict. The amendment of Apr. 18, while it cites the whole of Sec. 1414, does not change the last proviso of the section relating to terms of compulsory attendance. The amendment of July 21, also cites the entire Sec. 1414, but amends only the last proviso.

115. Children to be Excused from Attending School for Urgent Reasons. The board of school directors of any school district in this Commonwealth, may, upon satisfactoory evidence being furnished to it, showing that any child or children are prevented from attending school, or from application to study, on account of any mental, physical, or other urgent reasons, excuse such child or children from attending school as required by the provisions of this act, but the term "urgent reasons" shall be strictly construed and shall not permit of irregular attendance. Every principal or teacher in any public, private, or other school may, for reasons enumerated above, excuse any child for non-attendance during temporary periods.

Sec. 1415, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

116. Exceptions to Compulsory School Attendance Provisions. The provisions of this act requiring regular attendance shall not apply to any child, between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years, who has completed a course of study equivalent to six yearly grades of the public school, and is regularly engaged in any useful and lawful employment or service during the time the public schools are in session, and who holds an employment certificate issued according of law; nor shall the said provisions apply to any child, between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years, engaged in farm work or domestic service in a private home on a permit issued by the school board or the designated school official of the school district of the child's residence, in accordance with regulations which the Superintendent of Public Instruction is hereby authorized to prescribe.

Sec. 1416, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, as amended by Sec. 1, Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 1034.

117. Exemption by Reason of Distance of Home from School. In case there is no public school in session within two miles, by the nearest traveled road, of the residence of any child, such child shall be exempt from the provisions of this act relating to compulsory attendance, unless proper free transportation be furnished to such child to and from school.

Sec. 1418, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

118. Penalty for Failure to Comply with Compulsory Attendance Provisions. Every parent, guardian, or person in parental relation in this Commonwealth, having control or charge of any child or children, between the ages of eight and sixteen, who shall fail to comply with the provisions of this act regarding compulsory attendance, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof before any alderman, magistrate, or justice of the peace shall be sentenced to pay a fine, for the benefit of the school district in which such offending person resides, not exceeding two dollars ($2.00) for the first offense, and not exceeding five dollars ($5.00) for each succeeding offense, together with costs, and, in default of the payment of such fine and costs by the person so offending, shall be sentenced to the county jail for a period not exceeding five days: Provided, That any person sentenced to pay any such fine may, at any time within five days thereafter, appeal to the court of quarter sessions of the proper county, upon entering into a recognizance, with one or more proper sureties, in double the amount of penalty and costs: And provided, That before any proceedings are instituted against any parent, guardian, or person in parental relation, for failure to comply with provisions of this act, such offending person shall have three days and written notice given him by the superintendent of public schools, supervising principal, attendance officer, or secretary of the board of school directors of such violation, and if, after such notice has been given, the provisions of this act regarding compulsory attendance are again violated by the persons so notified, at any time during the term of compulsory attendance, such person, so again offending, shall be liable under the provisions of this act without further notice.

Sec. 1423, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

119. Report of Absence of Children from School. It shall be the duty of every principal or teacher of a public school to report immediately to the attendance officer, superintendent of schools, supervising principal, or secretary of the board of school directors, the names of all children in the list furnished to him who have not appeared for enrollment, and he shall also promptly report, from time to time, to the attendance officer, superintendent of schools, supervising principal, or secretary of the board of school directors, the names of all children who have been absent three days, or their equivalent, during the term of compulsory attendance, without lawful excuse. Such person shall thereupon serve upon the parent, guardian, or other person in parental relation to such children, the written notice hereinbefore provided, and if it shall appear that within three days thereafter, any child, parent, guardian, or other person in parental relation shall have failed to comply with the provisions of this act, the superintendent, supervising principal, attendance officer, or secretary of the board of directors, in the name of the school district, shall proceed against the person so offending, in accordance with the provisions of this act.

Sec. 1428, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

120. Employment of Attendance Officers. The board of school directors of every school district in this Commonwealth of the first, second, or third class, shall, and in any school district of the fourth class may, employ one or more persons to be known as attendance officer, whose duties shall be to enforce the provisions of this act regarding compulsory attendance. Such attendance officers shall, in addition to the duties imposed upon them by the provisions of this act, have full police power without warrant, and may arrest or apprehend any child who fails to attend school in compliance with the provisions of this act, or who is incorrigible, insubordinate, or disorderly during attendance at school, or on his way to or from school.

Sec. 1432, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

121. Placing of Child in School after Arrest for Non-Attendance. When an attendance officer arrests or apprehends any child who fails to attend school as required by the provisions of this act, he shall promptly notify the parents, guardian, or person in parental relation to such child, if such person can be found in the district, and unless requested by such parent, guardian, or person in parental relation to place said child in a school other than public school, he shall place said child in the public school in which the child is, or should be, enrolled.

Sec. 1433, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

122. Power and Authority of Attendance Officer. Such attendance officer shall have full power and authority to enter, during business hours, any place where any children are employed, to ascertain whether or not any child is engaged therein that should attend school as herein provided, and such attendance officer shall have the right to demand and inspect the employment certificate of any child engaged therein.

Sec. 1434, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

123. Interference with Attendance Officer. Penalty. Any officer, director, superintendent, manager, employe, or other person, at any place where any child between fourteen and sixteen years of age is engaged, who refuses to permit or in any way interferes with, the entrance therein of the attendance officer, any member of the board of school directors, the secretary thereof, the district superintendent, or supervising principal of any school district, as provided for in this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof before any magistrate, alderman, or justice of the peace shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than five dollars ($5.00) or more than twenty-five ($25.00) in default of which he may be sentenced to imprisonment not exceeding thirty days: Provided, That any person sentenced to pay any such fine may, upon giving proper surety in double the amount of penalty and costs, at any time within five days thereafter, appeal to the court of quarter sessions of the proper county.

Sec. 1435, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

2. High Schools.

124. Admission to High Schools. In all school districts there shall be admitted to the public high schools therein all children under the age of twenty-one years, residing within the school districts, who shall be found qualified for admission thereto, after having undergone such an examination as shall be prescribed by the board of school directors, subject to such rules and regulations as the Superintendent of Public Instruction shall prescribe, together with such additional pupils from other districts as are herein provided for.

Sec. 1703, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

125. Admission of Pupils to High Schools of Other Districts. Pupils residing in school districts in which no public high schools are maintained may attend, during the entire term, the high schools in other districts which are nearest or most convenient to their homes. If any district maintains a high school with a course less than a four years' course, pupils who have satisfactorily completed the same in the school of their own district, or have completed equivalent of said course in some other school or schools, may attend, at the expense of the school board of the district in which they live, during the remaining years of a three or four years' course, the nearest or most conveniently located high school of such class as they may desire to attend: Provided, That pupils wishing to attend a high school in a district other than the one in which they reside shall obtain the consent of the Board of School Directors of the district in which such high school is located, before attending the same: And provided further, that where pupils desirous of having their tuition paid in a high school in another district on account of having completed in a school or schools in another district the equivalent of a course in their own district, they must present to the Board of their own district, and the board of the district in which they wish to attend, a certificate from the county superintendent who has jurisdiction over the district in which they live, that they have satisfactory completed the equivalent of said course. County superintendents are hereby authorized and required to examine such pupils, and, if entitled, to issue the necessary certificates.

Sec. 1707, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, as amended by Act of June 1, 1915, P. L. 672.

126. Attendance at More Convenient High Schools Than the Nearest One. If any child has completed the elementary course of study in the public schools of the district in which he resides, and resides three or more miles, by the public road, from the nearest high school in said district, unless proper free transportation is furnished, he may attend any more convenient high school in another district, withuot the consent of the board of school directors of the district in which he resides, and the district in which he resides shall be liable to the district whose high school he attends for the cost of his tuition, text-books, and supplies, as provided for in this act.

Sec. 1709, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

127. Pupils Attending High Schools Outside of District Must Satisfy Authorities of Their Fitness. All pupils desiring to attend any high school outside the district in which they reside shall first satisfy the superintendent having supervision of the district in which they reside, as well as the superintendent or principal of said high school, of their fitness to enter the same.

Sec. 1710, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

3. Special Schools.

(Note: For schools for deaf and blind children see infra subdivision M. Defective children.)

128. State Supervision. The Department of Public Instruction shall have the power, and its duty shall be:

(a) To administer the laws of this Commonwealth, relating to vocational education, industrial education, agricultural education, and household arts education, as defined in said laws;

(b) To investigate the need for, and aid in, the establishment of, supervise, inspect, and approve, for the purpose of reimbursement on the part of the State, schools, departments, and courses for manuel training, domestic science, household arts, agricultural, industrial, and commercial education, as well as continuation schools when maintained as a part of the public school system of the Commonwealth;

(c) Out of the funds appropriated to it by the General Assembly for the purpose, to pay for the education of deaf and dumb children, blind children, and deaf, dumb and blind children, residents of Pennsylvania, in schools, located within the Commonwealth, which afford vocational training to such children, to make appropriate rules and regulations for the admission of State pupils to such schools, and to supervise the education of State pupils in any such schools.

Sec. 1303, Act of June 7, 1923, P. L. 498.

129. Establishment of Special Schools. The board of school directors in every school district in this Commonwealth shall establish, equip, furnish, and maintain a sufficient number of elementary public schools, in compliance with the provisions of this act, to educate every person, residing in such district between the ages of six and twenty-one years, who may attend: and may establish, equip, furnish, and maintain in the following additional schools or departments for the education and recreation of persons residing in said district, which said additional schools or departments, when established, shall be an integral part of the public school system in such school district, and shall be so administered, namely:

High schools.
Manual training schools.
Vocational schools.
Domestic science schools.
Agricultural schools.
Evening schools.
Kindergartens.
Libraries.
Museums.
Reading-rooms.
Gymnasiums.
Playgrounds.
Schools for blind, deaf, and mentally defective.
Truant schools.
Parental schools.
Schools for adults.
Public lectures—together with such other schools or educational departments, as they, in their wisdom, may see proper to establish:

Provided, That no pupil shall be refused admission to the courses in these additional schools or departments by reason of the fact that his elementary or academic education is being or has been received in a school other than a public school.

The board of school directors of each school district of the first, second, third, and fourth class may, upon the petition of the parents or guardians of at least twenty-five children between the ages of four and six years, residing within the district and within one mile of any elementary school building situate in such district, establish and maintain a kindergarten.

The number of kindergartens in any one district shall be fixed by the board of school directors, and shall be open during the school year.

If the average attendance in any one kindergarten in any district is ten or less for the school year, the school directors shall, at the close of the school year, discontinue the same.

The board of school directors shall appoint and assign a sufficient number of teachers or kindergartners to such kindergartens, who shall be graduates of a high school in good standing, and shall have had a course of two years in kindergarten work in some normal school or in some private school which has a course equal to a normal school. Any teacher who shall possess qualifications at least equal to those herein prescribed shall be eligible to appointment.

The board of school directors of each school district, in addition to all other taxes authorized to be levied by the act to which this is an amendment, may levy an annual tax for the establishment and maintenance of kindergartens not to exceed two mills on the dollar of the assessed valuation of taxable property in the district. Such taxes, when levied, shall be kept in a separate fund and shall be used only for the purpose for which they were levied. If, at the end of any school year, all kindergartens in any district shall be discontinued, the board of school directors may transfer any moneys in such fund to the general fund for the support of public schools in the district.

Sec. 401. Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, as amended by Act of May 24, 1921, P. L. 1066, Sec. 1.

130. Establishment of Vocational Schools and Departments. Any school district may, through its board of school directors, establish and maintain industrial, agricultural, and household arts schools or departments.

Sec. 4, Act of May 1, 1914, P. L. 138. Under the provisions of Sec. 5, of the above act, two or more districts may join in the establishment of a joint vocational school.

131. Classes in Connection With Vocational Schools, Etc. In order that instruction in the principles and the practice of arts may go on together, industrial, agricultural, and household arts schools or departments may offer instruction in day, part-time and evening classes. Attendance upon such day, evening, or part-time classes shall be restricted to those over fourteen.

Sec. 3, Act of May 1, 1913, P. L. 138.

132. Non-Resident Pupils Attending Vocational Schools. Etc. Any resident of any school district in Pennsylvania which does not maintain an approved industrial, agricultural, or household arts school or department, offering the type of training which he desires, may make application to the school board of any other district for admission, to such school or department maintained by said board. In case said board refuses his admission, he may apply to the State Board of Education for admission to such school or department. The State Board of Education—decision of which shall be final—may approve or disapprove such application. In making such decision the State Board of Education shall take into consideration the opportunities for free vocational training in the community in which the applicant resides, the financial status of the community, the age, sex, preparation, aptitude, and previous record of the applicant, and all other relevant circumstances.

Part of Sec. 7, Act of May 1, 1913, P. L. 138.

133. Free Evening Schools. The board of school directors of any school district of the second, third or fourth class in this Commonwealth, upon the application of the parents of twenty-five or more pupils above the age of fourteen years, residents of the school district, shall open a free evening school for their instruction in spelling, reading, writing, arithmetic, and such other branches as the board may deem advisable; such evening school to be kept open for a term of not less than four months in each year, each of said months to consist of twenty days, and each evening session to be open at least two hours. No pupil shall be admitted to said evening school who is unemployed during the day, or in actual attendance upon any school, either public or private, during the day: Provided, That when the average daily attendance falls below fifteen pupils, the board of school directors may close such evening school for the remainder of the term.

Sec. 1901, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

134. Evening Manual Training Schools. The board of school directors of any school district of the second or third class in this Commonwealth, when requested by seventy-five or more taxpayers of the district, shall establish and equip an evening manual training school, for pupils above the age of fourteen years, and shall keep the same open as many months in the year as day schools are kept open: Provided, That no such evening manual training school shall be opened unless at least twenty-five pupils of the district apply for admission thereto, and the same shall be closed by the board of school directors when the average attendance falls below fifteen.

Sec. 1902, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

135. Qualifications of Teachers for Evening Schools. All teachers of evening schools must have proper certificates as is provided in this act.

Sec. 1903, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

136. Assistance to Kindergartens. The board of school directors in any school district where no kindergartens are established or in addition to any kindergartens established by such district, may cooperate with and assist any kindergarten that has been or hereafter may be established by any non-sectarian association or agency.

Sec. 1904, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

137. Agriculture Schools. Any board of school directors in this Commonwealth, establishing an agricultural school, may, in connection therewith, acquire in the manner hereinbefore provided, such a sufficient amount of land as the board of school directors may determine, for the purpose of such agricultural school, and may equip and maintain the same in a proper manner to be used in connection therewith.

Sec. 1905, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

138. Admission of Pupils to Special Schools. Any board of school directors may admit persons less than six years of age, or more than twenty-one years of age, to suitable special or vocational schools or departments.

Sec. 1906, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

139. School for Tubercular Pupils. No person having tuberculosis of the lungs shall be a pupil, teacher, janitor, or other employe in any public school, unless it be a special school carried on under the regulations made for such schools by the Commissioner of Health.

Sec. 1509, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

140. Food, Clothing and Transportation for Tubercular Pupils in Special Schools. Whenever any board of directors of any school district shall establish any special school for pupils having tuberculosis of the lungs, such district may provide such pupils with the food, clothing, and transportation necessary for attendance thereat.

Sec. 1512, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, as added by Act of May 27, 1919, P. L. 309.

141. Thaddeus Stevens Industrial School at Lancaster. Within ninety days of the passage of this act, the governor shall appoint five commissioners, who shall serve without compensation, who shall build an institution on such plot of ground, not less than two acres, as the citizens of Lancaster, Pennsylvania, may donate for the purpose aforesaid, for the education and training of indigent orphans: Provided, however, If a sufficient number of the above class to fill the places provided in said school, who are deemed by the trustees, under the rules established for the government of the school, qualified for admission, shall not apply, then the board of trustees of the corporation created by this act may admit, first, orphans who may not be indigent, and afterwards, other deserving boys, though they be not orphans, as the trustees in their best judgment may think proper. Those shall be deemed orphans who have lost either parent.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 29, 1909, P. L. 274, amending Sec. 1, Act of May 11, 1905, P. L. 518.

142. Admission of Pupils to Thaddeus Stevens Industrial School. There shall be received into the institution indigent orphans' boys from the State of Pennsylvania, under the age of fourteen, whose admission may be applied for under such regulations as the Board of Trustees may adopt. In considering such admission no preference shall be shown on account of race or color or religion. Proper provisions shall be made for giving instruction in reading, writing, arithmetic, drawing, duties of citizenship, elementary manual training, and the elements of farming, and such other branches as may be deemed requisite for a good English education.

Sec. 8, Act of May 11, 1905, P. L. 518.

4. Attendance at Motion Picture Theatres During School Hours

143. Proprietors, Etc. Not to Permit Certain Children to Attend Motion Picture Theatres. No owner, proprietor, or lessee, or the agent of such owner, proprietor, or lessee, of any moving picture theatre shall, during the term of compulsory attendance of public schools as fixed by the board of school directors in any school district and during the hours and upon the days such schools are in actual session, admit or permit entrance into such moving picture theatre of any child or children between eight and fourteen years of age: Provided, That the provisions of this act shall not apply to any child or children accompanied by its or their parent or parents or other responsible adult, nor to any such child or children presenting a permit signed by the teacher of such child, which permit allows such child or children to be absent from school during school hours and permits admission to the moving picture theatre. Such permit shall be retained by the owner, proprietor, lessee, or agent, and shall be preserved for a period of six months.

Sec. 1, Act of July 8, 1919, P. L. 777.

144. Posting of Act. A copy of the provisions of this act shall be posted at a conspicuous place at or near the entrance into every moving picture theatre.

Sec. 2, Act of July 8, 1919, P. L. 777.

145. Penalty. Any person violating any of the provisions of this act, shall, in summary conviction therefor before any magistrate, alderman, or justice of the peace, be liable to a fine of ten dollars for the first offense, and twenty-five dollars for the second and every subsequent offense, and, in default of the payment of such fine and costs, such person shall be committed to jail one day for each dollar of fine and costs imposed.

Sec. 3, Act of July 8, 1919, P. L. 777.

G. HEALTH AND SANITATION

(Note: For provisions relating to health and sanitation for children in industries see subdivision H. Child Labor.)

1. School Medical Inspection and Hygiene.

146. School Medical Inspection and Hygiene. Every school district of the first, second, or third class in this Commonwealth shall annually provide medical inspection of all the pupils of its public schools by proper medical inspectors, to be appointed by the board of school directors of the district in sufficient number to conduct the required inspection in conformity with the standard requirements prescribed by the Commissioner of Health for the medical inspection of schools in such district. Such medical inspection shall be made in the presence of the parent or guardian of the pupil, when so requested by parent or guardian. All such medical inspectors shall be physicians legally qualified to practice medicine in this Commonwealth, who have had at least two years experience in the practice of their profession, and shall be paid such amounts as the boards of school directors may determine. Provided, That nothing in this act shall preclude the appointment of health officers of municipalities as medical inspectors in the school districts of this Commonwealth.

Sec. 1501, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, as amended by Sec. 1, Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 939.

147. Medical Inspection in Districts of the Fourth Class. In every school district of the fourth class in this Commonwealth the State Department of Health shall provide, in such manner as it may determine, medical inspection for all the pupils in the public schools by proper medical inspectors, to be appointed by the State Commissioner of Health, at the expense of said department. All such medical inspectors shall be legally qualified physicians, who have had not less than two years experience in the practice of their profession. Such medical inspection shall be made in the presence of the parent or guardian of the pupil, when so requested by parent or guardian.

Sec. 1503, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, as amended by Sec. 3, Act of July 17, 1919, P. L. 997

This same section was also amended by Act of June June 23, 1919, P. L. 572, Sec. 2, in exactly the same manner.

148. Annual Medical Inspection. Report of Inspectors. Special Care of Pupils. The medical inspectors shall, at least once each year, inspect and carefully test and examine all pupils in the public schools of their districts, giving special attention to defective sight, hearing, teeth, or other disabilities and defects specified by the Commissioner of Health in his directions for medical examination of schools. Each medical inspector shall make to the teacher, or, if the board of school directors so directs, to the principal or district superintendent of schools, a written report concerning all pupils found to need medical or surgical attention, and giviing careful directions concerning the care of each pupil who needs special care while in school. The teacher or the principal or district superintendent shall keep such report until the end of the school year, shall carry out as carefully as possible said directions concerning the special care of pupils while in school, and shall promptly send a copy of the medical inspector's report upon each child to the parents or guardian thereof

Sec. 1505, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, as amended by Sec. 4, Act of July 17, 1919, P. L. 997.

This same section was also amended by Act of June 23, 1919, P. L. 572, Sec. 3, in exactly the same manner.

149. Tubercular Persons Not to be Pupils, Teachers or Janitors, etc. in Public Schools. No person having tuberculosis of the lungs shall be a pupil, teacher, janitor, or other employe in any public school, unless it be a special school carried on under the regulations made for such schools by the Commissioner of Health.

Sec. 1509, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

150. Compulsory Provisions Not to Apply to Pupils Who are Sick. Any pupil prevented from attending school on account of the health or sanitation laws of this Commonwealth, or by the sanitary regulations of the local board of health or the board of school directors, is hereby relieved from complying with the provisions of this act concerning compulsory attendance, during such time as he is thereby prevented from attending school.

Sec. 1510, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

151. Treatment of Eyes and Teeth of Pupils. Any school district may provide for the care and treatment of defective eyes and teeth of all pupils of its public schools.

Sec. 1511, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, as added by Act of July 17, 1917, P. L. 1032.

2. Blindness of Children. Prevention of Opthalmia Neonatorum.

152. Physicians to Report to Health Authorities Names of All Infants Suffering from Inflammation of the Eyes. Every physician practicing in any portion of this Commonwealth who shall treat or examine any infant suffering from ophthalmia neonatorum (inflammation of the eyes of infants) shall, if the said case be located in a township of the first class, a borough, or a city, forthwith make a report in writing to the health authorities of said township, city, or borough; and, if said case shall be located in a township of the second class, or a city, borough, or township of the first class, not having a board of health, or body acting as such, to the State Department of Health, upon blanks supplied for that purpose; in which report he shall, under his or her own signature, state the name of the disease, and the name, age, sex, color, and nativity of the infant suffering therefrom, together with the street and house number of the premises in which said infant may be located, or otherwise sufficiently designate the same, the date of the onset of the disease, the name and occupation of the householder in whose family the disease may have occurred; together with such other information relating to said case as may be required by said health authorities and the State Department of Health.

Sec. 1, Act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 443.

153. Midwives and Nurses to Make Reports of Infants Suffering with Inflammation of the Eyes. Any midwife, or nurse, or other person having the care of an infant, whose eyes have become inflamed or swollen or reddened at any time within two weeks after birth, shall report the same, in writing to the health authorities of the city, borough, or township of the first class in which the case may be located; or, if it be located in a township of the second class, or a city, borough, or township of the first class, not having a board of health, or body acting as such, the State Department of Health, within six hours after the discovery thereof; giving the name of the infant, the names of the parents or guardians and the street and number of their residence, or otherwise sufficiently designate the same; together with the fact that such inflammation or swelling or redness exists, and shall make a similar report in writing to some regularly qualified practicing physician of the district.

Sec. 2, Act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 443.

154. Health Authorities to Notify Parents after Receipt of Reports. It shall be the duty of the said health authorities or the State Department of Health, immediately upon receipt of a written report from a midwife or a nurse, or person other than a practicing physician, to notify the parents or guardian, or other person having charge of the infant, of the danger to the eyes or eye of said infant by reason of any neglect of proper treatment of the same.

Sec. 3, Act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 443.

155. Physicians to Make Report to Commissioner of Health After Treating Infants' Eyes. Every physician in this Commonwealth who shall treat any infants' eyes for ophthalmia neonatorum (inflammation of the eyes of an infant) shall, within forty-eight hours after said physician ceases treatment of or attendance upon such case of ophthalmia neonatorum, report to the Commissioner of Health of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania that said physician has treated a certain case of ophthalmia neonatorum, giving full information as required in section one of this act, stating that he has ceased treatment of or attendance upon said case, and what was condition of infant's eyes when physician ceased treatment of or attendance upon said case of ophthalmia neonatorum.

Sec. 4, Act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 443.

156. Midwives and Nurses to be Supplied With Copies of Act. Every health officer shall furnish a copy of this act to every person who is known to him to act as a midwife or nurse in the city, borough, or township for which he is health officer; and the Commissioner of Health of this Commonwealth of Pennsylvania shall cause a sufficient number of copies of this act to be printed and supplied to the health officers.

Sec. 5, Act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 443.

157. Penalty. Any physician, midwife, nurse, or other person who shall violate any of the provisions of this act, shall, upon conviction thereof in a summary proceeding before any justice of the peace or alderman of the county wherein such offense was committed, be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than twenty or more than one hundred ($100) dollars, to be paid to the use of the said county, and the costs of prosecution, or to be imprisoned in the county jail for a period of not less than ten (10) or more than thirty (30) days, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 6, Act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 443.

3. Communicable Diseases.

158. Diseases Declared Communicable. Report of Physicians. The following diseases are hereby specifically declared to be communicable, to wit:

Actinomycosis, anterior poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis), anthrax, bubonic plague, cerebrospinal menigitis (spidemic), (cerebrospinal fever, spotted fever), chicken pox, Asiatic cholera, diphtheria (diphtheritic croup, membraneous croup, putrid sore throat), epidemic dysentery (bacillary or amebic dysentery), erysipelas, German measles, glanders (farcy), rabies (hydrophobia), impetigo contagiosa, leprosy, malarial fever, measles, mumps, pellagra, pneumonia (true), puerperal fever, relapsing fever, scabies, scarlet fever, (scarlatine, scarlet rash), smallpox (variola, varioloid) tetanus, trachoma, trichiniasis, tuberculosis in any form, typhoid fever, para typhoid fever, typhus fever, uncinariasis, whooping cough, or yellow fever.

The Department of Health may, when it deems it necessary to safeguard human life and health, declare as communicable diseases additional to those hereinbefore specifically so declared, but only in the following manner, that is to say:

The Secretary of Health shall call a meeting of the advisory health board, five days' written notice of which shall be sent to each member of the board. The notice shall state the time and place of meeting and the fact that a proposed regulation will be presented declaring a certain disease or diseases—setting it or them forth by name—to be communicable.. The notice shall also state such of the diseases as should, in the opinion of the Secretary of Health, be quarantinable or reportable, or both, and the quarantine period therefor.

Upon the affirmative vote of four members of the advisory health board personally present, any disease or diseases set forth in the proposed regulation is or hereby declared communicable, with the same force and effect as if expressly enumerated in this act. Any such disease is hereby further declared quarantinable or reportable, or both, as may be provided in the regulation, with the force and effect hereinbefore referred to.

The regulation may be amended at such meeting so as to eliminate some or any of the diseases set forth in the notice, but no disease shall be declared communicable which is not contained in the notice.

Every physician practicing in any portion of this Commonwealth who shall treat or examine any person suffering from or affected with any disease herein specifically declared communicable and reportable, or by regulation declared communicable and reportable, shall, if said case shall be located in a township of the first class, a borough, or a city, forthwith make a report in writing to the health authorities of said township, city, or borough; and, if said case shall be located in a township of the second class, or a city, borough, or township of the first class not having a board of health or body acting as such, to the health officer appointed by the Department of Health for such district; upon blanks for that purpose, in which report he shall, over his or her own signature, state the name of the disease, and the name, age, sex, color, nativity, and occupation, if any, of the person suffering therefrom, together with the street and house number of the premises in which said person may be located, or otherwise sufficiently designate the same, the date of the onset of the disease, the name and occupation of the householder in whose family the disease may have occurred, the number of children in said household attending school and the name or names of the school or schools so attended, together with such information relating to said case as may be required by said health authorities and the Department of Health.

Sec. 1, Act of June 28, 1923, P. L. 888.

159. Duties of Health Authorities. Placarding Premises. Upon receipt by the health authorities of any township of the first class, borough, or city, or by the health officer of the Department of Health, of a report of the existence of a case of anterior polimyelitis (infantile paralysis), bubonic plague, cerebrospinal meningitis (epidemic), (cerebrospinal fever, spotted fever), chicken pox, Asiatic cholera, diphtheria (diphtheria croup, membraneous croup, putrid sore throat), German measles, leprosy, measles, mumps, scarlet fever (scarlatina, scarlet rash), smallpox, (variola, varioloid) typhoid fever, para typhoid fever, typhus fever, whooping cough, yellow fever, or any disease declared communicable and quarantinable by regulation as hereinbefore provided, the said health authorities, or health officer or medical representative of the Department of Health, as the case may be, shall quarantine or cause to be quarantined, in the manner prescribed by the rules or regulations of the Department of Health, or of the local health authorities, the premises in which such disease exists and any person or persons who has or have been exposed thereto, or any person or persons who, in the opinion of the attending physician, health authorities, or a medical representative of the Department of Health, is or are reasonably suspected of having such disease, by quarantining such person or persons either upon the premises in which the disease exists or in a place designated in this State for the isolation, control, and treatment of communicable disease, in the manner prescribed by the rules and regulations both of the said health authorities and the Department of Health; and shall post or cause to be posted, in a conspicuous place or places upon the premises in which the said disease may be located, a placard or placards, upon which shall be printed in conspicuous letters the name of the disease from which the person or persons in said house or premises is or are suffering, with the warning that said premises are under quarantine, that no person or persons other than the attending physician and trained nurse shall enter or leave the said premises, except by permission of the health authorities, and setting forth the penalties prescribed by this act for violations of quarantine: Provided, That, in the case of a person or persons suspected of suffering from disease or diseases of the generative organs, no quarantine shall be established or caused to be established by health officers or representatives of the Department of Health until it is reasonably certain, from personal examination or laboratory tests or from evidence which has been furnished to the Department of Health or to any board, bureau, or department of health, that the person or persons is or are suffering from diseases of the generative organs, but this proviso shall not prevent the quarantine of persons known to be prostitutes and reasonably suspected of suffering from diseases of the generative organs and of being a menace to the health of the community: Provided further, That variola or varioloid shall be placarded as "smallpox," and that diphtheritic croup, mebraneous croup, and putrid sore throat shall be placarded as "diphtheria", that scarlatina and scarlet rash shall be placarded as "scarlet fever," and that para typhoid fever shall be placarded as "typhoid fever"; Provided further, That in addition to the placarding, said health authorities may, for the purpose of enforcing quarantine regulations, place a guard or guards over the said house or houses or premises.

Sec. 2, Act of June 28, 1923, P. L. 888.

160. Duration of Placarding. The said placards shall remain in place until the expiration of the quarantine period fixed by the local health authorities and the Department of Health and the recovery, death or removal of the person or persons affected; and shall only be removed by the health officer after the destruction or disinfection of infected bedding, clothing, and other articles which have been exposed to infection, and the disinfection of rooms, premises, and inmates, as may be prescribed by the regulations of local health authorities or the Department of Health.

Sec. 3, Act of June 28, 1923, P. L. 888.

161. Department of Health to Determine Duration of Quarantine. The department of health, with the consent and approval of the advisory health board, shall determine the duration of the quarantine to be imposed for each of the diseases mentioned in section two of this act, and for such others as may at any time be declared reportable, and quarantinable in accordance with its provisions, the period of isolation of those suffering from the communicable diseases, and the duration of the quarantine or degree of restraint to be placed upon those who have been exposed to the communicable disease, and shall make such further regulations looking to the prevention and the spread of the communicable diseases as may be deemed necessary for the protection of the public health.

The call for a meeting of the advisory board to formulate quarantine regulations, shall be in writing to the members of the said board. The notice shall antedate the meeting by at least five days, and it shall contain a copy of the proposed regulations. Upon the affirmative vote of four members of the advisory health board personally present, the proposed regulations, when properly promulgated as now or hereafter provided by law, shall become effective with the same force as if expressly set forth in this act.

Sec. 4, Act of June 28, 1923, P. L. 888.

162. Registry of Excluded Children to be Kept by All Schools. The registry of all public, private, parochial, Sunday, and other schools shall exhibit the names and residences of all children and persons excluded therefrom or readmitted thereto agreeably to the provisions of the regulations of the Department of Health and local health authorities or any act of Assembly; and said register shall be open at all times to the inspection of the city, borough, or township authorities, and the Department of Health, and their respective officers and agents.

Sec. 5, Act of June 28, 1923, P. L. 888.

163. Department of Health to Furnish Blanks. Blanks whereon to make the reports and certificates required by this act or the regulations of the Department of Health shall be supplied, in cities, boroughs, and townships of the first class, by the health authorities thereof, respectively; and in townships of the second class, and in cities, boroughs, and townships of the first class not having boards of health or bodies acting as such, by the Department of Health.

Sec. 6, Act of June 28, 1923, P. L. 888.

164. Health Authorities to Furnish Schools with Daily Notices. It shall be the duty of the health authorities of cities, boroughs, and townships of the first class, respectively, to furnish to persons in charge of public, private, parochial, Sunday, or other schools, a daily notice, containing the name, location, and disease of all persons suffering from any quarantinable disease, upon receipt by them of reports of such cases from physicians as required by section one of this act; and such notice shall be daily furnished to such persons in charge of such schools in townships of the second class, and in cities, boroughs, and townships of the first class not having boards of health or bodies acting as such, by the health officer for the Department of Health.

Sec. 7, Act of June 28, 1923, P. L. 888.

165. Local Health Authorities to Establish Additional Rules. The health authorities of the several townships, boroughs, and cities of this Commonwealth may, and they are hereby authorized and empowered to, establish additional rules and regulations regarding the isolation and quarantine of persons who may be suffering from any of the diseases comprehended by section one of this act, and for the destruction or disinfection of bedding, clothing, or other infected article, and for the disinfection of houses and premises, and for carrying out of the provisions of this act and the regulations of the Department of Health, as they may in good faith declare the public safety and health demand; which rules and regulations they may, from time to time, alter or amend, but in no instance shall such rules abridge in any way the provisions of this act or the regulations of the Department of Health.

Sec. 8, Act of June 28, 1923, P. L. 888.

166. Weekly Reports by Local Health Authorities to State Department of Health. The health authorities of the several cities, boroughs, and townships of the first class shall, at the end of each week and for the fraction of a week occurring at the end of each month, report to the Department of Health, upon blanks supplied for that purpose, a list of all cases of communicable diseases comprehended by section one of this act which have been reported to them during said period; which report shall contain the name of each person suffering therefrom, respectively, and his or her age, sex, color, and nativity, together with the name of the disease, and the date of the onset thereof; and, in the event of no reports of any of said diseases having been received by the aforesaid health authorities, respectively, during any said period, that fact shall be reported to the Department of Health.

Sec. 9, Act of June 28, 1923, P. L. 888.

167. Tampering with Placards. Interfering with Health Officers. Any person who shall remove, deface, cover up, or destroy, or cause to be removed, defaced, covered up, or destroyed, any placard relating to any of the diseases declared to be quarantinable shall for every such offense, upon conviction thereof in a summary proceeding before any magistrate, or justice of the peace of the county wherein such offense was committed, be sentenced to pay a fine of not more than one hundred ($100) dollars, to be paid to the use of said county, and costs of prosecution, or to be imprisoned in the county jail for a period of not less than ten days or more than thirty days, or both, at the discretion of the court. Any person, other than the attending physician or trained nurse, who shall enter or leave any quarantined premises without having secured permission from the health authorities; or who shall violate any of the quarantine restrictions imposed by the rules and regulations of the health authorities of any city, borough, or township of the first class or the rules and regulations of the Department of Health; or who shall interfere with a health officer or any other duly qualified agent of the Department of Health or of any local board or department of health in the discharge of his official duties in the placarding, quarantining, disinfecting, or releasing from quarantine of any premises or in the investigation of any alleged case of quarantinable disease,—shall for every such offense, upon conviction thereof in a summary proceeding before any magistrate or justice of the peace of the county wherein said offense was committed, be sentenced to pay a fine of not more than one hundred ($100) dollars, to be paid to the use of the said county, and costs of prosecution, or to be imprisoned in the county jail for a period of not less than ten or more than thirty days, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Any physician, undertaker, teacher of a public school, principal, of a school, superintendent of a Sunday school, sexton, janitor, parent or guardian, or any other person or persons who shall fail, neglect, or refuse to comply with, or who shall violate any regulation of the Department of Health or of the local health authorities shall for every such offense, upon conviction thereof in a summary proceeding before any magistrate or justice of the peace of the county wherein said offense was committed, be sentenced to pay a fine of not more than one hundred ($100) dollars, to be paid to the use of said county, and costs of prosecution, or to be imprisoned in the county jail for a period of not less than ten or more than thirty days, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 10, Act of June 28, 1923, P. L. 888.

4. Vaccination.

168. Children not Vaccinated Not to be Admitted to Schools. It shall be the duty of all school directors, superintendents, principals, or other persons in charge of any public, private, parochial or other school, to refuse the admission of any child to any of said schools under their charge or supervision, except upon a certificate signed by a physician, setting forth that such child has been vaccinated and that a subsequent examination reveals a resulting cicatrix indicating successful vaccination, or that vaccination has been performed according to the rule and regulations promulgated by the Commissioner of Health, with the sanction and advice of the Advisory Board of the Department of Health, or that it has previously had smallpox. All certificates of vaccination shall be issued in accordance with the rules and regulations promulgated by the Commissioner of Health with the sanction and advice for the Advisory Board of the Department of Health.

Sec. 1, Act of June, 5, 1919, P. L. 399, amending Sec. 12, Act of June 18, 1895, P. L. 207.

169. Penalty. Any physician, undertaker, principal of a school, superintendent of a Sunday school, sexton, janitor, head of a family, or any other person or persons named in this act, who shall fail, neglect, or refuse to comply with, or who shall violate, any of the provisions or requirements of this act, shall for every such offense upon conviction thereof before any mayor, burgess, alderman, police magistrate, or justice of the peace, be liable to fine or penalty therefor of not less than five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars; which said fines or penalties shall be paid into the school fund of the municipality in which the offence was committed; and in default of payment thereof, such person or persons, so convicted shall undergo an imprisonment in the jail of the proper county for a period not exceeding sixty days.

Sec. 2, Act of June 5, 1919, P. L. 399, amending Sec. 21, Act of June 18, 1895, P. L. 207.

5. Midwives.

170. Reasons for Passage of Act. Whereas, The lives of many women and children are needlessly sacrificed in child-birth, and the vision of many new-born children is seriously injured or totally destroyed through the ignorance and incompetency of persons engaged in the practice of midwifery; and

Whereas, An act of Assembly attempting to regulate such matters was approved on the fourteenth day of June, Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and eleven, but was defective; therefore,—

Whereas Clauses, Act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 441.

The act herein referred to is inserted hereafter being Secs. 166h to 166w infra.

This act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 441, seems to supply the acts of Apr. 27, 1909, P. L. 249 and June 14, 1911, P. L. 928.

171. Midwives to be Licensed by Bureau of Medical Education and Licensure. Certificate to be Registered with Prothonotary. From and after six months after the date of the passage of this act, it shall be unlawful for any person, except a duly licensed physician to practice midwifery in this State before receiving a certificate from the Bureau of Medical Education and Licensure of the State of Pennsylvania to do so, and having said certificate registered in the office of the prothonotary of the county in which the holder desires to practice midwifery.

Sec. 1, Act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 441.

172. Bureau of Medical Education and Licensure to Issue Rules and Regulations. Issuing, Revoking and Refusing Certificates of Licensure. The Bureau of Medical Education and Licensure shall formulate and issue such rules and regulations, from time to time, as may be necessary for the proper conduct of the practice of midwifery by midwives. Said bureau shall issue certificates to midwives having fulfilled the requirements laid down by the bureau, which certificates shall be revocable by the bureau on proof of violation of any of its rules and regulations. The said bureau may refuse to grant a certificate to any person addicted to the use of alcohol or narcotic drugs, or who may have been guilty of a crime involving moral turpitude.

Sec. 2, Act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 441.

173. Fee for Certificate. Each and every applicant for a certificate to practice midwifery shall pay to the said Bureau of Medical Education and Licensure the sum of ten dollars at the time of making such application.

Sec. 3, Act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 441.

174. Penalty. Any person practicing midwifery as a profession or advertising herself as a midwife, without first obtaining the certificate aforesaid, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon first conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars nor more than fifty dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than ten days nor more than sixty days, or both fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court. On a second conviction both fine and imprisonment shall be imposed.

Sec. 6, Act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 441.

175. Midwives Practicing Gratuitously. Midwives Licensed Prior to Passage of Act. Any person, other than a regularly licensed physician, who shall attend a woman in childbirth, for hire, or who shall make a practice of attending women in childbirth, gratuitiously or for hire, shall be regarded as midwife within the meaning of this act: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent any one licensed under the Medical Act, approved the third day of June, Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and eleven, from practicing midwifery; nor to prohibit a student of medicine, matriculated at and in attendance at a legally incorporated medical school or college, recognized and approved by the Bureau of Medical Education and Licensure, from practicing obstetrics under the provisions of the faculty of the medical school or college in which he is a duly registered student.

Sec. 7, Act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 441.

176. Reasons for Passage of Act. Whereas, The lives of many women and children are needlessly sacrificed in childbirth, and the vision of many new-born seriously injured or totally destroyed through the ignorance and incompetency of persons engaged in the practice of midwifery, therefore,

Whereas clause to Act of June 14, 1911, P. L. 928.

177. Midwives to be Licensed by Medical Council. On and after the date of the passage of this act, it shall be unlawful for any person, except a duly licensed physician, to practice midwifery in this State before receiving a license from the Medical Council of the State of Pennsylvania to do so.

Sec. 1, Act of June 14, 1911, P. L. 928.

This section seems to be repealed by the Act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 441, which provides for the licensing of midwives by the Bureau of Medical Education and Licensure; See suprs Secs. and . The Medical Council has been abolished.

178. Licensing of Midwives who Practiced Ten Years Prior to Passage of Act. All persons practicing midwifery in this State, and who have practiced it for ten years last preceding the date of the passage of this act, and desiring to continue the same, shall within ninety days after the passage of this act, make application to the Medical Council of the State of Pennsylvania by submitting an affidavit, fully attested, giving the name, age, residence, the length of time during which and the place or places at which the applicant has been engaged in the practice of midwifery, and the special education, if any, which the applicant has received for such practice. Such application shall be accompanied by the affidavits of five (5) freeholders at least two of which must be licensed practicing physicians duly attested, that the applicant is known to them as the person applying for a license to practice midwifery, and that such applicant has been engaged in the active practice of midwifery, giving the location or locations of such practice, for the ten years last preceeding the date of the passage of this act. Upon such application, and the payment of three (3) dollars, the Medical Council of the State of Pennsylvania shall issue to the applicant a license, which shall, when presented to and endorsed by the local registrar of vital statistics of the district in which applicant, resides, entitle the holder to practice midwifery in this State. All midwives who fail to comply with the provisions of this section, within the prescribed ninety days, must comply with the provisions of section three of this act.

Licenses issued under this section are continued in force under the provisions of Sec. 7, Act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 441, See supra sec.

179. Licensing of Midwives Who Have Practiced Less Than Ten Years and of Persons Desiring to Enter Practice. All persons who have practiced midwifery in this State less than the above required ten (10) years, and desiring to continue the same, and all persons desiring to enter upon the practice of midwifery in this State after this act goes into effect, shall present to the Medical Council of this State their diplomas, duly attested and procured from an obsterical school of such standing as shall be recorgnized and determined by the Medical Council of this State, together with an application setting forth applicant's name, age, place of residence, and such other information as may be required by the State Medical Council to establish applicant's identity. Such applicant shall pay to the said Medical Council the sum of ten (10) dollars at the time of making such application; or, before unable to present a diploma satisfactory to the State Medical Council, such applicant shall submit to an examination in midwifery, as the said State Medical Council shall require, and pay a fee of twenty (20) dollars. Application for examination, with all data required by the Medical Council of the State with the fee, must be in the hands of said State Medical Council at least ten (10) days before the examination, which fee shall entitle the applicant to one re-examination within twelve months of the date when the first examination is held. Such evidence of qualification being satisfactory to the said State Medical Council, it shall issue to the applicant a license, which shall, when presented to and endorsed by the local registrar of vital statistics of the district in which the applicant resides, entitle the holder to practice midwifery in this State.

Licenses issued under this Section are continued in force under the provisions of Sec. 7, Act of June 5, 1913, P. L. 441. See supra Sec. 175.

180. Licenses to be Exhibited to Local Registrars of Vital Statistics. Registrars to Keep Record of Licenses. Commissioner of Health to Keep Record of Licenses. Every person who shall receive a license as provided in this act, shall, before engaging in the practice of midwifery in any city, town, or county in this Commonwealth, exhibit his or her license to, and the endorsement of, the local registrar of vital statistics for the city, town, or county in which he or she resides. Such local registrar shall record in a "licensed Midwife Register," kept for the purpose, the name and address of the midwife, and the date of issue of the license, and the date of his endorsement, and shall transmit a transcript of each such registration to the State Commissioner of Health, at Harrisburg, who shall keep it on file for reference.

Sec. 4, Act of June 14, 1911, P. L. 928

181. Examinations of Applicants. The Medical Council of the State of Pennsylvania shall appoint as an examiner for each examination a member of the Medical Council, or a legally qualified practitioner of medicine as hereinafter provided, and shall have charge of all details of the examination of applicants. Such applicants must, at least, know how to read and write, and be able to make out correctly a birth certificate as required by law; and present satisfactory proof that he or she has attended at least five (5) cases of childbirth; and show a reasonable degree of knowledge of the anatomy of the pelvis, deformities of the pelvis, antisepis, diagnosis, physiology and pathology of pregnancy, phsiology, mechanism, and management of labor; dystocia, fetal, and material physiology, and management of puerperium, physiology, pathology and management of new-born infants.

Whenever applicant resides outside the city limits of the city of Harrisburg, and cannot come to the city to try the examination before a member of the State Medical Council, then the examination shall be conducted by a legally qualified practitioner of medicine of the city, town or county in which the applicant resides, or a member of the State Medical Council, at the discretion of the State Medical Council. Such examiner to be appointed by the State Medical Council, and to conduct said examination in accordance with the directions given by the State Medical Council, and such examiner shall forward, with his endorsement, to the State Medical Council all papers written by the applicant in the examination.

Sec. 5, Act of June 14, 1911, P. L. 928.
The Medical Council has been abolished. Applicants are now licensed by the Bureau of Medical Education and Licensure. See supra Sec. 171.

182. Examinations. When Held. An examination shall be held in the county seat of each and every county in this Commonwealth within ninety days after the passage of this act, and again within nine months after the passage of this act, days and dates to be fixed by the State Medical Council; and due notice shall be given in at least two newspapers, issued and published in the localities in which examinations are to be held, once a week for four weeks, previous to the day of examination, giving the date and place and the subjects in which examinations will be held.

At any time after nine months after the passage of this act, and after the date of the above mentioned examination, upon receipt of an application for examination for license to practice midwifery in this State, the State Medical Council shall, within thirty days, communicate, to the applicant the place at which, the date on which, and the subjects in which he or she shall appear for examination before the State Medical Council, or the local examiner of the city, town or county in which applicant resides.

See notes of Sec. 181.

183. Refusal and Revocation of Certificates. The State Medical Council may refuse to grant a license to any person addicted to the habitual use of alcohol or narcotics; and may revoke the license of any licensed midwife when it is shown by a competent evidence that he or she has been guilty of immoral or criminal practices, or have become addicted to the habitual use of alcohol or narcotics.

Sec. 7, Act of June 14, 1911, P. L. 928.
Certificates are now revoked by the Bureau of Medical Education and Licensure: See sec. 172.

184. Midwives not to Engage in Certain Practice. Emergency Cases. It shall be unlawful, on and after the passage of this act, for any midwife, (nurse or person), other than a legally qualified physician, to attempt to administer an anesthetic, to attempt to deliver a retained placents, to attempt to use forceps, to attempt version or any forceible delivery; but such midwife, (nurse or person) shall, in all cases of labor that are not normal, notify a licensed practitioner or medicine: Provided, that nothing in this section shall apply in cases of emergency, where no duly licensed practitioner of medicine is readily obtainable.

Sec. 9, Act of June 14, 1911, P. L. 928.

185. Duties of Midwives With Regard to Children Having Inflamed Eyes. Penalty. If at any time within two weeks after the birth of an infant, one or both of its eyes, or the eyelids, be reddened, inflamed, swollen, or discharging pus, the midwife, (nurse or person), other than a legally qualified physician, in charge of such infant, shall refrain from the application of any remedy for the same, and shall immediately report such condition to the local health authorities, and, at the same time, to some legally qualified physician in the city, town, or county wherein the infant is cared for. Any person or persons violating the provisions of this section shall, on conviction, be punished by a fine not to exceed one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in jail not to exceed six months, or by both fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court, alderman, magistrate or justice of the peace.

Sec. 10, Act of June 14, 1911, P. L. 928. On the same subject see Sec.

186. Midwives Not to Practice Medicine. It shall be unlawful for any person, licensed as a midwife only, to engage in any other branch of medical practice; or to advertise herself as a doctor, doctress, or physician; or to use any letters before or after her name, on a sign, card, or otherwise, indicating that she is authorized to, or does, engage in any other branch of medical practice.

Sec. 11, Act of June 14, 1911, P. L. 928.

187. Penalty. And any person practicing midwifery as a profession or advertising herself as a midwife, without first obtaining the license aforesaid, and any licensed midwife who shall do any acts in this section prohibited—except section ten, last above, which carries its own penalty—shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars nor more than fifty dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail, nor more than two months nor less than ten days, or both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. Acting in each case shall be deemed a separate offense. Upon a third conviction of a licensed midwife, for a commission of any acts in this law prohibited, he or she shall, in addition to the penalties herein provided, forfeit his or her license to practice midwifery.

Sec. 12, Act of June 14, 1911, P. L. 928.

188. License to be Forfeited in Certain Cases. A midwife who shall be convicted of producing an abortion, or of inducing premature labor, shall, in addition to the penalties already provided by law, forfeit at once his or her license to practice midwifery.

Sec. 13, Act of June 14, 1911, P. L. 928.

189. Midwifery Defined. Persons excepted From Provisions of Act. Any person, other than a regularly licensed physician, who shall attend a woman in childbirth, for hire, or who shall make a practice of attending women in childbirth, gratuitously or for hire, shall be regarded as a midwife within the meaning of this bill:

Provided, That this section shall not be construed to prevent a doctor of medicine, or licentiate of medicine, who holds a certificate of registration as such, from practicing obstetrics; nor to prohibit a student of medicine, matriculated at and in attendance at a legally incorporated medical school or college, from practicing obstetrics under the supervision of the faculty of the medical school or college in which he is duly registered student; nor to prohibit the gratuitious rendering of obstetrical services by a friend or member of the family of the patient; nor to prohibit the rendering of obstetrical services by any person, in a case of emergency, when no duly licensed practitioner of medicine is readily obtainable.

Sec. 14, Act of June 14, 1911, P. L. 928.

190. Licensing of Midwives in Cities of the First Class. From and after the first day of September, one thousand nine hundred and nine, it shall be unlawful for any person or persons, in any city of the first class, to practice the business or profession of midwifery, for hire or reward, except under license to be obtained from the Department of Public Health and Charities in such cities; or to continue the practice thereof, after any such license shall have been revoked by said Department, unless it shall be reinstated upon appeal; or to practice said business or profession otherwise than in accordance with the rules and regulations to be by such Department made, adopted, and promulgated. The authority to grant said license, to provide for the examination of applicants therefor, and to revoke the same for cause, is hereby conferred upon the Director of the said Department, in said cities. A fee of one ($1) dollars shall be paid into the city treasury for each license issued under this act, by the person to whom such license shall be granted.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 27, 1909, P. L. 249.

191. Department of Public Health and Charities to Adopt Rules and Regulations. The said Department of Public Health and Charities, upon the recommendation of the Chief of the Bureau thereof in charge of health affairs, is hereby authorized and directed to make and adopt suitable rules and regulations for the examination, licensing, and registration of midwives in the said cities; respecting the form of such licenses, and the manner and form of application therefor, for the revocation of such licenses for cause; for the exhibition of such licenses, and for the conduct of the business or profession of midwifery; which rules and regulations shall be promulgated by public advertisement; three (3) times each, in two (2) newspapers published in said cities, of the fact of their having been made and adopted, and in such other manner, if any, as said Department may determine; and shall at all times be open to public inspection. Such rules and regulations shall not be inconsistent with existing laws: Provided, That no license for the conduct of such business or profession shall be revoked, until after ten (10) days written notice shall have been given to the holder thereof of the allegations against him or her, and until he or she shall have been afforded a full opportunity to be heard; and an appeal from such revocation shall lie, within thirty (30) days thereafter, to the court of quarter sessions of the proper county: And provided further, That no person who shall have pursued the business or profession of midwifery, continuously for a period of ten (10) years before the passage of this act, shall be required to undergo an examination as a pre-requisite to the obtaining of such license.

Sec. 2, Act of Apr. 27, 1909, P. L. 249.

192. Any person violating any of the provisions of this act, or of the rules and regulations hereby authorized, after the same shall have been adopted and promulgated, shall, upon conviction thereof, be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punishable by a fine not exceeding one hundred ($100) dollars.

Sec. 3, Act of Apr. 27, 1909, P. L. 249.

Lying-In Hospitals.

193. Licensing of Lying-in Hospitals. It shall be lawful for the board of health of any locality to license any person or persons, other than an institution duly incorporated for such purpose, to establish and keep a lying-in-hospital, ward or other private place for the reception, care and treatment of women in labor, upon written application filed with the said board, accompanied by the endorsement of six or more reputable persons, citizens of the county where such hospital may be situated, who shall certify to the respectability of the applicant and that the hospital, hospital ward or other private place shall only be used for legitimate, moral and charitable purposes; and if after due inquiry of such board of health, it is believed that the applicant is a proper person and the premises are suitable and properly arranged for such purpose, the said board of health shall grant a license for the purpose above mentioned upon the payment of a fee of five dollars. Such license shall continue in force for a period of two years, subject, however, to be revoked by the board of health granting the same upon the violation of the rules and regulations enacted by the said board of health for the government of said hospitals, hospital ward or other private places. The proprietor of every such hospital, hospital ward or other private place kept for lying-in purposes shall keep a record in a book for that purpose, containing the full name and address of each person admitted, the date of admission, the date of birth of every child, the date of its removal and the place to which such child shall be removed. Such hospital, hospital ward or other private place shall be subject to the visitation or inspection at any time by the board of health granting the said license, or any special officer that may be appointed for that purpose by the court of common pleas, upon the petition of any society, for the prevention of cruelty to children of the proper county.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 26, 1893, P. L. 24.

194. Report of Birth of Child to Board of Health. The proprietory of every hospital, hospital ward or other private place for lying-in purposes to which a license has been granted according to section one of this act shall, within five days after the birth of any child, report to the said board of health the date and place of such birth, the name, sex and color of the child.

Sec. 2, Act of Apr. 26, 1893, P. L. 24.

195. Penalty. Whoever shall violate the provisions of section one of this act by keeping a hospital, hospital ward or other private place for lying-in purposes for hire or reward, without license shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and for the first offense, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars and for the second offense, upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars and imprisonment of not more than one year, or either or both, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 3, Act of Apr. 26, 1893, P. L. 24.

196. Records to be Made of Inmates of Lying-in Hospitals. The persons in charge of lying-in hospitals in which persons are confined are required to make records of all the personal and statistical particulars relative to said persons as directed by the State Registrar of Vital Statitics, under the provisions of Sec. 17, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900. See Sec. 204.

Compiler's Note.

7. Vital Statistics.

197. State Department of Health to Have Charge of System of Registration of Births, Deaths, Marriages and Disease. It shall be the duty of the State Department of Health to have charge of the State system of registration of births, deaths, marriages, and disease; to prepare the necessary methods, forms, and blanks for obtaining and preserving such records and to insure the faithful registration of the same in the townships, boroughs, cities, counties, and in the Central Bureau of Vital Statistics at the capital of the State. The said department shall be charged with the uniform and thorough enforcement of the law throughout the State, and shall, from time to time, recommend any additional forms and amendments that may be necessary for this purpose.

Sec. 1, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900.

198. Central Bureau of Vital Statistics. That the Commissioner of Health of the State Department of Health shall have general supervision over the Central Bureau of Vital Statistics, which is hereby authorized to be established by said department, and which shall be under the immediate direction of the State Registrar of Vital Statistics, whom the said Commissioner of Health shall appoint, and who shall be a medical practitioner of not less than ten years practice in his profession and a competent vital statistican. The term of appointment of the State Registrar of Vital Statistics shall be four years, beginning with the first day of January, nineteen hundred and thirteen, and any vacancy occurring in the office of State Registrar of Vital Statistics shall be filled by appointment of the said Commissioner of Health, who shall also fix the salary of the office.

The Department of Health shall provide for such clerical and other assistance as may be necessary for the purpose of this act, and may fix the compensation of persons thus employed within the amount appropriated therefor by the Legislature. Suitable apartments shall be provided for the State Bureau of Vital Statistics in the State Capital of Harrisburg, which shall be properly equipped with fireproof vault and filing cases for the permanent and safe preservation of all records made and returned under this act.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 20, 1921, P. L. 105, amending Sec. 2, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900.

199. Registration Districts. For the purposes of this act, the State shall be divided into registration districts as follows: Each city, borough, and township shall constitute a primary registration district, but two or more primary registration districts may be united into one registration district.

Sec. 3, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900.

200. Local Registrars and Subregistrars. The Commissioner of Health shall appoint a local registrar of vital statistics for each registration district of the State. The term of office of local registrars shall be for four years, beginning with the first day of January, of the year nineteen hundred and thirteen, and their successors shall be appointed at least ten days before the expiration of their term of office: Provided, however, That all local registrars now serving under appointment of the Commissioner of Health shall continue to serve until the expiration of their term for which they have been appointed. Any local registrar, appointed by the said Commissioner of Health who fails or neglects to efficiently discharge the duties of his office or who fails to make prompt and complete returns of births and deaths as required hereby, shall be forthwith removed from his office by the said Commissioner of Health, and his successor appointed, in addition to any other penalties that may be imposed, under other sections of this act, for failure or neglect to perform his duty. Each local registrar appointed by the Commissioner of Health shall, immediately upon his acceptance of appointment as such, appoint a deputy whose duty it shall be to act in his stead in case of absence, illness or disability, and who shall accept such appointment in writing, and who shall be subject to all rules and regulations governing the actions of local registrars; and when it may appear necessary for the convenience of the people in any township, a local registrar is hereby authorized with the approval of the State Registrar, to appoint one or more suitable and proper persons to act as subregistrars who shall be authorized to receive certificates, and to issue burial or removal permits, in and for such portions of the township as may be designated; and each subregistrar shall note, over his signature, the date on which each certificate was filed, and forward all certificates to the registrar of the township within ten days, and in all cases, before the third day of the following month: Provided, That all subregistrars shall be subject to the supervision and control of the State Registrar, and may be by him removed for neglect or failure to perform their duties in accordance with the provisions of this act or the rules and regulations of the State Registrar, and they shall be liable to the same penalities for neglect of duties as the local registrar.

Sec. 4, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900.

201. Certificates in Case of Stillborn Children. Stillborn children, or those dead at birth, shall be registered as births, and also as deaths, and a certificate of both the birth and the date shall be filed with the local registrar in the usual form and manner; the certificate of birth to contain, in place of the name of the child, the word "stillborn". The medical certificate of the cause of death shall be signed by the attending physician, if any, and shall state the cause of death as "stillborn", with the cause of the stillbirth, if known, whether a premature birth, and if born prematurely, the period of uterogestation in months, if known, and a burial or removal permit in usual form shall be required. Midwives shall not sign certificates of death for stillborn children; but such cases and stillbirths occurring without attendance of either physician or midwife shall be treated as deaths without medical attendance, as provided for in section eight of this act.

Sec. 6, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900.

202. Registration of Births. All births that occur in the State shall be immediately registered in the districts in which they occur, as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 12, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900.

203. Filing of Birth Certificate with Local Registrar. It shall be the duty of the attending physician or midwife to file a certificate of birth, properly and completely filled out, giving all of the particulars required by this act, with the local registrar within ten days after the birth of the fact within ten days after the date of birth; and if there be no attending physician or midwife then it shall be the duty of the father or mother of the child, householder or owner of the premises, manager or superintendent of public or private institution in which the birth occurred, to notify the local registrar within ten days after the birth of the fact of such a birth having occurred. It shall then, in such case be the duty of the local registrar to secure the necessary information and signature to make a proper certificate of birth.

Sec. 13, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900.

204. Contents of Birth Certificate. The certificate of birth shall contain the following items:

(1) Place of birth, including State, county, township, or town, village, or city. If in a city, the ward, street, and house number; if in a hospital or other institution, the name of the same to be given, as well as the residence of the parents, and where the birth occurs in a township the post office address of the parents shall be given.

(2) Full name of child. If the child dies without a name before the certificate is filed, enter the words "died unnamed". If the living child has not been named at the date of filing the certificate of birth, the space of "full name of child" is to be left blank, to be filled out subsequently by a supplemental report, as hereinafter provided.
(3) Sex of child.
(4) Whether a twin, triplet, or other plural birth. A separate certificate shall be required for each child in a case certificate shall be required for each child in a case of of plural birth, giving number of child in order of birth.

This certificate shall be signed by the attending physician or midwife, with date of signature and address; if there is no physician or midwife in attendance, then the father or mother of the child, householder or owner of the premises, or manager or superintendent of public or private institution, or other competent person, whose duty it shall become to notify the local registrar of such a birth, as required by section thirteen of this act.
(20) Exact date of filing in office of local registrar, attested by his official signature, and registered number of birth as hereinafter provided.
All certificates, either of birth or death, shall be written legibly in unfading ink, and no certificate shall be held to be complete and correct that does not supply all of the items of information called for therein or satisfactorily account for their omission.

Sec. 2, Act of Apr. 20, 1921, P. L. 105, amending Sec. 14, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900.

205. Blanks for Reporting of Giving Name. When any certificate of birth of a living child is presented without the statement of the given name, then the local registrar shall make out and deliver to the parent of the child a special blank for the supplemental report of the given name of the child, which shall be filled out as directed and returned to the local registrar as soon as the child shall have been named.

Sec. 15, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900.

206. Physicians, Midwives and Undertakers to Register with Local Registrars. Every physician, midwife, undertaker shall, without delay, register his or her name, address, and occupation with the local registrar of the district in which he or she resides, or may hereafter establish a residence, and shall thereupon be supplied by the local registrar with a copy of this act, together with such rules and regulations as may be prepared by the State Registrar, relative to its enforcement. Within thirty days after the close of each calendar vear, each local registrar shall make a return to the State Registrar of all physicians and midwives who have been registered in his district during the whole or any part of the preceding calendar year: Provided, That no fee or other compensation shall be charged by local registrars to physicians, midwives, or undertakers, for registering their names under this section or making returns thereof to the State Registrar.

Sec. 16, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900.

207. Persons in Charge of Certain Institutions to Make Record Concerning Patients. All superintendents or managers, or other persons in charge of hospitals, almshouses, lying-in or other institutions, public or private, to which persons resort for treatment of disease, confinement, or are committed by process of law, are hereby required to make a record of all of the personal and statistical particulars relative to the inmates of their institutions at the date of approval of this act, that are required in the form of certificate provided for by this act, as directed by the State Registrar, and thereafter such record shall be by them made for all future inmates at the time of their admission. And in case of persons admitted or committed for meidcal treatment of disease, the physician in charge shall specify for entry in the record, the nature of the disease, and where, in his opinion, it was contracted. The personal particulars and information required by this section shall be obtained from the individual himself, if it is practicable to do so, and when they cannot be obtained they shall be secured in as complete a manner as possible from the relatives, friends, or other persons acquainted with the facts.

Sec. 17, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900.

208. State Registrar to Prepare Blanks and Forms, and Examine Returned Certificates. Permanent Records. The State Registrar shall prepare, print, and supply to all registrars, all blanks and forms used in registering, recording, and preserving the returns or in otherwise carrying out the purposes of this act; and shall prepare and issue detailed instructions as may be required to secure the uniform observance of its provisions and the maintenance of a perfect system of registration. And no other blanks shall be used than those supplied by the State Registrar. He shall carefully examine the certificates received monthly from the local registrars, and if any such are incomplete or unsatisfactory, he shall require such further information to be furnished as may be necessary to make the record complete and satisfactory; and all physicians, midwives, informants, or undertakers connected with any class, and all other persons having knowledge of the facts, are hereby required to furnish such information as they may possess regarding any birth or death, upon demand of the State Registrar in person, by mail, or through the local registrar. He shall further arrange, bind, and permanently preserve the certificates in a systematic manner, and shall prepare and maintain a comprehensive and continuous index of all births and deaths registered the cards to show the name of child or deceased, place and date of birth or death, number of certificate, and the volume in which it is contained. Within ten days after receipt of a certificate of the birth of a living child, he shall send to the parent of such child a notice of the registry of the child's birth. Such notice shall state the following facts, as contained in the birth certificate:
1. Name of child.
2. Place and date of birth.
3. Given name of father.
4. Given name of mother.
5. Permanent file number of certificate.
This notice may be accepted by school authorities as evidence of child's age for all purposes connected with employment or school attendance, and may contain such other matter as the State registrar deems desirable. He shall inform all registrars what diseases are to be considered as infections, contagious, or communicable, and dangerous to the public health, as provided by law, and by the regulations of the State Department of Health, in order that, when deaths occur from such diseases, proper precautions may be taken to prevent the spreading of dangerous diseases. It shall also be the duty of the State registrar to collect, preserve and tabulate records of all marriages performed within the State and to tabulate and compile statistics of morbidity reports received by the Department of Health, after such necessary methods and forms as shall be, from time to time, directed by the Commissioner of Health.

Sec. 1, Act of May 9, 1923, P. L. 131 amending Sec. 18, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900.

209. Duties of Local Registrars. It shall be the duty of the local registrar to supply blank forms of certificates to such persons as require them; and he shall carefully examine each certificate of birth or death, when presented for record, to see that it has been made out in accordance with the provisions of this act and the instructions of the State Registrar, and, if any certificates of death are incomplete or unsatisfactory, it shall be his duty to call attention to defects in the return and to withhold issuing the burial of removal permits until they are corrected. If the certificate of death is properly executed and complete, he shall then issue a burial or removal permit to the undertaker: Provided,

That in case the death occurs from some disease that is held by the State Department of Health to be infectious, contagious, or communicable and dangerous to the public health, no permit for the removal or other disposition of the body shall be granted by the registrar, except under such conditions as may be prescribed by the State Department of Health. If a certificate of birth is complete he shall immediately notify the informant and require him to supply the missing items, if they can be obtained. He shall then number consecutively the certificates of birth and of death in two separate series, beginning with "number one" for the first birth and the first death in each calendar year, and sign his name as registrar in attest of the date of filing in his office. He shall also make a complete and accurate copy of each birth and death certificate registered by him, upon a form identical with the original certificate, to be filed and permanently preserved in his office as the local record of such death, in such manner as directed by the State Registrar, and he shall, on the fifth day of each month, transmit to the State Registrar all original certificates of death registered by him during the preceding month; and he shall, on the tenth day of each month, transmit to the State Registrar all original certificates of birth registered by him during the preceding month; and if no deaths or births occur in any month, he shall, on the fifth and tenth days of the following month, report that fact to the State Registrar on a card provided for this purpose. For the proper conduct of health affairs within their respective districts, local health authorities shall have free access at all times to the records received and permanenty filed by local registrars.

Sec. 19, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900.

210. Fees of Local Registrars. Counties to Reimburse State. Each Registrar shall be entitled to be paid the sum of twenty-five cents for each birth or death certificate properly and completely made out and registered with him and correctly copied and duly returned by him to the State Regtrar, as required by this act: Provided, That in cities of the first and second class, the expenses of birth and death registration shall be paid from funds appropriated to the Department of Health, in such manner as other payments are made for general purposes; and, in case no births or deaths were registered during any month, the local registrar shall be entitled to be paid the sum of twenty-five cents for each report to that effect promptly made in accordance with this act. All amounts payable to registrars, except in cities of the first and second class, as provided in this section, shall be paid by the treasurer of the county in which the registration districts are located upon certification by the State Registrar, and the State Registrar shall annually certify to the treasurer of the several counties the number of births and deaths registered, with the names of the local registrars, and the amount due each at the rates fixed herein.

Sec. 3, Act of Apr. 20, 1921, P. L. 105, amending Sec. 20, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900.

211. Certified Copies of Record of Births, Deaths and Marriages. The state registrar shall, upon request, furnish any applicant a certified copy of the record of any birth, death, or marriage registered under provisions of this act, for the making and certification of which he shall be entitled to a fee of fifty cents to be paid by the applicant; and any such copy of the record of a birth, death, or marriage when properly certified by the State Registrar to be a true copy thereof, shall be primo facie evidence in all courts and places of the facts therein stated. For any such search of the files and records, when no certified copy is made, the State Registrar shall be entitled to a fee of fifty cents for each hour or fractional hour of time of search to be paid by the applicant. And the State Registrar shall keep a true and correct amount of all fees by him received under these provisions and turn the same over to the State Treasurer.

Sec. 21, Act of June 1915, P. L. 900.

212. Penalties. If any physician who, under the provisions of this act, is responsible for the medical certificate of death, shall neglect or refuse to make out and deliver to the undertaker, sexton, or other person in charge of the interment, removal or other disposition of the body, upon request, the said medical certificate of cause of death hereinbefore provided for, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than five dollars nor more than fifty dollars; and if any physician shall knowingly make a false certification of the cause of death in any case, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars.

And any physician or midwife in attendance upon a case of confinement, or any other person charged with responsibility for reporting births, in the order named in section thirteen of this act, who shall neglect or refuse to file a proper certificate of birth with the local registrar within the time required by this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than five dollars nor more than fifty dollars.

And if any undertaker, sexton, or other person acting as undertaker, shall inter, remove, or otherwise dispose of the body of any deceased person, without having received a burial or removal permit, as herein provided, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than twenty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars.

And any registrar, deputy registrar, or subregistrar who shall neglect or fail to enforce the provisions of this act, in his district, or shall neglect or refuse to perform any of the duties imposed upon him by this act, or by the instructions and directions of the State Registrar, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than one hundred dollars.

And any person who shall wilfully alter any certificate of birth or death, or the copy of any certificate of birth or death on file in the office of the local registrar, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding sixty days, or suffer both fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

And any other person or persons who shall violate any of the provisions of this act, or shall wilfully neglect or refuse to perform any duties imposed upon them by the provisions of this act, or shall furnish false information to a physician, undertaker, midwife, or informant, for the purposes of making incorrect certification of births or deaths, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof be fined not less than five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars.

And any transportation company or common carrier transporting or carrying, or accepting through its agents or employees for transportation or carriage, the body of any deceased person, without an accompanying permit issued in accordance with the provisions of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars: Provided, That in case the death occurred outside of the State, and the body is accompanied by a certificate of death, burial or removal, or transit permit issued in accordance with the law or board of health regulations in force where the death occured, such death certificate, burial or removal, or transit permit may be held to authorize the transportation or carriage of the body into or through the State.

Sec. 22, Act of June 7, 1915, P. L. 900.

213. Enforcement of Act. Local registrars are hereby charged with the strict and thorugh enforcement of the provisions of this act in their districts, under the supervision and direction of the State Registrar. And they shall make an immediate report to the State Registrar of any violations of this law coming to their notice by observation, or upon complaint of any person, or otherwise. The State Registrar is hereby charged with the thorough and efficient execution of the provisions of this act in every part of the State, and with supervisory power over local registrars, to the end that all of the requirements shall be uniformly complied with. He shall have authority to investigate cases of irregularity or violation of law, personally or by accredited repersentative, and all registrars shall aid him upon request in such investigations. When he shall deem it necessary the Commissioner of Health shall report cases of violation of any of the provisions of this act to the Department of Justice of the Com-

H. CHILD LABOR

1. General Child Labor Provisions.

(Note: For provisions relating to compulsory school attendance, see subdivision F, education. For Workmen's Compensation provision see supra Section 37.)

214. "Establishment" Defined. That wherever the term "establishment" is used in this Act, it shall mean any place within this Commonwealth where work is done for compensation of any kind, to whomever payable: Provided, That this act shall not apply to children employed on the farm, or in domestic service in private homes.

The term "person" when used in this act, shall be construed to include any individual, firm, partnership, unincorporated association, corporation, or municipality.

The term "week", when used in this act, shall mean any consecutive seven days.

The term "minor", when used in this act, shall mean any person under twenty-one years of age. Whenever the singular is used in this act the plural shall be included, and whenever the masculine gender is used the feminine and neuter shall be included.

Sec. 1, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

This Act of 1915 was held to be constitutional in Commonwealth v. Wormser, 260 Pa. 44.

215. Minors Under Fourteen Not to be Employed. No minor under fourteen years of age shall be employed or permitted to work in, about, or in connection with, any establishment or in any occupation.

Sec. 2, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

A minor under the age of 14 and over the age of 12 may sell and distribute newspapers, see infra Section 222.

216. School Attendance Required of Minors Between Fourteen and Sixteen Years of Age. It shall be unlawful for any person to employ any minor between fourteen and sixteen years of age, unless such minor shall, during the period of such employment, attend, for a period or periods, equivalent to not less than eight hours each week, a school approved by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction. The school aforesaid may be conducted in the establishment where said minor is employed, or in a public school building, or in such other place, either in the district in which said minor is employed or in any joint school authorized by section eighteen hundred and one (1801) of article eighteen (18) of an act, approved May the eighteenth, nineteen hundred and eleven (1911), entitled "An act to establish a public school system in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, together with the provisions by which it shall be administered, prescribing penalties for the violation thereof; providing revenue to establish and maintain the same, and the method of collecting such revenue; and repealing all laws, general, special or local, or any part thereof, that are or may be inconsistent therewith," as the board of school directors of the school district in which said minor is employed may designate: Provided, however, That such school shall be within reasonable access to said place of employment. Any school aforesaid shall be part of the public school system of the school district wherein said minor is employed, or if the school or district where said minor attends. The school hours shall not be on Saturday; nor before eight o'clock in the morning, nor after five o'clock in the afternoon, of any other day. Every person who shall employ any said minor shall notify the officer by whom the employment certificate, as hereinafter provided for the said minor, shall have been issued, within four days after said minor shall have entered his employment, of the name and location of the school at which said minor should be in attendance, and of the hours which said minor should attend said school during the continuance of said employment: Provided, That this section shall not be effective in any school district until there has been established within said school district in which said minor is employed, or within reasonable access to said place of employment in an adjoining district, such a school.

Sec. 3, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

217. Hours of Labor for Minors Under Sixteen. No minor under sixteen years of age shall be permitted to work, in, about, or in connection with any establishment, or in any occupation, for more than fifty-one hours in any one week, or more than nine hours in any one day, or before six o'clock in the morning, or after eight o'clock in the evening, of any day. In computing the maximum number of hours per day or per week permitted under this act, the hours spent in school by said minors shall be considered as part of the working day or working week.

Sec. 4, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

218. Prohibited Employment for Minors Under Sixteen. No minor under sixteen years of age shall be employed or permitted to work in operating or assisting in operating any of the following machines, which, for the purpose of this act, are considered dangerous: Paper-lace machines, job or cylinder printing-presses operated by power other than foot-power; stamping machines used in sheet metal and tinware or paper or leather manufacturing, or in washer and nut factories; metal or paper cutting machines; corrugating-rolls, such as are used in making corrugated paper, or in roofing or washboard factories; dough-brakes, or cracker machinery of any description; wire or iron straightening or darwing machinery; rolling mill machinery; power punches or shears; washing or grinding or mixing machinery; calender-rolls in paper and rubber manufacturing, or other heavy rolls driven by power; laundering machinery; upon or in connection with any dangerous electrical machinery or appliances. or shall any minor under sixteen years of age be employed or permitted to work, in any capacity, in adjusting or assisting in adjusting any belt to any machinery, or in proximity to any hazardous or unguarded belts, machinery, or gearing, while the same is in motion; nor in scaffolding; nor in heavy work in the building trades; nor in stripping, assorting, or manufacturing tobacco; nor in any tunnel; nor in a public bowling-alley; nor in a pool or billiard-room; nor in the manufacture of paints, colors, or white-lead; nor in any capacity in preparing compositions in which dangerous leads or acids are used; nor in the manufacture or use of dangerous or poisonous dyes; nor upon any railroad, steam, electric or otherwise; nor upon any boat engaged in the transportation of passengers or merchandise; nor in operating motor-vehicles of any description; nor in any anthracite or bituminous coal-mine, or in any other mine; nor about blast-furnaces; nor in or about any distellery, brewery, or any establishment where alcoholic liquors are manufactured or bottled.

Part of Sec. 5, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

219. Prohibited Employment of Minors Under Eighteen Years. No minor under eighteen years of age shall be employed or permitted to work in the operation or management of hoisting machines, in oiling or cleaning machinery, in motion; in the operation or use of any polishing or buffing-wheel; at switch-tending, at gate-tending, at track-repairing; as a brakeman, fireman, engineer, or motorman or conductor, upon a railroad or railway; as a pilot, fireman, or engineer upon any boat or vessel; in or about establishments wherein gunpowder, nitro-glycerine, dynamite, or other high or dangerous explosive, is manufactured or compounded; as a chauffeur of an automobile or an aeroplane.

In addition to the foregoing, it shall be unlawful for any minor under eighteen years of age to be employed or permitted to work in any other occupation dangerous to the life or limb, or injurious to the health or morals, of the said minor, as such occupations shall, from time to time, after public hearing thereon, be determined and declared by the Industrial Board of the Department of Labor and Industry: Provided, That if it should be hereafter held by the courts of this Commonwealth that the power herein sought to be granted to the said board is for any reason invalided, such holding shall not be taken in any case to affect or impair the remaining provisions of this section.

Part of Sec. 5, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

220. Prohibited Employment for Minors. No minor shall be employed or permitted to work in, or in connection with, any saloon or barroom where alcoholic liquors are sold.

Part of Sec. 5, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

221. Prohibited Time of Employment of Minors. No minor shall be permitted to work as messenger for a telephone, telegraph, or messenger company, in the distribution, collection, transmission, or delivery of goods or messages, before six o'clock in the morning or after eight o'clock in the evening of any day.

Sec. 6, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

222. Prohibited Employment for Minors Under Twelve Years, Under Fourteen Years. Time of Employment. No. male minor under twelve years of age, and no female minor, shall distribute, sell, expose, or offer for sale any newspaper, magazine, periodical, or other publication, or any article of merchandise of any sort, in any street or public place. No male minor under fourteen years of age, and no female minor, shall be suffered, employed, or permitted to work at any time as a scavenger, bootblack, or in any other trade or occupation performed in any street or public place. No male minor under sixteen years of age, and no female minor, shall engage in any occupation mentioned in this section before six o'clock in the morning, or after eight o'clock in the evening, of any day.

Sec. 7, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

223. Employment Certificates Required for Minors under Sixteen Years. Before any minor under sixteen years of age shall be employed, permitted, or suffered to work in, about, or in connection with, any establishment, or in any occupation, the person employing such minor shall procure and keep on file, and accessable to any attendance officer, deputy factory inspector, or other authorized inspector or officer charged with the enforcement of this act, an employment certificate as hereinafter provided, issued for said minor.

Sec. 8, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

224. Issue of Employment Certificates. Employment certificates shall be issued only by the following officials for children residing within their respective public school districts: In public school districts having a district superintendent or supervising principal, by such superintendent or supervising principal; in school districts having no superintendent or supervising principal, by the secretary of the board of school directors of that district: Provided, That any district superintendent, supervising principal, or secretary of the board of school directors, hereby authorized to issue such certificates, may authorize and deputize, in writing, any other school official to act in his stead for the purpose of issuing such certificates. All employment certificates shall be forwarded by mail, by the issuing officer, to the prospective employer of the minor for whom the employment certificate is issued.

Sec. 9, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

225. Application for Employment Certificates. Application for the employment certificate must be made, in person, by the parent guardian, or legal custodian of the minor for whom such employment certificate is required; or, if said minor have no parent, guardian, or legal custodian, then by the next friend, who must be over twenty-one years of age; and no employment certificate shall be issued until the said minor has personally appeared before, and been examined by, the officer issuing the certificate.

Sec. 10, Act of May 12, 1915, P. L. 286.

226. Kinds of Employment Certificates. Employment certificates shall be of two classes,—general employment certificates and vacation employment certificates. General employment certificates shall entitle the minor, fourteen to sixteen years of age, to work during the entire year. Vacation employment certificates shall entitle the minor, fourteen to sixteen year of age, to work on any day, except on such days as such minor is required to attend school, under the provisions of the laws now in force or hereafter enacted.

Sec. 11, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

227. Information to be Furnished before Issuance of General Employment Certificate. The official authorized to issue a general employment certificate shall not issue such certificate until he has received, examined, approved, and filed the following papers, namely:—

a. A statement signed by the prospective employer, or by some one duly authorized on his behalf, stating that he expects to give such minor present employment, and setting forth the character of the same, and the number of hours per day and per week which said minor will be employed:

b. A school record, as hereinafter provided;

c. A certificate of physicial fitness, as hereinafter provided;

d. Proof of age, as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 12, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

228. School Record to be Filled Out by Principal of School Last Attended. For the issuance of a general employment certificate, the school record required by this act shall be filled out and signed by the principal of the school which the minor has last attended, or by some one duly authorized by him, and shall be furnished to any minor who may be entitled thereto. It shall certify that the said minor has completed a course of study equivalent to six yearly grades of the public school, in the English language, spelling, reading, arithmetic, geography, and history of the United States. Such school record shall also give the full name, date of birth, and residence of minor, and the name and residence of the parent, guardian, or custodian, as shown on the records of the school.

Sec. 13, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

229. Certificate of Physical Fitness. The certificate of physical fitness required by this act shall be signed by a physician, approved by the board of school directors of the school district in which said minor resides, and shall state that the said minor has been thoroughly examined by the said physician at the time of the application for an employment certificate, and is physically qualified for the employment specified in the statement of the prospective employer. In any case where the said physician shall deem it advisable, he may issue a certificate of physical fitness for a limited time; at the expiration of which time the holder shall again appear, and submit to a new examination, before being permitted to continue at work.

Sec. 14, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

230. Evidence of Age. The evidence of age required by section twelve of this act shall consist one of the following proofs of age, which shall be required in the order herein designated:

a. A duly attested transcript of the birth certificate, filed according to law with a register of vital statistics, or other officer charged with the duty of recording birth; or,

b. A baptismal certificate or transcript of the record of baptism, duly certified, and showing the date of birth; or,

c. A passport showing the age of the immigrant; or,

d. In case none of the aforesaid proofs of age shall be obtainable, and only in such case, the issuing officer may accept, in lieu thereof, any other dicumentary record of age (other than a school record or an affidavit of age), or transcript thereof, duly certified, which shall appear to the satisfaction of the issuing officer to be good and sufficient evidence of age; or,

e. In case none of the aforesaid proofs of age shall be obtainable, and only in such cases, the issuing officer may accept, in lieu thereof, the signed statement of the physician, approved by the Board of School Directors, stating that, after examination it is the opinion of such physician that the minor has attained the age required by law for the occupation in which he expects to engage. Such statement shall be accompanied by an affidavit, signed by the minor's parent, guardian, or custodian, or, in case he shall have no parent, guardian, or custodian, by his next friend, certifying to the name, date and place of birth of the minor, and that the parent, guardian, custodian, or next friend, signing such statement, is unable to produce any of the proofs of age specified in the preceding subdivisions of this section.

Sec. 15, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

231. Information to be Furnished Before Issuance of Vacational Employment Certificate. The official authorized to issue a vacation employment certificate shall not issue such certificate until he shall have received and filed the following papers, duly executed, namely:

a. A statement signed by the prospective employer, or by someone duly authorized on his behalf, stating that he expects to give such minor present employment, and setting forth the character of the same and the number of hours per day and per week which said minor will be employed;

b. A certificate of physical fitness, as provided in section fourteen of this act;

c. Evidence of age, showing that the said minor is fourteen years of age or upwards, which evidence of age shall be of similar character to the evidence heretofore specified in section fifteen of this act.

Sec. 16, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

232. Employers to Acknowledge Receipt of Certificate. New Employment Certificates. It shall be the duty of every person who shall employ any minor under sixteen years of age to acknowledge in writing, to the official issuing the same, the receipt of the employment certificate of said minor, within three days after the beginning of such employment. On termination of the employment of a minor under sixteen years of age, the employment certificate issued for such minor shall be returned by mail, by the employer, to the official issuing the same, immediately upon demand of the minor for whom the certificate was issued, or, otherwise, within three days after termination of said employment. The official to whom said certificate is so returned shall file said certificate and preserve the same. Any minor whose employment certificate has been returned, as above provided, shall be entitled to a new employment certificate upon presentation of a statement from the prospective employer, as hereinabove provided, accompanied by a certificate of physical fitness, issued in a manner hereinabove provided, and based upon a re-examination of said minor, and certifying that the minor is physically able to undertake the work for which the new employment certificate is to be issued.

Sec. 17, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

233. Forms for Certificate to be Furnished by Department of Public Instruction. Contents. All employment certificates shall be issued on forms supplied by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and shall contain the name and address of the prospective employer, and the nature of the occupation in which said minor is expected to engage; and no certificate shall be valid excepting in the hands of the employer so named, and for the occupations so designated; and shall state the name, sex, date, and place of birth, place of residence, color of hair and eyes, and any distinguishing physical characteristics of the minor for whom it shall be issued. It shall certify that the minor named has personally appeared before the issuing officer, and has been examined; and that all the papers required by law have been duly examined, approved and filed; and that all the conditions requirements for issuing an employment certificate have been fulfilled. Every certificate shall be signed, in the presence of the issuing officer, by the minor for whom it shall be issued. The certificate shall bear a number, shall show the date of its issue, and shall be signed by the issuing officer. Vacation employment certificates, and shall be of a color different from the general employment certificates, and shall bear across their face the legend "Vacation Employment Certificate."

Sec. 18, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

234. Return of School Record Upon Refusal to Issue Certificate. Whenever a certificate shall be refused to any minor, the school record issued to such minor shall be forwarded, by the official refusing to issue the certificate, to the principal of the school which said minor shall attend, or to the compulsory attendance officer.

Sec. 19, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

235. Appointment of Attendance Officer by Department of Public Instruction Upon Failure of Local District to Enforce Act. Whenever the State Superintendent of Public Instruction cannot secure effective enforcement of the foregoing provisions of this act, in any school district, he is hereby authorized and required to report that fact to the State Board of Education. In such case the State Board of Education is authorized and required to secure such enforcement by appointing attendance officers in such districts. The salary and expenses of such attendance officers shall be a charge against said district where said attendance officers are actually employed, and shall be deducted from any State moneys apportioned to said district for school purposes.

Sec. 20, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

236. Copies of Act to be Posted Where Minors Under Sixteen are Employed. It shall be the duty of every person who shall employ any minor, under the age of sixteen years, to post and keep posted, in a conspicuous place in every establishment wherein said minor is enployed, permitted or suffered to work, a printed copy of the sections of this act relating to the hours of labor, and a list or lists of all minors employed under the age of sixteen years. Such copies of the sections of this act and blanks for compliance with the provisions shall be prepared by the Department of Labor and Industry, and be furnished by it on application of such employer. Every person employing minors under sixteen years of age shall furnish the employment certificates and lists, provided for in this act, for inspection, to attendance officers, factory inspectors, or other authorized inspectors or officers charged with the enforcement of this act.

Sec. 21, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

237. Evidence of Age of Minor to be Furnished Upon Demand of Officer Charged With Enforcement of Act. Whenever any minor shall be employed or permitted to work in any establishment or at any occupation, who, in the judgment of any officer charged with the enforcement of this act, is under the legal age for such work, or is working at a time forbidden by law for such minor; or whenever any minor shall be employed or permitted to work, in, or in connection with, any establishment, who, in the judgment of any officer charged with the enforcement of this act, is under sixteen years of age, and for whom the person employing or permitting such minor to work shall not have on file an employment certificate; such officer may demand from the person employing or permitting such minor to work that he shall either furnish to such officer, within ten days, evidence of age, as defined in section fifteen of this act, that such minor is in fact of legal age for the work in which he is engaged, or over, or sixteen years of age or over, as the case shall be, or shall cease to employ or permit such minor to work as aforesaid: Provided, That such person, by thus ceasing to employ or permit such minor to work, shall not be relieved from any of the fines or penalties provided in this act for the employment or work of a minor contrary to law. In case such person shall fail to furnish to said officer, within ten days after the making of such demand, the required evidence of age, and shall thereafter employ such minor or permit him to work as aforesaid, proof of the making of such demand and of failure to produce the evidence required shall be prima facie evidence of the illegal employment of such minor, in any prosecution brought therefor.

Sec. 22, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

238. Penalty. Any person, or any agent, or manager for any person, who shall violate any of the provisions of this act, or who shall compel or permit any minor to violate any of the provisions of this act, or who shall hinder or delay any officer in the performance of his duty in the enforcement of this act, shall, upon conviction thereof, be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than ten ($10.00) dollars nor more than two hundred ($200.00) dollars, or to undergo an imprisonment of not more than ten days, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 23, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

239. Enforcement of Act. Form of Prosecution. Payment of Fines. It shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Labor and Industry, the attendance officers of the various school districts, and the police of the various cities, boroughs and townships of this Commonwealth, to enforce the provisions of this act. Prosecutions for violations of this act may be instituted by any factory inspector, attendance officer, or police officer, upon oath or affirmation. All prosecutions for violations of this act shall be in the form of summary criminal proceedings, instituted before a magistrate, alderman, or justice of the peace within the school district wherein the offense was committed. Upon conviction, after a hearing, the sentences provided in this act shall be imposed. All fines collected under this act shall be paid into the State Treasury, for the use of the Commonwealth.

Sec. 24, Act of May 13, 1915, P. L. 286.

240. Employment of Minors on Lifts and in Manufacture of Phosphorous Regulated. By section 2 of the Act of April 29, 1909, P. L. 283, as amended by the Act of July 19, 1913, P. L. 862, minors under the age of 18 may not be employed in the running or management of elevators or lifts, or in or about blast furnaces, docks, wharves, or in quarries, or in the erection or repair of outside electric wires.

By section 3 of the Act of April 29, 1909, P. L. 283, minors over the age of 16 may be employed in the manufacture or preparation of phosphorous or phosphorous matches. Minors over 14 may be so employed under certain circumstances.

The Child Labor Act of 1915 speaks of "hoisting machinery" without mentioning elevators, and of "poisonous acids" without mentioning phosphorous. If these terms are held to include those used in the act of 1909, that act must be held to be supplied to that extent, as it undoubtedly is in other respects.

Compiler's Note.

241. Hours of Labor for Females. Overtime Allowance. (a) No female shall be employed or permitted to work in, or in connection with any establishment for more than six days in any one week or more than fifty-four hours in any one week, or more than ten hours in any one day: Provided, That during weeks in which a legal holiday occurs and is observed by an establishment, any female may be employed by such establishment during three days of such week for a longer period of time than is allowed by this act; and no female shall be permitted to work more than two hours overtime during any one of such three days, nor more than the maximum hours per week specified in this act.

The employment of such persons at any other time than as stated herein shall be deemed a violation of the provisions of this section, unless it appears that such employment was to make up time lost in the same week in consequence of the alteration, repairs or accidents to machinery or plant, upon which she was employed and dependent for employment; but no stopping of machinery for less than thirty consecutive minutes shall justify such overtime employment, nor shall such overtime employment be legal unless a written report of the same is sent to the Commissioner of Labor and Industry; but no female shall be permitted to work more than two hours overtime during any one day, nor more than the maximum number of hours per week specified in this act: Provided, That aforesaid restrictions as to hours shall not apply to females engaged in the canning of fruit and vegetable products: And provided further, That the one day of holiday in seven may be subdivided into two days of twelve hours each, for women employes in hotels, boarding-houses, and in charitable, educational and religious institutions, at the discretion of the Industrial Board of the Department of Labor and Industry: Provided, That if it should be hereafter held by the courts of this Commonwealth that the power herein sought to be granted to the said board is, for any reason, invalid, such holding shall not be taken in any case to effect or impair the remaining provisions of this section.

(b) Whenever any female shall be employed or permitted to work in, or in connection with, more than one establishment in any one week or in any one day, the aggregate number of hours during which she shall be employed or permitted to work in, or in connection with, such establishment shall not exceed the number of hours prescribed in this section for such females in any one week or any one day.

(c) The provisions of this section shall not apply to the work of nurses in hospitals.

Sec. 3, Act of July 25, 1913, P. L. 1024, as amended by Sec. 1, Act of June 1, 1915, P. L. 709.

242. Night-Work: Prohibition, Females Under Twenty-One. No females under twenty-one years shall be employed or permitted to work in, or in connection with, any establishment before the hour of six o'clock in the morning or after the hour of nine o'clock in the evening of any day. Provided, That this section shall not apply to females over the age of eighteen years employed as telephone operators.

Sec. 5, Act of July 25, 1913, P. L. 1024.

By the provisions of the Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 686, supplementing the Act of 1913, the Industrial Board is given power to permit variations from the provisions of the Act of 1913 under certain circumstances.

This section was held constitutional in Mecca Cooperative Co.; Appellant, 60 Super, Ct. 314.

243. Enforcement: Proof of Age of Certain Females. Whenever female shall be employed or permitted to work in, or in connection with, any establishment, before the hour of six o'clock in the morning or after the hour of nine o'clock in the evening of any day, who, in the judgment of the Commissioner of Labor and Industry or his deputy, is under twenty-one years of age, such officer may demand from any person employing or permitting any such female to work in, or in connection with, his establishment, that such person shall either furnish to such officer within ten days satisfactory evidence, such as shall be required by law for the issuing of employment certificates to minors, that such female is, in fact, twenty-one years of age or over, or shall cease to employ or permit such female to work in, or in connection with, such establishment, before or after the hours above named. In case such employer shall fail to furnish to said officer, within ten days after making such written demand, the required evidence of age, and shall thereafter continue to employ such female, or permit her to work in, or in connection with, such establishment, before or after the hours aforesaid, proof of the making of such demand and of failure to produce the evidence required shall be prima facia evidence of the illegal employment of such female, in any prosecution brought therefor.

Sec. 14, Act of July 25, 1913, P. L. 1024.

244. Hours of Labor for Minors in Bakeries, Etc. No minor male or female, (adult woman) shall be employed at labor or detained in any biscuit, bread, pie or cake bakery, pretzel or macaroni establishment, for a longer period than twelve hours in any one week.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 4, 1901, P. L. 68.

This section is supplied by the Child Labor Act of 1915, except as to minors over the age of 16 years.

This section is also repealed as to female minors by Sec. 3 of the Female Labor Act of 1913 supra section 195.

The section would therefore appear to be in force only as to male minors over the age of 16 years.

Sec. 10 of the Act of 1901 requires a copy thereof to be posted in each work room. Sec. 11 imposes a penalty for violations of its provisions.

245. Evening and Morning Hours of Labor for Minors in Bakeries. No person under the age of 18 years shall be employed in any bakehouse between the hours of nine o'clock at night and five o'clock in the morning. Excepted from this rule shall be the time on Sunday for setting the sponges for the night's work following.

Part of Sec. 1, Act of May 27, 1897, P. L. 112.

Sec. 11 of the act requires the posting of a copy of the act. Sec. 8 prescribes a penalty for violation of the act.

Sec. 4 of the Child Labor Act supra section 170, prohibits the employment of any minor under the age of 16 years after 8 o'clock in the evening and before 6 o'clock in the morning; and Sec. 5 of the Female Labor Act of July 25, 1913, P. L. 1024, prohibits the employment of any woman under the age of 21 years after 9 o'clock in the evening and before 6 o'clock in the morning. The section would therefore appear to be in force only as to make minors between the ages of 16 and 18.

246. Hours of Labor for Minors. No minor male or female, (or adult woman), shall be employed at labor or detained in any manufacturing establishment mercantile industry, laundry, workshop, renovating works or printing office, for a longer period than twelve hours in any day, nor for a longer period than sixty hours in any week.

Sec. 1, Act of May 29, P. L. 322.

This section is repealed by the Child Labor Act of 1915, except as to minors over the age of 16 years.

This section is also repealed as to female minors by Sec. 3 of the Female Labor Act of July 25, 1913, P. L. 1034, supra section 241.

The section would therefore appear to be in force only as to male minors over the age of 16 years.

Sec. 19 of the Act of 1901 requires a copy thereof to be posted in each work room.

247. Employment of Minors in Textile and Paper Manufactories, Etc., Prohibited. That from and after the passage of this act, no male or female operative under the age of twenty-one years shall, under any contract, be employed in cotton, woollen, silk, flax, bagging or paper manufactories in this Commonwealth, for a longer period than sixty hours in any one week, or more than an average of ten hours a day during the same period.

Sec. 1, Act of May 7, 1855, P. L. 472.

This section is repealed by the Child Labor Act of 1915, except as to minors over the age of 16 years, and as to female minors by section 3 of the Female Labor Act of 1913, supra section 241.

The section would therefore appear to be in force only as to male minors over the age of 16 years.

248. Penalty for Employment in Textile and Paper Manu- any parent or guardian consent to the employment of any parent or guardian consent to the employment of any male or female operative under the age of twenty-one years as aforesaid, contrary to the preceding section, and proof be made thereof, before any alderman or justice of the peace of the ward, borough, or district where such offense is committed, he, she or they so employing such operative, or consenting thereto as aforesaid, shall, for every such offense, forfeit any pay the penalty of not less than ten, nor more than fifteen dollars, to be recovered before any alderman or justice of the peace of the proper ward, borough or district, in the same manner as the like penalties are now recovered, to be applied to the use of the public schools of the proper district: Provided, That no penalty shall be recovered under this act, unless sued for within one month after the same shall have occurred; nor shall any person recover more than one penalty for the working of any factory for the same period of time.

Sec. 2, Act of May 7, 1855, P. L. 472.

249. Constables Authorized to Enforce Act. That all the ward, borough and township constables are hereby authorized and required, and it is hereby made their duty to attend to the strict observance of the two preceding sections of this act, when complaint shall have been properly made to them of a violation of the same.

Sec. 3, Act of May 7, 1855, P. L. 472.

250. Boys Under Twelve Years not to Enter Anthracite Mines. Boys under 12 years may not enter an anthracite coal mine under the provisions of Sec. 10, Act of Mar. 3, 1870, P. L. 3.

Compiler's Note.

251. Employment of Girls in Anthracite Mines Unlawful. By Sec. 1, Act of May 13, 1903, P. L. 359, amending Sec. 1, Art. 9, of the Act of June 2, 1891, P. L. 176, it is made unlawful to employ any girl at any anthracite coal mine or in or about the outside structures or workings of a colliery.

Compiler's Note.

252. Employment of Certain Boys, Women and Girls in Bituminous Coal Mines Unlawful. No boy under the age of 14 years, and no woman or girl of any age, shall be employed, permitted to suffered to work in or about any mine, and no boy under the age of 18 years shall he permitted to mine or load coal in any room, entry or other working place unless in company with an experienced person over 18 years of age.

Part of Sec. 1, Art. 18, Act of June 8, 1911, P. L. 756.

This section relates only to bituminous coal mines.

253. Certain Boys and Girls not to be Employed or Allowed in Anthracite Mines. Sec. 1, Art. 17, Act of May 15, 1893, P. L. 52, prohibits any boy under the age of 12 or any girl of any age from being employed or permitted to be in any anthracite coal mine for any purpose. By Sec. 5 of the Child Labor Law of 1915 minors under 16 are not permitted to be employed in coal mines.

Compiler's Note.

254. Lists of Minors Employed in Coal Mines. Sec. 3, Act of May 1, 1909, P. L. 375, as amended by Sec. 2, Act of June 15, 1911, P. L. 983, relating to the employment of minors in coal mines requires the keeping of duplicate copies of the lists of said minors so employed, the one to be kept on file in the office, and one to be posted in each department where minors are employed.

Compiler's Note.

255. Minors Under Sixteen Who Cannot Read or Write English Language. And after the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight, it shall be unlawful for any manufacturing establishment, mercantile industry, laundry, renovating works, printing office, mechanical or other industrial establishment to employ any minor under the age of sixteen years who cannot read and write in the English Language, unless he presents a certificate of having attended during a preceding year, an evening or day school for a period of sixteen weeks. Said certificate shall be signed by the teacher or teachers of the school or schools which said minor attended, and said register, affidavit and certificates shall be produced for inspection on demand by the inspector or any of the deputies appointed under this act.

Part of Sec. 2, Act of Apr. 29, 1897, P. L. 30, as amended by Sec. 1, Act of June 14, 1897, P. L. 148.

256. Children Required to Read and Write English. All persons authorized to administer oaths must examine all children as to their ability to read and write the English language. After a careful examination, if a child is found unable to read and write the English language, or has not attended school as required by law, or is under thirteen years of age, it will be unlawful to issue a certificate; and in no case shall the officer who executes certificates charge more than twenty-five cents for administering the oath and issuing the certificate.

Sec. 4, Act of May 29, 1901, P. L. 322.

Sec. 3 of this act provides for an affidavit of the age and date and place of birth of children between the ages of 13 and 16. This provision is supplied by the Child Labor Law of 1915. There is, however, no provision of the Child Labor Law requiring that such child shall be able to read and write the English language.

257. Penalty. Any person who violates any of the provisions of this act, or who suffers any child or female to be employed in violation of its provisions, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction shall be punished by fine of not more than five hundred dollars. In all such cases the hearing shall be conducted by the alderman or justice of the peace before whom information is lodged, and, after full hearing of parties in interest, the alderman or justice of the Peace shall impose the fine herein provided, which shall be final unless an appeal be taken to the court of quarter sessions within twenty days from the date of the imposition of the fine, as herein provided.

Sec. 21, Act of May 29, 1901, P. L. 322.

258. Posting of Notice in Establishments of Hours of Labor. Sec. 3, Act of Apr. 29, 1897, P. L. 30, requires an employer to post in each room where children are employed a printed notice stating the number of hours per day for each day of the week required of such children. Sec. 14 provides a fine not exceeding $500, for violation of the act. The balance of section 3 is supplied by the Female Labor Act of 1913 and the Child Labor Act of 1915.

Compiler's Note.

259. Employers of Children During Compulsory Term to Furnish Reports to School Authorities. Every person, association, or corporation in this Commonwealth accepting service from, or employing, a child or children, between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years, during the hours when the public schools are in session, shall, on or before the first day of September in each year, and quarterly thereafter, during the period of compulsory attendance, furnish to the superintendent of schools, supervising principal, or secretary of the board of school directors of the district in which such child or children reside, the name, age, place of residence, and name of parent or guardian, of every such child in his or its employ or service. Such report shall be made upon blanks to be furnished by the Superintendent of Public Instruction at the expense of the Commonwealth.

Sec. 1419, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

260. List of Children to be Posted at Place of Employment. Every person, firm, association, or corporation in this Commonwealth accepting service from, or employing, a child or children between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years, during the hours when the public schools are in session, and during the period of compulsory attendance in any school district, shall make a true and correct list of such children, giving their names, ages, places of residence, names of parents or guardians, the dates of and names of the persons issuing the employment certificates, and the time of beginning and ending of service with him or it, which list shall be clearly written or printed and kept publicly posted at the place of employment of such child, where the same may be inspected by any member of the board of school directors or the secretary thereof by the district superintendent, the supervising principal, or the attendance officer of any school district, at any time during the business hours.

Sec. 1420, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

261. Children Not to be Employed During Term of Compulsory School Attendance. No person in this Commonwealth, either for himself or for any firm, association, or corporation, shall, during the term of compulsory attendance as fixed by the board of school directors in any school district, and during the hours the public schools are in session, accept service from, engage, or emply any child or children between eight and fourteen years of age; nor shall he accept service from, engage, or employ any child or children between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years, unless such child shall first furnish and deliver to such employer an employment certificate issued according to law.

If the child leaves such employment, or is absent from such employment five days, the employer shall immediately, in writing, notify accordingly the school official who issued the certificate.

Sec. 1421, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, as amended by Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 23, 1915, P. L. 174.

262. Penalty for Illegal Employment of Children: Failure to Furnish Information of Post Lists. Any person or persons accepting service from, or engaging or employing, any child between eight and fourteen years of age during the term of compulsory attendance, and while the public schools are in session, or accepting service, from engaging, or employing any child during the same period of time, between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years, without being first furnished by such child with an employment certificate, or failing to furnish to the district superintendent of schools, supervising principal, attendance officer, or secretary of the board of school directors, the information required by this act concerning the children employed by him or them, or shall fail to post for inspection, at the place of employment of such children, the list of children engaged by him or them, as required by the provisions of this act, who shall fail to notify the proper school official as required by the last preceding section of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished for a first offense by a fine of not less than ten dollars ($10.00) or more than twenty-five ($25.00), or ten days' imprisonment in the county jail, or either or both, at the discretion of the court, and for a subsequent offense shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty dollars ($20.00) or more than fifty dollars ($50.00), or ninety days' imprisonment in the county jail, or either or both, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 23, 1915, P. L. 174, amending Sec. 1422, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

2. Vocational Training and Placement.

263. Cooperation Between Local Vocational and Placement Bureaus and the State Employment Bureau. In case bureaus for vocational training and placement, or other similar bureaus, are established by local school authorities, the director shall cooperate with such bureaus in dealing with the employment of children between the ages of fourteen and eighteen years, in such manner as may be advisable. The director shall use all reasonable means to promote the establishment of bureaus for vocational training and placement, in connection with vocational education by public school authorities throughout the State. Until bureaus for vocational training and placement, or other similar bureaus, have been established by local public school authorities, for the purposes of directing, advising and assisting children in the selection of suitable vocations, the director shall provide school principals and all public employment offices with special blank forms for the registration of all children having employment certificates, as required by law, and leaving school lawfully in search of employment. Each child applying for employment may register at a public or other approved school with the principal of such school; and the principals of public or other approved schools are heheby authorized and required to register such applications in the selection of a vocation, in such manner as may be necessary, and to transmit immediately to the superintendent of the district branch office all applications for employment registered. The superintendent of each public employment office shall cooperate with the school principals in his district in endeavoring to secure secure positions for children, guide and induce minors to enter promising vocations, and each principal shall acquaint the teachers and pupils of his school with the purpose and functions of the public employment office of placing juveniles.

Sec. 19, Act of June 4, 1915, P. L. 833.

3. Employment Agencies.

264. Employment Agencies not to Furnish Employment to Children in Violation of Law. No such licensed person shall furnish employment to any child, in violation of the laws regulating the labor of children or their compulsory attendance at school.

Part of Sec. 9, Act of Apr. 25, 1907, P. L. 106.

Sec. 1, Act of Sept. 29, 1770, 1 Sm. L. 309.

267. Indentures of Apprenticeship Not to be Void for Want of Certain Conditions. That no indenture of apprenticeship shall hereafter be cancelled, or deemed void, by reason of the want of any convenant, on the part of the master, to assume the guardianship of, or to school, or educate, the apprentice: Provided, If shall appear, on the fact of the indenture of apprenticeship, that said apprentice has arrived at the age of seventeen years, at, or before, the execution thereof: or in case said apprentice should not have reached said age, that satisfactory proof was given to the magistrate at the time of binding, that the apprentice has received such an education, in reading, writing and arithmetic, as to render further schooling necessary; nor shall such indenture be deemed void, by reason of any convenant, on the part of the master, to pay a certain sum, from time to time, to the father, mother, guardian, or next friend, of said apprentice, or to said apprentice alone, in case of the decease of the father, or mother, in lieu of the maintenance, clothing and medical expenses of said minor, or that the care, guardianship, or maintenance, of said minor, was committed to the father, mother, guardian, or next friend, or some near relation of said minor when not employed by his, or her, master, in and about his work: Provided, That this act shall apply to the city of Philadelphia and the county of Allegheny.

Sec. 1, Act of Mar. 17, 1865, P. L. 410.

268. Apprenticing of Poor Children by Poor Authorities. It shall be lawful for the overseers of every district, with the approbation and consent of two or more magistrates of the same county, to put out as apprentices all poor children whose parents are dead, or by the said magistrates found to be unable to maintain them, so as that the time or term of years of such apprenticeship, if a male do expire at or before the age of twenty-one years, and if a female, at or before the age of eighteen years.

Sec. 8, Act of June 13, 1836, P. L. 542.

269. Binding by Mother, Guardian or Next Friend. In all cases where, by any law of this Commonwealth, the guardian for the relief and employment of the poor of any city, district or township, are authorized to bind any orphan to any city, the said binding may be made by the mother, guardian, or next friend of the said orphan, and shall be of the same force and effect, and as binding upon the said orphan, as if the indenture were executed by the guardians of the poor.

Act of May 23, 1887, P. L. 168, No. 99.

270. Binding, and Terms of Apprenticeship. The justices of the orphans' court in the respective counties shall, by virtue of this act, have full power and authority * * * at the instance and request of the said executors, administrators, guardians or tutors, to order and direct the bidding or putting out of minors, apprentices to trades, husbandry or other employments as shall be thought fit.

Sec. 7, Act of Mar. 27, 1713, 1 Sm. L. 83.

271. Masters to be of Same Religious Faith. Provided always, That none of the said orphans' courts shall have any power to commit the tuition or guardianship of any orphans or minors, or bind them apprentices to any person or persons, whose religious persuasions shall be different from what the parents of such orphan or minor professed, at the time of their decease, or against the minor's own mind or inclination, so far as he or she has discretion or capacity to express or signify the same; or to persons that are not of good repute, so as others of good credit, and of the same persuasion, may or can be found.

Sec. 12, Act of Mar. 27, 1713, 1 Sm. L. 83.

272. Binding of Children to and by Charitable Institutions. All corporations, organized under any general or special law of this Commonwealth, for the purpose of providing homes, for friendless or destitute persons or children, shall be, and are hereby authorized to receive such children, upon indenture from the guardians, overseers or directors of the poor of any municipality; and also to bind out and provide suitable homes for all children committed to their charge, when maintenance is unprovided for by their parents or guardians.

Sec. 1, Act of May 25, 1878, P. L. 152.

273. Liability of Apprentices After Attaining Majority, for Absence From Service of Master. From and after the passing of this act if any apprentice shall absent himself or herself from the service of his or her master or mistress, before the time of his or her apprenticeship shall be expired without leave first obtained, every such apprentice, at any time after he or she arrives at the age of twenty-one years, shall be liable to, and the master or mistress, their heirs, executors or administrators, are hereby enabled to sustain all such actions and other remedies against him or her, as if the said apprentice has been of full age at the time executing his or her indenture of apprenticeship.

Sec. 2, Act of Apr. 11, 1799, 3 Sm. L. 385.

274. Assignment of Apprentices. When any master or mistress shall die before the term of apprenticeship shall be expired, the execution or administrators of such master or mistress, provided the term of the indenture extended to executors and administrators, shall and may have the right to assign over the remainder of the term of such apprenticeship to such suitable person, of the same trade or calling mentioned in the indenture, as shall be approved of by the court of quarter sessions of the county where the master or mistress lived, and the assignee to have the same right to the service of such apprentice, as the master or mistress had at the time of his or her death, and also, when any master or mistress shall assign over his or her apprentice to any person, of the same trade or calling mentioned in the indenture, the said assignment shall be legal, provided the terms of the indenture extended to assigns, and provided the apprentice, or his or her parent or parents, or guardians, shall give his, her or their consent to such assignment some justict of the county where the master or mistress shall live.

Sec. 2, Act of Apr. 11, 1799, 3 Sm. L. 385.

275. Remedies for Misconduct of Apprentices. If any master or mistress shall misuse, abuse, evilly treat, or shall not discharge his or her duty towards his or her apprentice, according to the convenants in the indentures between them made, or if the said apprentice shall abscond or absent him or herself from his or her master or mistress's service without leave, or shall not do and discharge his or her duty to his or her master or mistress, according to his or her convenants aforesaid, the said master or mistress, or apprentice, being aggrieved in the premises, shall or may apply to any one justice of the peace of any county or city where the said master or mistress shall reside, who after giving notice to such master or mistress, or apprentice, if he or she shall neglect or refuse to appear, shall thereupon issue his warrant for bringing him or her, the same master, mistress or apprentice before him, and take such order and direction between the said master or mistress, and apprentice, as the equity and justice of the case shall require; and if said justice shall not be able to settle and accommodate the dicerence and dispute between the said master or mistress, and apprentice, through a want of conformity in the master or mistress, then the said justice shall take a recognizance of the said master or mistress, and bind him or her over to appear and answer the complaint of his or her said apprentice, at the next county court of quarter sessions to be held for the said county or city, and take such order with respect to such apprentice, as to him shall seem just; and if through want of conformity in the said apprentice, he shall, if the master or mistress, or apprentice request it, take a recognizance of him, or her, with one sufficient surety, for his or her appearance at the said sessions, and to answer the complaint of his or her said master or mistress, or commit such apprentice, for want of such surety, to the common jail or workhouse of the said county or city respectively; and upon such appearance of the parties, the hearing of their respective proofs and allegations, the said court shall, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, if they see cause, to discharge the said apprentice of and from his or her apprenticeship, and of and from all and every the articles, convenants and agreements in his or her said indenture contained; the said indenture of his or her said apprenticeship, or any law or custom to the contrary notwithstanding; but in default shall be found in the said apprentice, then the said court is hereby authorized and empowered to cause, if they see sufficient occasion, such punishment, by imprisonment of the body and confinement at hard labor, to be inflicted on him or her, as to them in their discretion, they shall think his or her offense or offenses shall deserve.

Sec. 2, Act of Sept. 29, 1770, 1 Sm. L. 309.

276. Absconding Apprentices. If any apprentice of any of the arts, trades, mysteries, occupations or labor aforesaid, shall depart or abscond from his or her master or mistress's service, into any other county of this province, or into the city of Philadelphia, it shall and may be lawful to and for any justice of the peace of such county or city to issue his warrant to any constable within his county or city, to apprehend, take and have the body of such apprentice before him, or some other justice of his county; and upon such appearance, and hearing of the complaint and defense of the parties, if default be found in the said apprentice, then and in such case, the said justice of the peace before whom such warrant shall be returned, shall commit him or her to the common jail of the county where his or her said master or mistress shall reside, unless he or she will consent to return home, or shall find sufficient surety to appear at the next sessions, to be held for the county where such master or mistress, shall reside, and answer the complaint of the said master or mistress, and not to depart the same without leave.

Sec. 3, Act of Sept. 29, 1770, 1 Sm. L. 331.

277. Penalty for Harboring Absconding Apprentices. If any person or persons whatsoever shall harbor, conceal or entertain any such apprentice, knowing him to be such during the space of twenty-four hours, without his or her master or mistress's consent, and shall not give notice thereof to his or her said master or mistress, every such person or persons, offending in the premises, shall pay to the said master or mistress the sum of twenty shillings, for every day he shall so harbor, conceal or entertain such apprentice, to be recovered in a summary way, as debts under five pounds are by law directed to be recovered, if the same shall not exceed five pounds; if otherwise, to be recovered by action of debt, to be brought at the suit of the party injured, in any court of common pleas within this province.

282. Supervisory Power of Department of Welfare over Institutions. The Department of Welfare shall have supervision over:

(a) All State and semi-State institutions;

(b) All supervised institutions, as defined in this article;

(c) All children's institutions within this Commonwealth;

(d) All maternity homes and hospitals within this Commonwealth;

(e) The administration of any system provided by the Commonwealth for assistance to mothers;

(f) Any labor or system of labor carried on in the penal, correctional, or reformatory institutions of the State;

(g) Any system of reparation provided by the Commonwealth for relief from conditions caused by mine-caves, fire, flood, or other casualty, and constituting a menace to public safety and welfare.

Sec. 2003, Act of June 7, 1823, P. L. 498.

This section probably repeals Secs. 9 and 10, Act of May 21, 1921, P. L. 1144.

283. Supervision by Department of Welfare. The department shall have supervision over:

(a) All State institutions as hereinbefore defined.

(b) All charitable institutions within this Commonwealth which receive aid from the Commonwealth: Provided, however, That the department shall exercise no powers over such charitable institutions, other than those heretofore vested in the Board of Public Charities or the Committee on Lunacy, notwithstanding any language hereinafter used.

(c) All houses or places within the Commonwealth in which any person of unsound mind is detained, whenever the occupant or owner of the house or person having charge of the lunatic receives any compensation for the custody, control, or attendance, other than as an attendant or nurse, and also of all institutions, houses, or places, in which more than one such person is detained, with or without compensation paid for custody or attendance.

(d) All county prisons, and all hospitals, almshouses, or poorhouses, maintained by any county, city, borough, township, or poor district of this Commonwealth.

(e) All institutions, associations, and societies within this Commonwealth, into whose care the custody of delinquent, dependent or neglected children may be committed, and all houses and places maintained by such institutions, associations, or societies, in which such children may be kept or detained.

(f) Homes and premises of those in which is conducted the business of receiving, boarding, or keeping infant children under three years of age.

Sec. 9, Act of May 25, 1921, P. L. 1144.

This section of the act of 1921 is repealed in so far as inconsistent and in so far as it is supplied by the act of June 7, 1923, P. L. 498.

284. Additional Supervision by Department of Welfare. In addition to the foregoing, the department shall also exercise supervision over:

(a) The administration of any system provided by the Commonwealth for assistance to mothers.

(b) Any labor or system of labor carried on in the penal, correctional, or reformatory institutions of the State.

Sec. 10, Act of May 25, 1921, P. L. 1144.

This section is also probably repealed by Sec. 2003 of the Act of June 7, 1923, P. L. 498.

285. Visitations and Inspections. The Department of Welfare shall have the power, and its duty shall be:

(a) To make and enforce rules and regulations for the visitation, examination, and inspection of all supervised institutions;

(b) To visit and inspect, at least once in each year, all State, semi-State, and supervised institutions, to inquire and examine into their methods of instruction, discipline, detention, imprisonment, care, or treatment, the care, treatment, government, or management of their inmates or those committed thereto or being imprisoned, detained, treated, or residing therein, the official conduct of their inspectors, trustees, managers, directors, or other officer or officers charged with their management by law or otherwise or having the management, care, custody, or control thereof, the building, grounds, premises, and equipment thereof or connected therewith, and all and every matter and thing relating to their usefulness, administration, and management, and to the welfare of the inmates thereof or those committed thereto or being imprisoned, detained, treated, or residing therein.

For these purposes the Secretary of Welfare, or other officer, inspector, or agent of the department, shall have free and full access to the grounds, premises, and buildings of, and all the records, books, or papers of or relating to, any such State, semi-State, or supervised institution, and full opportunity to interrogate or interview any inmate thereof, or any person or persons committed to or being imprisoned, detained, treated, or residing therein, and all persons connected any such State, semi-State, or supervised institution as officers or charged with the management thereof by law or otherwise, or in any way having the care, custody, control, or management thereof, or connected therewith as employes, are hereby directed and required to give to the Secretary of Welfare or to such officer, inspector, or agent of the department, such means, facilities, and opportunity for such visitation examination, inquiry, and interrogation as is hereby provided and required, or as the Department by its duly ordained rules or regulations, may require;

(c) Whenever upon the visitation, examination, and inspection of any State, semi-State, or supervised institution, any condition is found to exist therein which, in the opinion of the department, is unlawful, unhygienic, or detrimental to the proper maintenance and discipline of such State, semi-State, or supervised institution, or to the proper maintenance, custody, and welfare of the inmates thereof, or of the persons committed thereto or being treated, detained, or residing therein, to direct the officer or officers charged by law with, or in any way having or exercising the control, government, or management of, such State, semi-State, or supervised institution, to correct the said objectionable condition in the manner and within the time specified by the Department.

This section substantially reenacts section 12 of the Act of May 25, 1921, P. L. 1144 and Sec. 5, of the Act of April 24, 1869, P. L. 90 as amended by sec. 2, Act of May 1, 1913, P. L. 149. See the two sections immediately following.

With regard to visitations Sec. 6, of the Act of Apr. 24, 1869, P. L. 90 conferred the following powers on the Commissioners of the Board of Public Charities:

"The said commissioners, by themselves or their general agent, are hereby authorized and required, at least once in each year to visit all the charitable and correctional institutions of the state receiving state aid, and ascertain whether the moneys appropriated for their aid are or have been economically and judiciously expended; Whether the laws in relation to them are fully complied with; whether all parts of the state are equally benefited by them, and the various other matters referred to in the fifth section of this act; and in their annual report to the Legislature, to embody the result of their investigations as they may deem proper."

286. Powers of Commissioners of Board of Public Charities. The said commissioners shall have full power, either by themselves or the general agents, at all times to look into and examine the condition of all charitable, reformatory, or correctional institutions within the State, financially and otherwise; to inquire and examine into their methods of instruction, the government and management of their inmates, the official conduct of trustees, directors, and other officers and employes of the same; the condition of the building, grounds, and other property connected therewith, and into all other matters pertaining to their usefulness and good management; and for these purposes they shall have free access to the grounds, buildings, and all books and papers relating to said institutions; and all persons now or hereafter connected with the same are hereby directed and required to give such information, and afford such facilities for inspection, as the said commissioners may require; and any neglect or refusal on the part of any officer or person connected with such institution to comply with any of the requirements of this act shall subject the offender to a penalty of one hundred dollars ($100.00), to be used for and collected by the general agent in the name of the board. The commissioners shall also have power to employ such experts, clerks, stenographers, and other employes of all kinds as the business of the Board of Public Charities and that of the Committee on Lunacy may require.

Whenever upon the examination of any jail, prison, penitentiary, or almshouse, any condition shall be found to exist therein which, in the opinion of said commissioners, is unlawful, or detrimental to the proper maintenance, descipline, and hygienic conditions of such institution, or to the proper care, maintenance, and custody of the inmates therein the said commissioners shall have power to make such recommendation to the warden, inspectors, trustees, sheriff, commissioners, overseers of the poor, or other officer or officers charged by law with the government of such institutions, as said commissioners may deem necessary and proper to correct the said objectionable condition; and in case of neglect, failure, or refusal of such officer or officers to comply with such recommendation, or in case of his or their failure to make such attempt to comply therewith as shall be satisfactory to the said commissioners, within ninety days from the date of service of said recommendation upon them, the said commissioners shall certify the facts in the case, together with their recommendation, to the district attorney of the proper county, whose duty it shall be thereupon to proceed, by indictment or otherwise, to remedy the said objectionable condition.

Sec. 5, Act of Apr. 24, 1869, P. L. 90, as amended by Sec. 2, Act of May 1, 1913, P. L. 149.

See note to preceding section.

The "commissioners" above referred to are the commissioners composing the former Board of Public Charities which are abolished when the Department of Welfare was erected. The department succeeded to all the powers of the Board of Public Charities.

287. Visitation and Inspection by Commissioner of Welfare. It shall be the duty of the commissioner to visit and inspect, or cause to be visited or inspected by an officer, inspector, or agent of the department at such time as the commissioner may determine, at least once in each year, all State institutions, charitable institutions, prisons, almshouses, poorhouses, hospitals, houses, places, institutions, associations, societies, and homes, under the supervision of the department as provided in section nine of this act, and to inquire and examine into their methods of instruction, discipline, detention, imprisonment, care, or treatment, government, or management of their inmates, or those committed thereto or being imprisoned, detained, treated, or residing therein, the official conduct of their inspectors, trustees, managers, directors, or other officer or officers, charged with their management by law or otherwise, or having the management, care, custody, or control thereof, the buildings, grounds, premises, and equipment thereof or connected therewith, and all and every matter and thing relating to their usefulness, administration, and management, and to the welfare of the inmates thereof or those committed thereto or being imprisoned, detained, treated, or residing therein; and for these purposes the commissioner or other officer, inspector, or agent of the department shall have free and full access to the grounds, premises and buildings of, and to all the records, books, or papers of or relating to, any such State institution, charitable institution, prison, almshouse, poorhouse, hospital, house, place, institution, association, society or home, and full opportunity to interrogate or interview any inmate thereof or any person or persons committed to or being imprisoned, detained, treated, or residing therein.

All persons connected with any such state institution, charitable institution, prison, almshouse, poorhouse, hospital, house, place, institution, association, society, or home, as officers, or charged with the management thereof by law or otherwise, or in any way having the care, custody, control or management thereof, or connected therewith as employes, are hereby directed and required to give the commissioner, or such officer, inspector, or agent of the department such means, facilities, and opportunity for such visitation, examination, inquiry, and interrogation as is hereby provided and required or as the department, by its duty ordained rules or regulations, may require.

Whenever, upon such visitation, examination, and inspection of any penitentiary, prison, reformatory, almshouse, or poorhouse, any condition is found to exist therein which, in the opinion of the commissioner, is unlawful or detrimental, to the proper maintenance, discipline, hygienic conditions of such penitentiary, prison reformatory, almshouse or poorhouse, or to the proper care, maintenance, custody and welfare of the inmates thereof of the persons committed thereto or being treated, detained, or residing therein, the commissioner shall direct the officer or officers charged by law with or in any way having or exercising the control, government, or management of such penitentiary, prison, reformatory, almshouse, or poorhouse, to correct the said objectionable condition in the manner and within the time specified by the commissioner. In case of the neglect, refusal, or failure of any such officer to comply with such directions, the commissioner shall certify the facts in the case to the district attorney of the proper county, whose duty it shall be thereupon to proceed by indictment or otherwise to remedy the said objectionable condition.

Sec. 12, Act of May 25, 1921, P. L. 1144.

288. Appointment of County Visitation Bodies. The Department of Welfare shall have the power to appoint a board of three or more members in any county of the Commonwealth to act, without compensation, as a board of visitors to visit any supervised institution in such county in aid of, and as the representative of, the department; such board to make a report of such visitation as the department may require. It shall be the duty of the officers or other persons having charge of such supervised institution to afford full facilities for such board to make an examination and inspection thereof..

This section reenacts clause 7, Sec. 13, Act of May 25, 1921, P. L. 1144.

289. Institutions Subject to Visitations. Reports by Institutions. The institutions, associations, and societies, into whose care the custody of delinquent, neglected or dependent children may be committed by order of the courts of this Commonwealth, shall be subject to the same visitation, inspections, and supervisions of the board of public charities as the public charitable institutions of this state; and the courts of common pleas of this Commonwealth may require such information and statistics from such institutions, associations or societies as said judges deem necessary in order to enable them to exercise a wise discretion in dealing with children. Every such institution, association, or society shall file with the board of public charities an annual written or printed report, which shall contain a statement of the number of children cared for during the year, the number received, the number placed in homes, the number died, the number returned to friends; also a financial statement, showing the receipts and disbursements of such institutions, associations, or societies. The statement of receipts shall indicate the amount received from public funds, the amount received from donations, and the amount received from other sources, specifying the several sources, The statement of disbursements shall show the amount expended for salaries and other expenses, specifying the same; the amount expended for land buildings and investments. The secretary of the board the public charities shall furnish to each of the said courts, of common pleas a list of such institutions, associations, and societies filing such annual reports, and no child shall be committed to the care of any such institution, association or society which shall not have filed a report, for the fiscal year last preceding, with the board of public charities.

Act of Mar. 5, 1903, P. L. 11, (No. 12).

The duties imposed by this act are transferred to the Department of Welfare, and the reports should be filed therewith under the Act of May 25, 1921, P. L. 1144.

290. Recommendations of Standards and Methods. The Department of Welfare shall have the power, and its duty shall be, from time to time, to recommend and bring to the attention of the officers or other persons having the management of the State, semi-State and supervised institutions, such standards and methods as may be helpful in the government and administration of such institutions, and for the betterment of the inmates therein.

Sec. 2007, Act of June 7, 1923, P. L. 498.

This section reenacts sec. 14, Act of May 25, 1921, P. L. 1144.

291. Child Welfare Work by Department of Welfare. The Department of Welfare shall have the power, and its duty shall be:

(a) To investigate the residence of a child placed in Pennsylvania from unlicensed sources in another State, to return such child to the State of its legal residence, and to enter into appropriate contracts with such State relative thereto;

(b) To exercise any other powers and perform any other duties with regard to the bringing into this Commonwealth dependent, delinquent or defective children, which may now or hereafter be authorized or imposed by law upon the department;

(c) To make and enforce such rules and regulations for the effective enforcement of this section as shall be deemed advisable and appropriate.

By the Act of May 25, 1921, P. L. 1144, Sec. 13 clause 4, the department of welfare was given power:

"(4) To enforce all or any laws regulating the importation into the State of Pennsylvania of dependent, delinquent, or defective children; and all reports required to be made under such laws to the Board of Public Charities shall be made to the department, which shall have full power and authority to make rules respecting the importation of such children not inconsistent with the provisions of the laws relative thereto." and by clause (1) (d) of said section the Department of Welfare was authorized to make and enforce rules and regulations.

"(d) To prescribe standards of equipment, management, and administration for the institutions, associations, and societies, into whose care the custody of delinquent, neglected, or dependent children may be committed and to insure proper care of the children committed to the custody of such institution, association, or society."

292. Reports from Officers Charged with Enforcement of Laws. The Department of Welfare shall have the power, and its duty shall be:

(b) To request from any or all magistrates, chiefs of police, sheriffs, district attorneys, courts, judges, probation officers, and all others concerned in the control, apprehension, trial, and punishment of criminals and delinquents in this Commonwealth, periodical reports as to the number and kind of crimes reported, the numbers, age, sex, color, nativity, and offenses of criminals and delinquents arrested, tried and otherwise disposed of, the sentences imposed and whether executed or suspended, the number placed on probation and the reasons therefor, the number of probation officers and the nature of the oversight exercised over those placed on probation, and, for the purpose of verifying the reports so made, the department shall have the power to make such further inquiry or investigation as may seem to it necessary; and it shall be the duty of all such magistrates and other officers to make such reports at such time or times and to furnish such facilities for investigation and such cooperation as the department may require.

Sec. 2011, Act of June 7, 1923, P. L. 498.

293. Prison Labor. The Department of Welfare shall have the power, and its duty shall be:

(a) To establish, maintain, and carry on industries in the Eastern Penitentiary, the Western Penitentiary, the Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory at Huntingdon, and such other correctional institutions of this Commonwealth as it may deem proper, in which industries all persons sentenced to the Eastern or Western Penitentiary, or to the Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory at Huntingdon, or to such other correctional institution of the Commonwealth, who are physically capable of such labor, may be employed at labor for not to exceed eight hours each day other than Sundays and public holidays. Such labor shall be for the purpose of the manufacture of supplies for said institution or for the Commonwealth, or for any county, city, borough or township thereof, or any State institution, or any educational or charitable institution receiving aid from the Commonwealth, or for the preparation and manufacture of building material for the construction or repair of any State institution or in the work of such construction or repair, or for the planting of seed trees or the performance of other work in State forests, or for the purpose of industrial training or instruction, or partly for one and partly for the other of such purposes, or in the manufacture and production of crushed stone, brick, tile, and culvert pipe or other material suitable for draining roads of the State or in preparation of road building and ballasting material;

(b) To determine the amount, kind, and character of the machinery to be erected in each of the said penitentiaries, reformatory, or other correctional institutions of the Commonwealth, and the industries to be carried on therein, having due regard to the location and convenience thereof with respect to other institutions to be supplied, to the machinery therein, and the number and character of inmates;

(c) To arrange for and make sale of the products produced in the said industries carried on in the said penitentiaries, reformatory, or other correctional institutions to the Commonwealth, or to any county, city, borough, or township thereof, or to any State institution, or to any educational or charitable institution receiving aid from the Commonwealth;

(d) To maintain a fund, known as the manufacturing fund, out of which the machinery, equipment, and material required or used in the carrying on of the industries in the said penitentiaries, reformatory, or other institutions, under the provisions thereof, shall be purchased, and into which all the receipts from the sale, as aforesaid, of the products of such industries shall be paid, and from which fund shall be paid all salaries of superintendents, managers, salesmen, clerks, and others employed in the management of such industries, and the wages as hereinafter provided, for the labor of the inmates of said penitentiaries, reformatory, or other institutions in such industries. The department shall have the custody of the said fund, and make or direct all disbursements therefrom;

(e) To require that an account shall be kept by the proper officers of the said Eastern Penitentiary, the Western Penitentiary, the Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory at Huntingdon, or other correctional institution, of the labor performed by the inmates of such penitentiary, reformatory, or other institution, in the industries carried on therein under the provisions hereof. In such account each inmate shall be credited with wages for the time he is actually engaged in work, the rate of such wage, and the amount credited to each, to be regulated at the discretion of the department or such persons as it may designate. In no case shall the amount be less than ten cents for each day of labor actually performed. The rate of compensation shall be based both upon the pecuniary value of the work performed and also the willingness, industry, and good conduct of the inmate;

(f) To allow three-fourths of the amount so credited as aforesaid, to an inmate of such penitentiary, reformatory, or other institution, or the entire amount if the inmate so wishes, to constitute a fund for the relief of any person or persons dependent upon such inmate, and to be paid, upon the order of the board of trustees of the penitentiary, reformatory, or other institution in which the inmate is a prisoner, to the person or persons establishing such dependency to the satisfaction of such board at such time or times as said board may order.

All sums credited to any inmate and not paid to a dependent or dependents shall be paid to the inmate on his discharge from the penitentiary, reformatory, or other institution in which he was a prisoner; Provided, however, That subject to the rules and regulations of the board of trustees of the penitentiary, reformatory, or other institution in which such inmate is a prisoner, the whole or any part of said sum may be paid to him during his imprisonment for his present needs, such rules and regulations to be subject to the approval of the department;

(g) To have and exercise supervision over the labor employed in the aforesaid industries; and to make rules and regulations for carrying on such industries;

(h) To make a full quarterly report to the Auditor General of the products, sales, receipts, and disbursements of the industries established under the provisions hereof.

Sec. 2012, Act of June 7, 1923, P. L. 498, which supplies and repeals Sec. 21, Act of May 25, 1921, P. L. 1144.

294. Reports by Institutions to Department of Welfare. All reports or notices whatsoever, heretofore required to be given or made to the Board of Public Charities or to the officers thereof, or to the Committee on Lunacy, abolished by this act, shall hereafter be given or made to the department, including all statements to be made by the inspectors, sheriffs, or other persons having charge of any penitentiary or jail.

The officer or officers, person or persons, having the management or custody of any institution, house, place, prison, almshouse, poorhouse, hospital, association, or society, under the supervision of the department as provided in section nine of this act, shall keep such records and make such reports relating or pertaining to such institution, house, place, prison, almshouse, poorhouse, association or society, and to the care and treatment of the inmates thereof or the persons committed thereto or being imprisoned, detained, treated or cared for therein, as may be prescribed and required by the rules and regulations of the department.

The commissioner shall furnish to the several courts of common pleas of the Commonwealth a list of institutions, associations and societies, in whose care the custody of delinquent, neglected, or dependent children may be committed, which filed the required reports.

Sec. 44, Act of May 25, 1921, P. L. 1144.

(J) DEPENDENT, NEGLECTED AND DELINQUENT CHILDREN.

1. Importation of Dependent, Delinquent and Defective Children.

295. Conditions for Importation. That it shall be unlawful for any person, corporation, association or institution to bring or send, or cause to be brought or sent, into the State of Pennsylvania, any dependent or delinquent or defective child for the purpose of placing such child in any home in Pennsylvania or procuring the placing of such child in any home in Pennsylvania, by indenture, adoption, or otherwise, or to abandon such child after being brought or sent into the State of Pennsylvania, without first obtaining the written consent of the Board of Public Charities of Pennsylvania and conforming to this act and to such rules and regulations of such board consistent herewith as such board may from time to time prescribe. Authority is hereby given to such board to make such rules and regulations as it shall deem best to carry out the provisions of this act.

Sec. 1, Act of July 11, 1917, P. L. 769.
The functions of the Board of Public Charities were transferred to the Department of Welfare by the Act of May 25, 1921, P. L. 1144.

296. Bond to be Given Conditioned upon Not Bringing Incorrigible or Unsound Child Into State. Such person, corporation, association or institution, before bringing or sending, or causing to be brought or sent, any such child into this State, shall first give an indemnity bond in favor of the State of Pennsylvania, in the penal sum of one thousand dollars, to be approved by said Board of Public Charities, conditioned as follows: That they will not send or bring, or cause to be brought or sent, into this State any child that is incorrigible or one that is of unsound mind or body; that they will at once, upon the placement of such child, report to the Board of Public Charities its name and age, and the name and residence of the person with whom it is placed; that, if any such child shall, before it reaches the age of twenty-one years, become a public charge, they will, within thirty days after written notice shall have been given them of such fact by the Board of Public Charities, remove such child from the State; and if any such dependent child shall be convicted of crime or misdemeanor and imprisoned within three years from the time of its arrival within the State, such person, corporation, association, or institution will remove from the State such child immediately upon its being released from such imprisonment; and upon failure after thirty days notice and demand to remove any such child who shall have either become a public charge as aforesaid or who shall have been convicted as aforementioned, in either event, such person, corporation, association, or institution shall at once and thereby forfeit the sum of one thousand dollars as a penalty therefor, to be recovered upon such bond by a suit in the name of the State of Pennsylvania; that they will place or cause to be placed each of such dependent children under written contract which will secure to such child a proper home and will make the person so receiving such child responsible for its proper care, education, and training; that they will properly supervise the care and training of each of such children and that each of such children shall be visited, at least twice a year, by a responsible agent of the person, corporation, association or institution so placing or causing to be placed such child as herein provided; that they will make to the said Board of Public Charities such reports of their work as said board from time to time may require.

Sec. 2, Act of July 11, 1917, P. L. 769, as amended by Sec. 1, Act of July 17, 1919, P. L. 1027.

297. Supervision of Importation of Children. The Board of Public Charities shall have general supervision and management of all matters contained in this act; and may make such other and further rules and regulations, not inconsistent herewith, as it may deem necessary for the proper placing out, indenture, adoption, removal and supervision of such children, and for the rejection of incorrigible or unsound children, and for the removal of children convicted of crimes or misdemeanors, or who may become public charges.

Sec. 3, Act of July 11, 1917, P. L. 769.

298. Penalty. Any person, corporation, association, or institution, or any officer or agent thereof, herein described, who shall violate any of the provisions of this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

Sec. 4, Act of July 11, 1917, P. L. 769.

299. Application of Act Regulating the Importation of Children. That the provisions of this act shall not apply to a relative going to any other State and brining a child into this State for the purpose of giving it a home in his own family, nor to the placing of a child in any institution in this State; provided it is not removed therefrom and placed out in this State, except in accordance with the provisions of this act.

Sec. 5, Act of July 11, 1917, P. L. 769.

300. Supervision of Importation of Children into State by Department of Welfare. The Department of Welfare shall have the power, and its duty shall be:

(a) To investigate the residence of a child placed in Pennsylvania from unlicensed source in another State, to return such child to the State of its legal residence, and to enter into appropriate contracts with such State relative thereto;

(b) To exercise any other powers and perform any other duties with regard to the bringing into this Commonwealth dependent, delinquent or defective children, which may now or hereafter be authorized or imposed by law upon the department;

(c) To make and enforce such rules and regulations for the effective enforcement of this section as shall be deemed advisable and appropriate.

By the Act of May 25, 1921, P. L. 1144, Sec. 13 Clause 4, the Department of Welfare was given power:
"(4) To enforce all or any laws regulating the importation into the State of dependent, delinquent, or defective children; and all reports required to be made under such laws to the Board of Public Charities shall be made to the Department which shall have full power and authority to make rules respecting the importation of such children, not inconsistent with the provisions of the laws relative thereto." and by clause (1) (a) of said section the Department of Welfare authorized to make and enforce rules and regulations.
"(d) To prescribe standards of equipment, management, and administration for the institution, associations, and societies, into whose care the custody of delinquent, neglected or dependent children may be committed, and to insure proper care of the children committed to the custody of such institution, association, or society".

2. Adult Responsibility for Delinquency.

301. Unlawful to Contribute to the Delinquency of any Minor. That all persons who contribute to the delinquency of any minor to whom the jurisdiction of any juvenile court within this Commonwealth has attached, or shall hereafter attach, or who knowingly assist or encourage such minor in violating his or her parole or any order of the said court, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not more than five hundred dollars, or to undergo imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year, or both at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 1, Act of May 6, 1909, P. L. 434.

302. Presumption of Delinquent's Minority. In trials or hearing upon charges of violating the provisions of this act, knowledge of the delinquent's minority, and of the said court's orders and decrees concerning such minor, shall be presumed in the absence of satisfactory proof of the contrary.

Sec. 2, Act of May 6, 1909, P. L. 434.

3. Baby Farming.

303. Keeping of Children Under Three Years of Age For Hire Without License Prohibited. Any person, other than an institution duly incorporated for the purpose, who shall engage in the business of receiving, boarding or keeping infant children, under the age of three years for hire or reward, who shall receive or take for such purpose more than two such children without legal commitment, or without having first obtained a license in writing so to do from the mayor of the town or a justice of the peace or magistrate of the locality wherein such child is to be received, boarded or kept, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars.

Sec. 2, Act of May 28, 1885, P. L. 27.

304. Issuing of Licnses For Keeping of Children For Hire. It shall and may be lawful for the mayor of any city or town, or any justice of the peace or magistrate of the locality, within which any child is to be received, boarded or kept as specified in section two, at his discretion, to issue a license to any person applying therefor for the purposes specified in section two of this act, upon the payment of a fee of one dollare for the use of the county, which license shall be revocable at all times by the court of quarter sessions or any judge therefor upon cause shown. It shall be lawful for any member or officer of the State Board of Charities, or the board of health of the locality wherein such license is issued, or any duly authorized officer of any incorporated society for the protection of children from cruelty, at all reasonable times, to enter and inspect the premises wherein any such children are boarded, received or kept.

Sec. 3, Act of May 28, 1885, P. L. 27.

305. Keeping of Infant Children For Hire in First Class Cities Prohibited. That it is hereby unlawful for any person or persons in any city of the first class, other than institutions duly incorporated for the purpose, to engage in the business of receiving, boarding or keeping infant children under the age of three years, for hire or reward, or to receive or take for such purpose more than two such children unaccompanied by an adult caretaker or caretakers, without legal commitment, unless he or she shall have first obtained a written or printed license so to do from the Director of the Department of Public Health and Charities of such cities, or to engage or continue in such business, or receive, take, or retain more than two such children, after the revocation of such license.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 27, 1909, P. L. 211.

306. Licensing of Infant Boarding Houses in First Class Cities. It shall and may be lawful for the Director of the Department of Public Health and Charities in such cities, at his discretion, to issue a license to any person applying therefor for the purpose specified in section one of this act, upon the payment into the city treasury by such person of a fee of one dollar, which license shall be revocable at all times by the court of quarter sessions of the county in which any such city shall be situated, or any judge thereof, upon cause shown. Such license shall be granted upon written application, to be made therefor at least ten (10) days before the first day of September in the year one thousand nine rundred and nine, and annually thereafter. Such applications shall state the name of the person or persons to whom the license is desired to be issued, the place in which it is proposed that the said business shall be carried on, and such other matters as may be prescribed by the Director of said Department. Such license when issued shall be effective for a period of one year from the first day of September, and may be renewed annually, and it shall authorize the person or persons therein to carry on the said business, only at the location stated in said application: Provided, That the Director of said Department may provide for the issuing of original licenses, for a part of any year, to expire on the thirty-first day of August next following, or for the transfer thereof to another place or places.

Sec. 2, Act of Apr. 27, 1909, P. L. 211.

307. Inspection of Infant Boarding Houses in First Class Cities. It shall be lawful for any member or officer of the State Board of Charities or of the Department of Public Health and Charities in such cities, or of the bureau of such department having charge of the health affairs of such cities, or any duly authorized officer of any incorporated society for the protection of children from cruelty, at all reasonable times, to enter and inspect the premises wherein any such children are boarded, received or kept.

Sec. 3, Act of Apr. 27, 1909, P. L. 211.

308. Rules and Regulations for Conducting Infant Boarding Houses in First Class Cities. The Director of the Department of Public Health and Charities in such cities be and he is hereby authorized, upon the recommendation of the chief of the bureau in charge of the health affairs therein, to make and adopt rules and regulations, not inconsistent with this act, with respect to the application for and the issuance, renewal, exhibition, and registration of such licenses; for the conduct of the business of receiving, boarding, or keeping infant children under the age of three years, as hereinabove provided for; and for the inspection of the premises in which such business shall be conducted, by the officers or agents of such department or bureau, at all times.

Sec. 4, Act of Apr. 27, 1909, P. L. 211.

309. Penalties. Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this act, or of the rules or regulations which may be adopted in pursuance thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one hundred ($100) dollars.

Sec. 5, Act of Apr. 27, 1909, P. L. 211.

310. Keeping of Infant Children For Hire in Third Class Cities Prohibited. It is hereby made unlawful for any person or persons in any city of the third class, other than institutions duly incorporated for the purpose, to engage in the business of receiving, boarding, or keeping infant children, under the age of three years, for hire, reward, or otherwise, or to receive or take for such purpose more than two such children unaccompanied by an adult caretaker or caretakers, without legal commitment, unless he or she shall have first obtained a license so to do from the mayor of each respective city; or to engage or continue in such business, or receive, take, or retain more than two children after the revocation of such license.

Sec. 1, Act of June 9, 1911, P. L. 854.

311. Issuing of Licenses in Third Class Cities. The mayor of each of the said cities shall grant said license upon such terms, and under such rules, regulations, and penalties as shall be prescribed by general ordinance.

Sec. 2, Act of June 9, 1911, P. L. 854.

4. State, County and Municipal Poor Relief.

312. Settlement of Children in General. That a settlement may be gained in any poor district by any person, married or single, who bona fide comes to inhabit therein and continues to reside there for one year. Persons born in a place, whether legitimate or illegitimate, shall be deemed to be settled there unless the parent having their custody be settled elsewhere; and all children shall follow the settlement of the parent or parents, stepfather or stepmother, having their custody, until the age of sixteen years.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 6, 1905, P. L. 112.

313. Illegitimate Children to Take Settlement of Mother. Every illegitimate child shall be deemed to be settled in the place where the mother was legally settled at the time of the birth of such child.

Sec. 11, Act of June 13, 1836, P. L. 539.

314. Commitment of Dependent Children to Custody of the Guardians of the Poor. Whenever the parents or proper guardian of any infant unable to support itself, have been convicted of any of the offenses enumerated in this act, or are dead or cannot be found, and there is no other person legally responsible for the maintenance and support of such child, willing to assume such support, or to be found within the county, any magistrate or court of record of the county in which such child may be found, may commit such child to the care and custody of the guardians of the poor of the said county, but nothing herein contained shall exempt any person from the duty of maintaining and supporting such child as now imposed by law.

Sec. 12, Act of June 11, 1879, P. L. 142, No. 151.

For the offenses referred to in this section, see infra Sec. 620.

315. Certain Children Not to be Placed in Poorhouses. It shall be unlawful for the overseers or guardians or directors of the poor, in the several counties, cities, boroughs, and townships of this Commonwealth, to receive into, or retain in, any almshouse or poorhouse, any child between two and sixteen years of age, for a longer period than sixty days, unless such child shall be an unteachable idiot, an epileptic, or a paralytic, or otherwise so disabled or deformed as to render it incapable of labor or service.

Sec. 2, Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 1030.

316. Poor Authorities to Place Certain Children in Homes or Educational Institutions. Visitations. It shall be the duty of said overseers, guardians, directors of the poor, or other persons having charge of the poor, to place all dependent children who are in or committed to their charge, and who are over two years of age (with the exceptions named in the second section of this act), in some respectable family in this State or in some educational institution or home for children; and one of said officers shall visit such children, in person or by agent, not less than once every six months, and make all needful inquiries as to their treatment and welfare, and shall report thereon to the board of overseers or other officers charged with the care of such children.

Whenever the parents of any such children between the ages of two and sixteen years are unable to give them proper personal care and attention, but are willing and able to pay for such cares, attention, and maintenance, the county commissioners of the respective counties may enter into an agreement with the parent or parents of such child or children for their care and maintenance in such county industrial home at the expense of such parent or parents.

Sec. 3, Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 1030.

317. Validation of Previous Acts and Contracts. All acts and contracts heretofore performed and executed, by or on behalf of any county by its county commissioners, by virtue or authority of the act, entitled "An act to prohibit the receiving and detaining of children in almshouses and poorhouses, and to provide for the care and education of such children," approved the thirteenth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three (Pamphlet Laws, one hundred and eleven) are hereby declared to be as valid and effectual in law as if performed and executed under and by virtue of this act after the date of its passage.

Sec. 4, Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 1030.

318. Binding of Orphan to City. In all cases where, by any law of this Commonwealth, the guardian for the relief and employment of the poor of any city, the said binding may be made by the mother, guardian or next friend of the said orphan, and shall be of the same force and effect, and as binding upon the said orphan, as if the indenture were executed by the guardians of the poor.

Act of May 23, 1887, P. L. 168, No. 99.

For provisions relating to apprenticing in general see supra sections 266-279.

319. Children Unable to Attend School for Lack of Clothing to be Reported to Proper Poor Authorities. Whenever the board of school directors, or the attendance officer, superintendent, supervising principal, or secretary of any board of school directors, in this Commonwealth ascertains that any child between eight and sixteen years of age, who is by the provisions of this act required to attend the public schools in the district over which such board of school directors has control, is unable to do so, on account of lack of necessary clothing or food, such case shall be promptly reported to any suitable relief agency operating in the school district, or, if there be no such suitable relief agency to which the case can be referred, it shall be reported to the proper directors or overseers of the poor for investigation and relief.

Sec. 1424, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

5. Mothers' Assistance.

320. Appointment of Trustees. Terms. In each county of the Commonwealth which by the action of its county commissioners accepts the provisions of this act, the Governor shall appoint a board of trustees, composed of seven women, residents of the county, to be called the Board of Trustees of the Mother's Assistance Fund.

Except as herein otherwise provided, such trustees shall hold office for a term of six years and until their successors are duly appointed and qualified.

Whenever any county shall hereafter accept the provisions of this act, the first board of trustees shall be appointed as follows: two for two years each, two for four years each, and three for six years each, from the first day of June, next succeeding.

In all counties which have heretofore accepted the provisions of this act, the board of trustees now in office shall continue in office as heretofore unless removed by the Governor, but the Governor shall, before the first day of June, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three, designate two of said trustees to hold office for two years each, two for four years each, and three for six years each, and, where such board has less than seven trustees, the Governor shall appoint additional trustees so that the total number may be seven, and he shall accordingly fix their terms.

If the terms of trustees shall expire, the Governor shall appoint successors for terms of six years each.

Vacancies, other than those due to the expiration of a term, shall be filled by appointment by the Governor for the unexpired term.

All counties which have heretofore availed themselves of the provisions of the acts repealed by this act shall be deemed to have accepted the provisions of this act, and shall be entitled to the benefits thereof.

Sec. 1, Act of May 22, 1923, P. L. 307, amending Sec. 1, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

321. State Supervisors and Assistants. The Governor shall appoint a State Supervisor, qualified by training and experience, who shall be a woman. The State Supervisor shall, in addition to her salary, be entitled to all necessary traveling and office expenses. The State Supervisor shall, with the approval of the Governor, appoint an Assistant State Supervisor and clerk. In addition to their salaries, the Assistant State Supervisor and clerk shall receive their necessary and actual expenses.

Sec. 1, Act of May 27, 1921, P. L. 1175, amending Sec. 2, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

322. Powers and Duties of State Supervisors. Report to Commissioner of Public Welfare. The State Supervisor shall have general supervision over the boards of trustees of the several counties, and shall act as general field organizer. She shall be on the staff of the Department of Public Welfare.

The State Supervisor shall formulate and issue, to the boards of trustees of the various counties, rules of procedure by which they shall be governed, to the end that uniformity of interpretation and practice shall obtain throughout the Commonwealth. She shall visit, at least twice each year, the boards of trustees of each county accepting the provisions of this act.

She shall, as general field organizer, visit the county commissioners of those counties which have not availed themselves themselves of the provisions of this act, and shall explain to such commissioners the benefits accuring from the act and the advantages of coming within its provisions, and shall assist such county commissioners in the organization of boards of trustees.

She shall make a report annually to the Commission of Public Welfare, reviewing the work done under the provisions of this act by the trustees of the various counties, laying special stress upon educational conditions of the assisted families.

Sec. 2, Act of May 22, 1923, P. L. 307, amending Sec. 3, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

323. Local Supervision by Boards of Trustees. The administration of this act within the several counties shall be solely in the hands of the boards of trustees appointed by the Governor, subject, however, to the rules adopted and issued by the State Supervisor. The members of the boards of trustees shall serve without compensation, but shall receive all actual and necessary expenses incurred in the performance of their duty.

Sec. 4, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

324. Headquarters of Trustees: Employes: Administration Expenses. The boards of trustees shall provide suitable headquarters, and shall appoint such competent investigators and clerical assistants as may be necessary, and shall provide suitable furnishings and stationery, and provide for the payment of salaries and incidental expenses. At no time, however, shall the annual expenses of administration in any county exceed ten per centum of the appropriation for the county for that year, with the exception of the first year, when the trustees shall be permitted to expend an additional sum of not more than five hundred dollars for furnishings.

Sec. 5, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

325. Mothers Entitled to Assistance. It shall be the duty of the board of trustees to provide, from the funds made available under the provisions of this act, as aid in supporting their children in their own homes, assistance to poor and dependent mothers of proved character and ability, who have children under the age of sixteen years, and whose husbands are dead, or permanently confined in institutions for the insane.

Sec. 6, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

326. Citizenship—Residence. In order to prevent the alienation of the citizenship of those who may receive the benefits of this act, no family shall be a beneficiary thereunder unless the mother has been a resident, continuously, of the state for a period of two years, and of the county in which she applies for assistance for a period of one year. No family entitled to receive the benefits of this act in any county shall be deemed to have lost its residence in such county within one year after removal therefrom, but any such family shall, if it returns to the county in which it was entitled to receive assistance within said year, be immediately entitled to assistance in such county.

Sec. 7, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

327. Investigation of Families. The trustees of the various counties shall in no case recommend payment to any mother until they are satisfied that she is of proper character and ability, and that for the proper maintenance of her children in her own home monthly payments are necessary. For such purpose the board of trustees shall cause to be made proper investigations. No payments shall be made on account of any child of proper age and physical ability unless satisfactory report has been made by the teacher of the school in which such pupil is enrolled, stating that such child is attending school.

Sec. 8, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

328. Maximum Monthly Payments. The combined maximum payment allowed by any board of trustees shall in no case exceed twenty dollars per month for the first child, and ten dollars per month for each additional child. A mother shall be entitled to assistance under this act for an unborn child, in like manner as for other children, if she has one or more children living which entitle her to the benefits of this act.

Sec. 9, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

329. Records of Families. Reports. Before any payment is made to any family under the provisions of this act, a complete report of such family shall be made, giving the name of the mother, the number of children with their full names, their ages, and place of residence; one copy of such report shall be placed on file in the office of the board of trustees as a record, one copy shall be forwarded to the State supervisor, and two copies shall be forwarded with each application for a warrant for the use of the Auditor General and the County Treasurer. The copies forwarded to the Auditor General and the County Treasurer shall be sworn to by the investigator, and shall be approved by a majority of the board of trustees.

Sec. 10, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

330. Duration of Payments. All payments made under the provisions of this act shall continue at the will of the trustees, but not beyond the time when any child under the provisions of the law may secure employment, excepting where the child is physically unable to earn wages, or is at school with a satisfactory record of attendance and scholarship, in which case such payment shall continue until such child has reached the age of sixteen years.

Sec. 11, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

331. Mode of Payment. All payments made under the provisions of this act by the State Treasurer and by county treasurers shall be made direct to the recipient thereof by warrant.

Sec. 12, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

332. Apportionment of Appropriation. The State Treasurer after deducting, from the entire amount appropriated and reappropriated from time to time by the General Assembly, the same designated for the payment of salaries and expenses, shall divide the balance of such appropriations into two equal sums. One equal part of each sum shall be distributed for the first fiscal year among the several counties according to the classification of the counties as provided in the act making an appropriation to carry into effect the provisions of this act.

Sec. 2, Act of May 27, 1921, P. L. 1175, amending Sec. 13, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

333. Acceptance of Act and Appropriations by Counties. No county shall receive its allotment of the State appropriation available for any year under the classification appointed by the act making an appropriation to carry into effect the provisions of this act, unless such county has accepted the provisions of this act, and has placed at the disposal of the board of trustees a sum equal to the amount available from the State appropriation for such year.

Sec. 3, Act of May 27, 1921, P. L. 1175, amending Sec. 14, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

334. State Appropriations Available Second Fiscal Year. On the first day of June of the second fiscal year following each State appropriation, the State Treasurer shall apportion, mang the various counties which have accepted the provisions of this act before the end of the first fiscal year, a sum equal to the amount apportioned to such county during the first fiscal year according to the aforesaid classification, including therein all unexpended balance from the previous fiscal year credited to the several counties accepting the provisions of this act, which unexpended moneys shall remain available during the second fiscal year for use by the counties to which theretofore credited, and excluding all moneys apportioned to the several counties which shall likewise exclude from said apportionment all money appropriated for the second fiscal year for counties which have not accepted the provisions of this act before the end of the first fiscal year.

Sec. 15, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

335. Surplus Funds. All funds set aside from year to year for counties which have not availed themselves of the provisions of this act, shall be set aside into a surplus fund. The surplus fund shall be available during the second fiscal year in the counties which have availed themselves of the provisions of this act before the end of the first fiscal year, but no county shall be entitled to an amount from such fund in excess of twenty-five per centum of the aggregate sum apportioned and set aside by the State Treasurer to that county for the two year period, and no such county shall participate in such surplus fund unless it shall, in addition to the appropriations required, appropriate a sum equal to the amount which it desires from the surplus fund.

Sec. 16, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

336. Penalties. Any person securing any allowance contrary to the provisions of this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or to undergo imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 17, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

337. Report by State Supervisor. A detailed report of the number of beneficiaries, the amount expended, and the advantages and disadvantages of the system, with recommendations for improvement, shall be made by the State Supervisor to the General Assembly at the beginning of each session of the General Assembly. Such report shall be printed by the State Printer, upon requisition by the Superintendent of Public Instruction of the Department of Printing and Binding.

Sec. 18, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 893.

K. JUVENILE COURTS

1. Establishment of Juvenile Courts Jurisdiction and Powers.

338. Preamble. Causes Leading to the Establishment of Jouvenile Courts. Whereas. The welfare of the State demands that children should be guarded from association and contact with crime and criminals, and the ordinary process of the criminal law does not provide such treatment in the formative period of life, but endangers the whole future of the child;

And Whereas, Experience has shown that children lacking proper parental care or guardianship, are led into courses of life which may render them liable to the pains and penalties of the criminal law of the State, although in fact the real interests of such child or children require that they be not incarcerated in penitentiaries and jails, as members of the criminal class, but subjects to a wise care, treatment and control, that their evil tendencies may be checked and their better instincts may be strengthened;

And Whereas, To that end, it is important that the powers of the courts, in respect to the care, treatment and control over dependent, neglected, delinquent and incorrigible children, should be clearly distinguished from the powers exercised in the administration of the criminal law.

And Whereas, To that end, it is important that the powers of the courts, in respect to the care, treatment and control over dependent, neglected, delinquent and incorrigible children, should be clearly distinguished from the powers exercised in the administration of the criminal law.

Preamble to Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274.

This act was held constitutional in Commonwealth v. Fisher, 213 Pa., 48, affirming same, 27 Sup. Ct. 175.

The first act in Pennsylvania seeking to establish a special jurisdiction in the courts over juveniles was the Act of June 12, 1893 which was declared unconstitutional in Courts for Trial of Infants, 14 C. C. 254. The next act being the Act of May 21, 1901, P. L. 279, was declared unconstitutional by the Superior Court in Mansfield's case, 22 Sup. Ct. 224, and subsequently repealed by the Act of 1903 above (Sec. 12, Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274).

339. Jurisdiction of Juvenile Courts. The courts of quarter sessions of the peace, within the several counties of this Commonwealth, shall have and possess full and exclusive jurisdiction in all proceedings affecting the treatment and control of dependent, neglected, incorrigible, and delinquent children, under the age of sixteen years; and for the purpose of this act the words "dependent child" and "neglected child" shall mean any child who is destitute, homeless, abandoned, or dependent upon the public for support, or who has not proper parental care or guardianship. The words "incorrigible children" shall mean any child who is charged by its parent or guardian with being unmanageable. The words "delinquent child" shall mean any child, including such as have heretofore been designated "incorrigible children", who may be charged with the violation of any law of this Commonwealth, or the ordinance of any city, borough, or township.

The powers of the court of quarter sessions of the peace, as provided for in this act, may be exercised by any one or more judges of such court, who may be assigned for the purpose at a session of said court, which shall be known as the juvenile court; and all sessions of such juvenile court, which shall be known as the juvenile court; and all sessions of such juvenile court shall be held separate and apart from any session of the court held for the purpose of its general criminal or other business, and the records of the proceedings of such juvenile court shall be kept in a docket, separate from all other proceedings of said court.

Sec. 1, Act of June 28, 1923, P. L. 898 amending Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274.

In the County of Philadelphia this jurisdiction is exercised by the Municipal Court of Philadelphia under Sec. 1, Act of June 17, 1915, P. L. 1017, infra Sec. ; and in the County of Allegheny by the County Court of Allegheny County under Sec. 1, Act of Mar. 19, 1915, P. L. 5, infra Sec. 346.

No new court is created by this act, "and the ancient court of quarter sessions, which is older than all the Constitutions of Pennsylvania, is given thereby not greater but different powers from those previously exercised." Commonwealth v. Fisher, 213 Pa., 48.52, affirming same, 27 Sup. Ct. 175.

340. Exercise of Powers by Juvenile Courts. The powers of the court may be exercised:

1. Upon the petition of any citizen, resident of the county, setting forth that a child is neglected, dependent, or delinquent and is in need of care and protection of the court.

2. Whenever any magistrate or justice of the peace shall commit a child arrested for any indictable offense other than murder, or for the violation of any other laws of this Commonwealth or the ordinance of any city, borough, or township.

Upon the filing of any petition, as above set forth, or whenever the jurisdiction of the court has attached by the commitment of a child by any magistrate or justice of the peace, it shall be the duty of the judge, holding said juvenile court, to make all necessary orders for compelling the production of such child, and the attendance of the parents and all persons having the custody or control of the child, or with whom the child may be; and pending the final disposition of any case, the child shall be subject to the order of the court, and may be permitted to remain in the control of its parents or the person having it in charge, or the probation officer, or may be kept in some place provided by the State or county authorities, or by any association having for one of its objects the care of delinquent or neglected children, as the court may order.

Sec. 2, Act of June 28, 1923, P. L. 898 amending Sec. 2, Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274.

341. Proceedings by School Directors Against Incorrigible Children. In case any children between eight and sixteen years of age cannot be kept in school in compliance with the provisions of this act, on account of incorrigibility, truancy, insubordination or other bad conduct, or if the presence of any such child attending school is detremental, to the welfare of such school, on account of incorrigibility, truancy, insubordination, or other bad conduct, then, in any such case, the board of school directors of the proper district may, by its superintendent, supervising principal, secretary, or attendance officer, under such rules and regulations as said board may adopt, proceed against said child before the juvenile court, or otherwise, as is now or may hereinafter be provided by law for incorrigible, truant, insubordinate or delinquent children.

Sec. 1438, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309.

342. Jurisdiction of Municipal Court of Philadelphia County in Juvenile Cases. The said court, hereby created, shall have jurisdiction in all criminal actions and suits for penalties, except that it shall not have jurisdiction in the trial of indictment for arson, burglary, murder, voluntary manslaughter, treason, or misprison of treason, or for violation or conspiracy to violate the election or registration laws of this Commonwealth, or for embezzlement of any public officer, or any offense involving breach of official duties by any public officer: Provided, however, That nothing herein contained, and no exception to the jurisdiction of the said court herein set forth, shall be construed to deprive the said court of exclusive jurisdiction in those cases hereinafter in this section set forth.

The jurisdiction of the said Municipal Court shall be exclusive

(a) In all proceedings brought against any husband or father, wherein it is charged that he was without reasonable cause separated himself from his wife or children, or from both, or has neglected to maintain his wife or children; and in all proceedings where any child of full age has neglected or shall neglect to maintain his or her parents, not able to work or of sufficient ability to maintain themselves; and in all proceedings for the custody of children.

(b) In all proceedings concerning dependent, delinquent, or neglected children, as defined by existing laws relating thereto, which are hereby made applicable to proceedings in the Municipal Court.

(c) In all proceedings concerning, or trials of charges brought against, all persons, whether adults or minors, accused of disorderly street-walking.

(d) In all proceedings concerning, or trials of charges brought against, all minors, between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one years who shall disobey their parents' command, or be found idle in the streets, and against all disorderly children.

(e) All children not under the age of sixteen years deserting their homes without good and sufficient cause, or keeping company with dissolute or vicious persons, against the lawful commands of their fathers, mothers, or guardians, or other person standing in the place of a parent, shall be deemed disorderly children.

(f) In all proceedings wherein it is charged that a mother has deserted her child, or children, or has neglected to maintain her child, or children; or wherein it is alleged that a grandfather or a grandmother has neglected to maintain his or her grandchild, or grandchildren; or wherein it is alleged that any child is suffering from epilepsy, nervous or mental defects, as defined by existing laws relating thereto, and which are hereby made applicable to proceedings in the Municipal Court.

The judges of the said Municipal Court shall be ex-officio justices of the peace. When defendants are bound over for trial in any case, indictments may be presented against them before the grand jury in accordance with existing laws, which indictment may be tried either in existing courts or in the Municipal Court as the case may be: Provided, however, That, if it shall be decided by the courts that provisions herein for exclusive jurisdiction in Municipal Court, or for abolishing preliminary hearings in certain cases, are unconstitutional, the intent of the Legislature is hereby expressed that said provisions only shall be void, and that all other provisions of this act shall be valid and enforceable.

All cases of desertion and non-support, instituted in the court of quarter sessions pursuant to the authority of existing law, which are pending and undisposed of in said court at the time this act takes effect, together with all orders, decrees, judgments, or sentences, are hereby transferred to the Municipal Court. The said Municipal Court is hereby authorized to hear, determine, and dispose of the cases hereby transferred, and shall have full power and authority to enforce any and all orders, decrees, judgments, or sentences heretofore entered or imposed in said cases by the said court of quarter sessions, with the same power and effect as if such cases had been originally instituted in the said municipal court.

Sec. 1, Act of July 17, 1915, P. L. 1015, amending Sec. 11, Act of July 12, 1913, P. L. 711.

Prior to the passage of the Act of July 12, 1913, P. L. 711, establishing the municipal court, the jurisdiction over juveniles in Philadelphia was in the court of quarter sessions under Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 25, 1903, P. L. 274, supra section 339.

The juvenile court of Philadelphia is operated under and by virtue of Clause (b) of this section and takes cognizance only by cases affecting children under sixteen years of age, thus carrying out the purpose originally established by the Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274, super sections 338, 339 and 340. Cases coming under Clauses (c), (d) and (e) of this section are heard in a separate court known as the "Misdemeanants' Court," and cover the cases formerly provided for in the Act of June 2, 1871, P. L. 1301, infra sections 482 to 495. These two courts are held at distinctly separate places in the City of Philadelphia.

343. Designation of Judge of Municipal Court of Philadelphia to Hold Juvenile Court. The president judge of the court shall designate one member of the court to hold a juvenile court. The said judge shall be assigned to said court for a period of one year, no longer, in the discretion of the president judge.

Part of Sec. 8, Act of July 12, 1913, P. L. 711.

The president judge herein referred to is the president judge of the Municipal Court of Philadelphia.

344. Preliminary Hearings in Juvenile Cases in Philadelphia Abolished. (In desertion and non-support cases and) in juvenile cases there shall be no preliminary hearings; but the person accused or children involved shall be immediately brought before the court for trial.

Part of Sec. 13, Act of July 12, 1913, P. L. 711.

This section relates to the Municipal Court of Philadelphia only.

345. Preliminary Hearing in Juvenile Cases Abolished in Philadelphia. There shall be no preliminary hearings in any cases affecting dependent, delinquent, or neglected children under the age of sixteen years, as defined by existing laws relating to such proceedings (which laws are hereby made applicable to proceedings in the municipal court); but such children shall be brought immediately before the judge of the juvenile court, and he shall hear and determine said cases, separately from each other, at such place and at such hours of the day or night as will, in the judgment of the president judge and of the judge of the juvenile court, be most conducive to the welfare of such children.

Part of Sec. 9, Act of July 12, 1913, P. L. 711.

346. County Court of Allegheny County to Have Jurisdiction in Juvenile Cases. In all proceeding concerning dependent, delinquent, incorrigible, or neglected children under the age of sixteen years, as defined by existing laws relating thereto, the county court of Allegheny County shall have exclusively all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in and exercised by the court of quarter sessions of the peace of said county, sitting as a juvenile court, or of any judge of said court sitting as a juvenile court judge; and all laws relating to such jurisdiction and powers of the court of quarter sessions are hereby made applicable to the said county court. Said county court shall also have jurisdiction in all proceedings for the custody of children, where the court has acquired jurisdiction in matters relating to their maintenance: Provided, however, That if said children are dependent, neglected, incorrigible, or delinquent, the said court, sitting as a juvenile court, shall have sole jurisdiction. The judges of said county court shall be ex-officio justices of the peace.

Sec. 1, Act of May 23, 1923, P. L. 324 amending Sec. 1, Act of Mar. 19, 1915, P. L. 25.

Prior to the passage of this act, the jurisdiction over juveniles in Allegheny County was in the court of quarter sessions of the county, under Sec. 1, of the Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274, Supra Sec. 338 to 340.

347. Designation of Judge of County Court of Allegheny County to Hold Juvenile Court. The president judge of the court shall designate one member of the court to hold such juvenile court. The said judge shall be assigned to said court for a period of one year, or longer in the discretion of the presiding judge.

Sec. 2, Act of Mar. 19, 1915, P. L. 5, supplementing Act of May 5, 1911, P. L. 198.

The "presiding judge" herein referred to is the presiding judge of the County Court of Allegheny Country.

2. Probation and other Officers and Employes of Juvenile Courts.

348. Appointment of Probation Officers. Compensation. The court shall appoint or designate one or more discreet persons, of good character, to serve as probation officers during the pleasure of the court. Said probation officers shall receive compensation to be fixed by said court of quarter sessions of the peace. Such compensation shall not exceed one hundred dollars for each officer, and, in addition thereto, such expenses as may be necessary and approved by said court. Said compensation and expenses shall be paid monthly at the end of each month, by the county treasurer, upon an order of the county commissioners approved by the president judge of said courts. And it shall be the duty of all probation officers, so appointed, to make such investigation as may be required by the court, to be present in court when the case is heard, and to furnish to the court such information and assistance as the judge may require, and to take such charge of any child, before and after trial, as may be directed by the court.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 1, 1909, P. L. 89, amending Sec. 3, Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274.

For the appointment and salaries of probation officers in the counties of Allegheny and Philadelphia see Sec.

3, Act of June 27, 1923, P. L. 850, and Sec. 1, Act of March 30, 1917, P. L. 19, infra Secs. 352 and 354.

The court herein referred to is the court of Quarter Sessions sitting as a juvenile court.

349. Compensation of Probation Officers in Certain Counties. From and after the passage of this act, the probation officers appointed by the several courts of quarter sessions of this Commonwealth, in counties having a population of less than one million inhabitants, under the provisions of an Act, approved the twenty-third day of April, Anno Domini, one thousand nine hundred three, entitled "An act defining the powers of the several courts of quarter sessions of the peace, within this Commonwealth, with reference to the care, treatment, and control of dependent, neglected, incorrigible, and delinquent children, under the age of sixteen years, and providing for the means in which such power may be exercised," and the supplements thereto, shall each receive a compensation not to exceed one hundrd and fifty (150) dollars per month.

Sec. 1, Act of July 10, 1919, P. L. 885.

350. Appointment of Clerks Etc., for Work of Juvenile Court. The judges of the courts of quarter sessions of the peace within the several counties of this Commonwealth shall appoint such clerks, stenographers, and office assistants in connection with the probation work of the juvenile court, as shall, in the opinion of the said judges, be necessary for the efficient conduct of the said work.

Sec. 1, Act of May 11, P. L. 268.

It would seem that this section does not apply to the counties of Allegheny and Philadelphia where the jurisdiction over juvenile offenders is conferred upon the county court and municipal court respectively, and which courts have power to make appointments of necessary officers.

351. Salaries of Clerks Etc., of Juvenile Court. The salary or compensation of all clerks, stenographers, and office assistance, so employed, shall be fixed by the judge of the court of quarter sessions of the peace in each county, not to exceed the sum of twelve hundred dollars a year for each such employe, and shall be paid monthly at the end of each month, by the county treasurer, upon an order of the county commissioners, approved by said court.

Sec. 2, Act of May 11, 1911, P. L. 268.

352. Appointment and Salary of Probation Officers in Philadelphia County. The board of judges of the municipal court shall appoint a chief probation officer, whose salary shall not exceed five thousand dollars ($5,000) a year, and such additional probation officers and employes as it may determine, at salaries not to exceed two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500) a year, whose powers and duties shall be similar to those heretofore appointed by the court of quarter sessions of the peace for said county.

Sec. 3, Act of June 27, P. L. 850 amending part of Sec. 9, Act of July 12, 1913, P. L. 711 as amended.

The above section refers only to Philadelphia County.

353. Attendance of Probation Officer Before Grand Jury With Juvenile Witness in First Class Counties. Hereafter a probation officer of any court, or of any court sitting as a juvenile court, in any county of the first class may attend any session of the grand jury of the county at which a male minor under the age of sixteen years or any female minor is present. Such probation officer shall be present during the entire examination of such minor by the grand jury, and may, with the consent of the grand jury, assist in said examination.

Sec. 1, Act of July 11, 1923, P. L. 994. (No. 410).

The above section refers only to Philadelphia County.

354. Appointment of Probation Officers in Allegheny County. Salaries. The presiding judge shall appoint a chief probation officer, whose salary shall not exceed three thousand dollars per year, and such additional probation officers as the majority of the judges may determine, at salaries not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars per year, whose compensation shall be fixed by the salary board. The presiding judge of the said court shall constitute a member of the salary board when such salaries are to be fixed. The powers and duties of the probation officers, as herein appointed, shall be similar to those heretofore exercised by probation officers appointed by the court of quarter sessions of the peace of said county. In addition to such compensation, the probation officers shall receive such expenses as may be necessary and shall have been approved by the judge of the juvenile court. Said compensation and expenses shall be paid monthly, out of the treasury of Allegheny County, in the manner in which other county expenses are paid by law.

Sec. 1, Act of Mar. 30, 1917, P. L. 19 amending Sec. 3, Act of May 19, P. L. 5.

The presiding judge herein referred to is the presiding judge of the County Court of Allegheny County.

This section relates to the appointment of probation officers in Allegheny County only.

3. Houses and Room for the Detention of Juvenile Offenders and Dependent and Neglected Children Prior to Hearing and Commitment.

355. Children Not to be Confined With Adults. No child, pending a hearing under the provisions of this act, shall be held in confinement, in any county or other jail, police station, or in any institution to which adult convicts are sentenced.

Sec. 7, Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 272.

This section refers to children under the jurisdiction of the juvenile courts only.

356. Police Matrons to be Appointed in First and Second Class Cities. In all cities of this Commonwealth of the first and second class, a competent female officer shall be provided for each police station-house to which female prisoners and children are or may be taken, who shall be known as a police matron, and whose duty it shall be to receive, search, take charge of and properly care for all female prisoners and children who shall be brought to such station-house.

Sec. 1, Act of May 13, 1889, P. L. 192.

Sec. 7, Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274, preceding section prohibits the commitment of children under the age of sixteen to police stations. The Act of July 2, P. L. 601, provides for houses for the detention of untried juveniles in cities of the first and second class. It seems therefore that this section would affect only children over the age of sixteen and adult females.

357. Appointment of Police Matrons. Compensation. Such police matrons shall be appointed by the same authority and in the same manner as police officers or patrolmen are now appointed in the said cities respectively, and their compensation, which shall be fixed by the proper authority having control of the compensation of police officers or patrolmen, shall not be less than thirty dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars, per month.

Sec. 2, Act of May 13, 1889, P. L. 192.

358. Separate Rooms or Buildings to be Provided for Confinement of Children Under Sixteen Years of Age. It shall be the duty of the board of county commissioners, in each county of the Commonwealth, to provide, furnish, and heat, within the county, a separate room, or rooms or a suitable building, to be used exclusively for the confinement of any and all children, under the age of sixteen years, who may be in custody awaiting trial or hearing in the courts of the county, and to provide for the maintenance and care of such children while in custody.

Sec. 1, Act of July 21, 1913, P. L. 870, No. 420, amending Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 3, 1903, P. L. 137.

359. Jurisdiction Over Houses of Detention in Third Class Counties. Hereafter, in counties of the third class of this Commonwealth, the exclusive jurisdiction over all houses of detention for the reception of untried juvenile offenders and neglected and dependent children, under the age of sixteen years, who may be in the custody of an officer appointed or elected under any law of this Commonwealth, and whose case may be under judicial investigation, shall be vested in a board of managers, which shall consist of the county commissioners, the sheriff, and the county controller of the county wherein such houses of detention are established; and the board of managers in charge of any such house or houses now in office are hereby abolished.

Sec. 1, Act of May 17, 1921, P. L. 840.

360. Power and Authority of Board of Managers. The said board of managers shall have the same power and authority now provided by the laws of this Commonwealth relating to such houses of detention.

Sec. 2, Act of May 17, 1921, P. L. 840.

361. Houses of Detention for Juvenile Offenders in Cities of the First and Second Class. In every city of the first and second class there shall be provided in the way hereinafter mentioned a house or houses of detention, for the reception of untried juvenile offenders and neglected and dependent children under the age of sixteen years, who may be in the custody of an officer appointed or elected under any laws of this Commonwealth, and whose cases may be under judicial investigation under any laws of this Commonwealth, pending such investigation and final determination of such case or cases.

Sec. 1, Act of July 2, 1901, P. L. 601.
This act was held to be constitutional in Price v. Walton, 49 Sup. Ct. 1, see p. 13.

362. Management of Houses of Detention in Cities of the First and Second Class. Houses of detention, established under the provisions of this act, shall be provided and managed by a board of managers, consisting of five members, two of whom shall be women; said board of managers to be appointed by the judges of the courts of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery and the courts of quarter sessions of the peace having jurisdiction in the said respective cities.

Sec. 2, Act of July 2, 1901, P. L. 601.

363. Term of Office of Board of Managers. Removal. The board of managers provided for in this act shall serve without compensation, and shall hold office for two years and until their successors are appointed, subject to removal by the judge of the said court.

Sec. 3, Act of July 2, 1901, P. L. 601.

364. Duties of Board of Managers. The duties of the said board of managers shall be to provide a house or houses, by leasing the same or otherwise, for the reception of children to be placed therein under the provisions of this act, to alter said house or houses for such purpose, to keep the same in repair, and generally to fit and furnish said house or houses so that the same may be suitable for the care of the children intended to be received, and especially to arrange such house or houses so that a separate room (so far as possible) may be provided for the accommodation of each child who may be received therein, and generally to supervise and oversee the management of said house and houses.

Sec. 4, Act of July 2, 1901, P. L. 601.
These duties are not a municipal but a county function, Price v. Walton, 49 Sup. Ct. 1.

365. Payment of Expenses of Board. Expenses incurred in the performance of the said duties of the board of managers shall be itemized and presented with proper vouchers to the county commissioners of the county containing the city for which said board of managers may be appointed, who shall be required to pay the said expenses.

Sec. 5, Act of July 2, 1901, P. L. 601.
Contracts made for materials for the maintenance of the house of detention are not for materials "required by the city," and do not "relate to city affairs," and therefore need not be advertised or in writing, Price v. Walton, 49 Sup. Ct. 1. While this decision covers that situation in Philadelphia, it is probable however that in other counties such contracts involving an expenditure over $100. would have to be in writing and advertised under the provisions of Sec. 10, Act of June 27, 1895, P. L. 403. In this connection see also Sec. 9, of this act, infra Sec.

366. Number of Children to be Received. Not more than twenty-five (25) children shall be received into any single house of detention provided for in this act. Whenever it shall be necessary to accommodate more than twenty-five (25) children of the class hereinbefore defined (pending such judicial disposition), it shall be the duty of the board of managers to provide an additional house or houses to accommodate such other children.

Sec. 6, Act of July 2, 1901, P. L. 601.

367. Appointment of Caretakers. Compensation. It shall be the duty of the board of managers to appoint a man and woman to take charge of the house and children committed to such house of detention, and generally to maintain order and discipline among the children so committed into their keeping. The salary or compensation to be paid to said caretakers shall be fixed by the board of managers, and certified to the county commissioners as one of the expenses of maintaining such house or houses of detention as are established by this act.

Sec. 7, Act of July 2, 1901, P. L. 601.

368. Not Essential to Commit Juveniles to Houses of Detention. It shall not be essential to commit a delinquent, dependent, or neglected child to the house of detention established by this act, if, in the judgment of the probation officer now or hereafter to be appointed under any present existing law or laws of this Commonwealth, it should be deemed expedient to otherwise dispose of said child.

Sec. 8, Act of July 2, 1901, P. L. 601.

369. Cost of Maintaining Houses of Detention. The cost and expenses of maintaining the houses of detention by this act established, shall be provided by the respective counties containing the said house or houses of detention, as the cost and expenses of maintaining county prisons are now provided.

Sec. 9, Act of July 2, 1901, P. L. 601.
For construction of this section and Sec. 5, of this act see note Supra Sec. 365.

370. Necessity for Place of Detention of Untried Juvenile in Philadelphia. Whereas, There are annually in the city of Philadelphia about two hundred and sixty juvenile offenders, mostly boys between the ages of eight and sixteen years, committed to the county prison and therein locked in a felon's cell who receive the stigma of having been in prison many of them for a first and trivial offense, and though fifty per centum are discharged before trial, and twenty-five per centum at the trial by the magistrate, there is a growing desire on the part of the Pennsylvania Prison Society and many philanthropic people to have established a house of detention for juvenile offenders below sixteen years, to be located in the neighborhood of the county prisons; and

Whereas, It is very desirable to remove such a stigma on the young offender, and try to reclaim him or her to the better walks of life, and believing that if the object be made known some benevolent persons will combine to make such a house or houses of detention a success speedily; and

Whereas, It is thought desirable to purchase some large, oldfashioned house that can be remodeled or adapted, or to erect a suitable building or buildings, with the approval of the mayor of the city, the chief of the department of public safety, the president of the board of inspectors of the county prison, and their prison agent, as to location, arrangement of such building and equipment, that said house or houses of detention when fully completed may be transferred free of cost to the city authorities, and cared for in the same manner as the county prisons therefore.

Preamble to Act of May 12, 1897, P. L. 65.

371. Houses of Detention for Untried Juvenile Offenders in Cities of the First Class. Authority is herein granted to cities of the first class in the state of Pennsylvania, or to any reputable society connected with prison work, associated with other benevolent donors, to purchase, alter or erect a suitable building or buildings, to be known as a house or houses of detention for untried juvenile prisoners of both sexes below the age of sixteen years, with convenient capacity for its needs in said cities of the first class.

Sec. 1, Act of May 12, 1897, P. L. 65.

The Act of July 2, 1901, P. L. 601 supra Secs. 361 to 369, requires cities of the first class to establish "houses of detention for the reception of untried juvenile offenders and neglected and dependent children under the age of sixteen years." Purdon's Digest considers this act repealed by the Act of 1901, while no mention of this act is made in Pepper and Lewis's Digest.

372. Location and Equipment of Houses of Detention. That the location, the building and equipment of said houses of detention shall be with the approval of the mayor of the city, the chief of the department of public safety, the president of the board of inspectors of the county prison, and their prison agent.

Sec. 2, Act of May 12, 1897, P. L. 65.

373. Cost of Maintenance of Houses of Detention. That when fully completed for occupancy and transferred free of cost to the city authorities the cost of maintaining said house or houses of detention shall be provided for in the same manner as the county prisons.

Sec. 3, Act of May 12, 1897, P. L. 65.

374. Management of Houses of Detention. There shall be a board of five managers appointed by the mayor who shall receive only reasonable official expenses, and shall hold their office for five years, and shall be so classified that one of their number shall go out of office in the first day of January of each year. They shall manage and direct in connection with the mayor, and department of public safety the business thereof, and make all needful regulations therefor not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the Commonwealth.

Sec. 4, Act of May 12, 1897, P. L. 65.

375. Reception of Untried Juvenile Offenders Into Houses of Detention. The said board of managers shall receive into said house or houses of detention all untried juveniles of either sex committed thereto under the age of sixteen years, (except those charged with murder or arson), and shall retain them until their dismissal by trial and conviction or acquittal.

Sec. 5, Act of May 12, 1897, P. L. 65.

376. Commitment of Juvenile Offenders to Houses Of Detention. When the buildings are ready for occupancy and its regulations established, the committing magistrate shall be officially notified by the mayor that after a given date all untried juveniles below sixteen years of age are to be sent to said house or houses of detention in place of the county prison. The judges of the court of quarter sessions, and the magistrates of the county of Philadelphia are hereby empowered to commit all minors under the age of sixteen years charged with any offense against the law to the house of detention while awaiting trial, or while their cases are being investigated.

Sec. 6, Act of May 12, 1897, P. L. 65.

4. Proceedings, Hearings, Commitment, Appeals, Costs.

(Note: For commitment to particular institutions see Subdivision L Institutional Care.)

377. Justices of the Peace and Magistrates Not to Commit Children Under Sixteen Years of Age. No child under the age of sixteen years shall be committed by any magistrate, or justice of the peace to any institution for the purpose of correction or reformation, but all applications for such commitment shall be made to the court of quarter sessions of the county.

Sec. 1, Act of Mar. 26, 1903, P. L. 66.

In Allegheny County this application should now be made to the county court, and in Philadelphia County to the municipal court.

378. Commitment of Children After Hearing. At the hearing, the judge or judges holding such sessions of the court shall determine, after an inquiry into the facts, what order for the commitment and custody and care of the child, the child's own good and the best interest of the State may require; and may commit such child to the care of its parents, subject to the supervision of a probation officer, or to some suitable institution, or the care of some reputable citizen of good moral character, or to the care of some training school, or to an industrial school, or to the care of some association willing to receive it; and, in either case it shall be within the power of the court to make an order upon the parent or parents of any such child to contribute to the support of the child such sum as the court may determine; and the court shall have full power and authority to refer nonsupport cases to the desertion probation officers, and to enforce said order of court in the same way as the court of quarter sessions of the peace may refer cases, and enforce the order of support made, under and by virtue of "An act for the relief of wives and children deserted by their husbands and fathers within this Commonwealth", approved the thirteenth day of April, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, and the supplements thereto, which have been heretofore or may hereafter be passed; it being further provided, that in all cases in which a delinquent child shall be committed to the care of a reformatory institution, when such child shall be discharged from such institution the court shall be duly advised thereof, and a record of such discharge shall be kept in the juvenile court docket.

Sec. 1, Act of June 15, 1911, P. L. 959, amending Sec. 4, Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274.

The cases of non-support referred to in this section likely include only such as are brought to the attention of the court in the exercise of its jurisdiction over dependent and neglected children as defined in Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274, supra Sec. 339.

For provisions as to liability for cost of commitment, maintenance and instruction generally, see Infra Subdivision L, Institutional Care.

379. Commitment of Children. Payment of Costs. In the case of a delinquent, dependent, neglected, or incorrigible child, the court may continue the hearing from time to time, and may commit the child to the care and guardianship of a probation officer duly appointed by the court, and may allow said child to remain in its own home, subject to the visitation of the probation officer,—such child to report to the probation officer as often as may be required, and subject to be returned to the court for further proceedings whenever such action may appear to be necessary; or the court may commit the child to the care and guardianship of the probation officer, to be placed in a suitable family home, subject to the supervision of such probation officer; or it may authorize the said probation officer to board out the said child in some suitable family home, in case provision is made by voluntary contribution or otherwise for the payment of the board of such child; or may direct that the payment of the board of such child be made by the proper county, until a suitable provision may be made for the child in a home without such payment; or the court may commit the child to a suitable institution for the care of delinquent children, or to any society, duly incorporated, having for one of its objects the protection of dependent, neglected or delinquent children. In any case of the commitment of a dependent, neglected, incorrigible, or delinquent child, under the provisions of this section, the court committing such child may order and direct that the board and clothing of, and necessary medical and surgical attendance upon, and the care of, such child, and its maintenance generally, and the necessary expenses of placing or re-placing such child, shall be paid by the proper county, and may fix the amount which shall be paid for such board and clothing.

Sec. 1, Act of June 12, 1919, P. L. 445 amending Sec. 6, Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274.

For provisions as to liability for cost of commitment, maintenance and instruction generally, see infra. Subdivision L, Institutional Care.

380. Considerations in Committing Children. The court, in making all orders for the commitment of children, shall place them, as far as possible, in care and custody of persons having the same religious belief as the parents of the child, or with some association which is controlled by persons of such religious belief; and shall, as far as possible, provide, in making orders of commitment, that the care, custody and descipline of the child shall be as nearly as possible that which should be given by its parents. In all cases where it can properly be done, the child shall be placed in an approved family home, and become a member of the family by legal adoption or otherwise.

Sec. 9, Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274.

381. Unlawful Commitments of Children Under Twelve. It shall not be lawful to commit the custody of any delinquent child, under the age of twelve years, to any institution of correction or reformation, unless, after the care and oversight given such child under the probation system provided for by this act, the court finds that the best interests of the child and the welfare of the community require such commitment; and it shall not be lawful to commit the custody of any neglected or dependent child, [who is delinquent] to any institution of correction or reformation in which delinquent children are received, nor shall any delinquent child be committed to any institution in which dependent or neglected children are received.

Sec. 10, Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274.
The words in brackets, "Who is delinquent?" it seems should be omitted from this section.

382. Commitment and Reception of Juveniles Convicted in District and Circuit Courts of the United States. All jailors, prison keepers, wardens, managers, and their and each and every of their deputies, having control or charge of any reformatory, house of refuge, or other institution for juvenile delinquents or juvenile convicts, now in existence or hereafter to be created within this Commonwealth, be and the same are hereby empowered and directed to receive into such reformatory, house of correction, or other institution for juvenile delinquents or juvenile convicts, all persons convicted and sentenced by any circuit or district court of the United States in and for the Eastern and Western districts of Pennsylvania of any criminal offense, when by virtue of the laws of this Commonwealth they are now empowered or directed, or may hereafter be empowered or directed, to receive juvenile delinquents or convicts convicted and sentenced in courts of oyer and terminer or quarter sessions of the peace in and for this Commonwealth, or committed to any such reform institution by a magistrate, alderman or justice of the peace, or other judicial officer of this Commonwealth having power to so commit: Provided, That no such convict shall be so admitted unless residing within this Commonwealth.

Sec. 1, Act of Mar. 22, 1899, P. L. 15, (No. 12).
For the support and maintenance of such committed persons see infra Sec. 400.

383. Orders of Commitment Subject to Amendment. All orders which may hereafter be made by the several courts of quarter sessions of the peace of this Commonwealth, respecting the commitment to institutions, or other judicial disposal, of minors, under the age of sixteen years, by virtue of the several provisions of this act or any of them, shall be subject to amendment, change or extension by the judges thereof sitting in juvenile court, upon motion of the district attorney or chief probation officer, or upon petition of any other person or persons in interest, after at least five (5) days' written notice both to the district attorney and the chief probation officer, up to the time when such minors shall have attained the age of twenty-one years; and in the case of any minor to whom the jurisdiction of the juvenile court has attached or shall attach under any of the provisions of this act, and who has attained the age of sixteen years, such probation, shall at the discretion of the judge of the juvenile court, be taken to continue in full force and effect until such minor attains the age of twenty-one years.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 22, 1909, P. L. 119, amending Sec. 8, Act of Apr. 23. 1903, P. L. 274.

384. Review or Rehearing of Juvenile Cases. Appeals. Within twenty-one (21) days after the final order or decree of any of the courts of this Commonwealth, sitting as a juvenile court, or any judge sitting as such, committing or placing any dependent, neglected, incorrigible delinquent, or other kind of child or children to any institution, reputable citizen, or to the care of some training school or an industrial school, or to the care of some institution willing to receive it or them, or to any other person or persons, except to their respective parent or parents, such child or children shall be a matter of right, by its or their parent or parents or next friend, have the right to present to such courts sitting as juvenile courts, or judge sitting as such, a petition to have its or their case or cases reviewed and reheard, if in the estimation of such parent, parents, or next friend as error of fact or of law, or of both, has been made in such proceedings or final orders, or if the said order has been improvidently or inadvertently made; and, upon the presentation of such petition, the said courts sitting as juvenile courts, or judge sitting as such, shall grant such review and rehearing as a matter of right; and it shall be required that the testimony be taken down at such reviews and rehearings and transcribed by an official court stenographer, at the cost of the party requesting such review and rehearing, which testimony shall be duly made a part of the record in such cases. From the final order or decree of such courts of this Commonwealth sitting as juvenile courts, or judge sitting as such court, in proceeding for such rehearings and reviews, appeals shall lie as a matter of right to the Superior Court of this Commonwealth, upon the same terms and with the same regulations as are provided by existing laws in regard to appeals from any definitive sentence or decree of the orphans' court, and in hearing such appeals the Superior Court shall consider the testimony as a part of the record.

Sec. 1, Act of June 1, 1915, P. L. 652.

385. Revocation or Modification of Orders of Juvenile Court. Appeals. If, at any time after the final order or decree of any of the courts of this Commonwealth sitting as juvenile courts, or any judge sitting as such, placing or committing any dependent, neglected, incorrigible, delinquent, or other child or children to any institution, citizen, training school, industrial school, or to the care of some institution willing to receive it or them, or to any other person or persons such a change of circumstances should take place, that, in the estimation of the parent or parents or next friend of such child or children, should warrant the revocation or modification of such final orders or decrees, such dependent, neglected, incorrigible, delinquent, or other child or children, hereinabove described, shall by its or their parent or parents or next friend, have the right to file a petition in such courts sitting as juvenile courts, or with aforesaid judges sitting as such, asking for a revocation or modification of such final orders or decrees; and it shall be the duty of such courts sitting as juvenile courts, or judges sitting as such, to give a full and proper hearing on such petitions; and it shall be required that the testimony at such hearings be taken and transcribed by an official court stenographer, at the cost of the party requesting such hearing, and such testimony shall be duly made a part of the record in the case. From the final order or decree of such courts of this Commonwealth sitting as juvenile courts, or judge sitting as such court, in proceedings for such hearings, mentioned in this paragraph, appeals shall lie as a matter of right to the Superior Court of this Commonwealth, upon the same terms and with the same regulations as are approved by existing laws in regard to appeals from any definitive sentence or decree of the orphans' court, and in hearing such appeals the Superior Court shall consider the testimony as part of the record.

Sec. 2, Act of June 1, 1915, P. L. 652.

386. Trial of Juveniles Over Fourteen Years of Age on Indictment Upon Certification by Court to District Attorney. Whenever any child being above the age of fourteen years, has been held by any magistrate or justice of the peace for any offense, other than murder, punishable by imprisonment in a State penitentiary, the judge of the juvenile court waving jurisdiction, if, in his opinion, the interests of the State require a prosecution of such case on an indictment may certify the same to the district attorney of the county, who shall thereupon proceed with the case in the same manner as though the jurisdiction of the juvenile court had never attached; and nothing in this act contained shall be in derogation of the powers of the courts of quarter sessions and of oyer and terminer to try, upon an indictment any delinquent child whose case may, as above provided, have been certified to the district attorney, and who may, in due course, be brought to trial before such court.

Nothing in this act shall be construed to repeal any of the provisions of an act, approved the fifth day of May, one thousand nine hundred and eleven, entitled "An act to establish a county court for the county of Allegheny, and prescribing its powers and duties; regulating the procedure therein, and providing for the expenses thereof," or the amendments thereto; nor to repeal any of the provisions of an act, approved the twelfth day of July, one thousand nine hundred and thirteen, entitled "An act establishing a court for the county of Philadelphia; prescribing its jurisdiction and powers; providing for the service of its writs, process, or warrants by the proper officers of the county or city of Philadelphia, regulating the procedure therein, and appeals therefrom, and providing for the expenses thereof," or the amendments thereto.

Sec. 3, Act of June 28, 1923, P. L. 898, amending Sec. 11, Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274.

387. Costs in Juvenile Cases. The judges of the juvenile courts of the several counties of this Commonwealth shall have power, upon the disposition of any case heard or tried therein, to make an order disposing of the questions of the payment of the costs, including fees of magistrates, constables, clerks of the courts, sheriffs and witnesses; and may impose them on the county, or on the complainant, if, after hearing, it be found that the complaint was made without proper cause, or upon the parent or parents, or guardian, or custodian of the child, if, after hearing, it be found that they were at fault, and are of ability to pay; but all such costs shall, after hearing and order in the case be immediately chargeable to and paid by the proper county. Provided, That the county shall be liable only for the costs of such witnesses as the probation officer, general or special shall certify were subpoenaed by this order, and were in attendance and necessary to the trial of the case, or such witnesses as the court shall certify were in attendance and necessary.

Sec. 1, Act of June 9, 1911, P. L. 836.

388. Fees of Sheriff for Assistance to Probation Officer. When, in the enforcement of the act cited to be supplemented, and in pursuance of its provisions, it shall become necessary for a process to issue, or when an order of court is made, the chief probation officer, if there be such, otherwise the probation officer in charge, may, in his or her discretion, call upon the sheriff of the county for assistance in service and execution of the same; and for the service so rendered by the sheriff, upon application of such probation officer, he shall be entitled to receive the following fees;

For receiving, making endorsements thereon, docketing, and making return of each such process, order, or notice, seventy-five cents. For executing any such process, order, or notice, where the child is to be taken into custody, seventy-five cents.

In addition thereto, the mileage in serving or executing any of the above processes, orders, or notices, the sheriff shall be entitled to receive, and have taxed as costs, three cents a mile for each mile actually traveled and necessary, the same to be allowed on each separate process, order or notice; Provided, He shall not receive more than one mileage where the defendant in two or more contemporaneous orders, process or notice are the same; and for transportation of each child, three cents per mile in addition to necessary help and expense.

Such probation officer shall certify to the judge presiding in the juvenile court the demand upon the sheriff for his service together with a statement of the fees and expenses, and the court shall prove the same or so much thereof as may be found correct, and direct by whom they shall be paid.

Sec. 1, Act of June 7, 1907, P. L. 438.

This section was repealed so far as it relates to counties having a population of not less than 300,000 and not more than 1,500,000 by the act of Apr. 9, 1915, P. L. 54, which act provides the following fees: viz.

"For each case acted upon by any juvenile court, one dollar and fifty cents."

"For removing * * * any person to the * * * Huntingdon Reformatory or to any charitable institution or to any institution where persons are confined or detained, under any commitment, sentence or order of court, two dollars and fifty cents on each commitment or order in addition to mileage and necessary expenses. Provided, however, That the mileage for the person in charge under commitment or order shall be based upon the miles actually traveled by him."

"For attending court, bringing into and removing therefrom prisoners for arraignment, trial and sentence, the sum of four dollars per day for the sheriff or each deputy, for each and every day of * * * juvenile court, * * * where the sheriff or deputy is actually present, to be paid by the county."

389. Fees of Constable in Juvenile Cases. When, in pursuance of the provisions of said act, a child under the age of sixteen years is arrested, with or without warrant, or is brought before a magistrate in other proceeding and the case shall be transferred to the juvenile court, the constable to whom shall be given the custody of such child for delivery to the officers of the juvenile court, shall be entitled to receive therefor the following fees, to be taxed as costs in the case, to wit,

For services performed in delivering such child to the juvenile court, seventy-five cents, together with three cents per mile for each mile actually traveled and necessary, and three cents per mile for the transportation of each such child, in addition to necessary help and expense.

Such probation officer shall certify the account of the constable performing such service to the judge presiding in the juvenile court, who shall approve the same, or so much thereof as may be found correct and direct by whom it shall be paid.

Sec. 2, Act of June 7, 1907, P. L. 438.

390. Costs of Transportation of Juvenile Offenders. When the court after trial or hearing, makes such disposition of a child as requires its transportation to a point outside of the county, the necessary expenses of its removal, and those of the probation officer in charge, shall be certified, as above provided, to the judge presiding, who shall approve the same, or so much thereof as may be found correct, and direct by whom it shall be paid.

Sec. 3, Act of June 7, 1907, P. L. 438.

The "court" herein referred to is the juvenile court. This section it seems would apply to the removal of children under the age of sixteen years only.

391. Sheriff's and Constables' Fees by Whom Payable. The court in disposing of the question of the payment of the costs provided for in this act, may impose them on the county; or on the complainant, if, after hearing, it be found that the complaint was made without probable cause; or upon the parent or parents, or guardian or custodian, or the child. if, after hearing, it be found that they were at fault and are of ability to pay.

Sec. 4, Act of June 7, 1907, P. L. 438, supplementing Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274.

The costs herein referred to are those imposed under the three sections immediately proceding.

392. Costs to be Paid by County When Child is Discharged by Justice. Whenever, in the enforcement of the act to which this is a supplement, any magistrate or justice of the peace, after hearing shall be of the opinion that the minor should not be committed to said society, and shall discharge such minor, the costs of proceedings before such magistrate or justice shall be paid by the proper county.

Sec. 1, Act of May 11, 1911, P. L. 270, (No. 171) supplementing Act of June 8, 1893, P. L. 339.

The act of June 8, 1893, P. L. 399, provides for the commitment of delinquents to incorporated societies having for their objects the protection of children from cruelty or the placing of children not otherwise provided for in families. See infra, Sec. 499 to 503.

393. Costs may be Divided by Court Upon Detention or Discharge of Child. Whenever any judge of any court of quarter sessions shall make an order for the detention of any minor, as provided for in said act, or shall order the discharge of said minor, such judge may direct whether all the costs of such proceedings be paid by the proper county or by the complainant, or by both in such proportion as to such judge shall seem equitable.

Sec. 2, Act of May 11, 1911, P. L. 270 (No. 171) supplementing Act of June 8, 1893, P. L. 399.

5. Liability for Cost of Commitment, Maintenance and Instruction of Juvenile offenders and Indigent, Neglected and Dependent Children.

(Note: Courts committing juvenile offenders may make an order upon the parent or parents of such child to contribute to its support; see Sec. 1, Act of June 15, 1911, P. L. 959, amending Sec. 4, Act of April 23, 1903, P. L. 274, supra section 378.

Where the court commits a juvenile offender to a family home or to an institution for the care of delinquent children or to an incorporated society, it may order and direct that the board and clothing and necessary medical and surgical attendance and the maintenance generally shall be paid by the county; see Sec. 1, Act of Mar. 13, 1915, P. L. 304, amending Sec. 6, Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274, as amended by the Act of June 1, 1911, P. L. 543 and July 25, 1913, P. L. 1039, infra Sec.

As to liability for costs of proceedings prior to commitment, see supra sections 387 to 393.

As to payment of costs of sheriffs and constables and for the removal of children outside of county, see supra sections 389 to 391.

For liability for cost of maintenance and instruction of children in particular institutions see the following sections: Pennsylvania Training School at Morganza, Sec. ; Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory at Huntingdon, Sec. ;State Industrial Home for Women at Muncy Station, Sec. ; Glen Mills Schools, Sec. ; County schools, Sec. .)

394. Cost of Commitment and Maintenance of Child Committed to Association, Society or Prison. Recovery by County. Where any neglected or dependent child is or shall be committed to the care and custody of any association, society, person or family, by any court, and an order for the payment of the maintenance of the child and the expense of such commitment is made upon the proper county, in pursuance of the laws of this Commonwealth, the county from which such child has been committed to the said association, society, person, or family, shall be liable to the said association, society, person, or family for the maintenance of the said child and all expenses connected therewith; Provided, That the county shall in all cases have full recourse to recover all expenses incurred in behalf of said child so committed from the parties or persons or poor district properly charged therewith under the laws of this Commonwealth.

Sec. 1, Act of May 8, 1913, P. L. 177.

395. Liability of Counties for Cost of Commitment and Maintenance of Indigent and Dependent Children. Recourse Against Parents and Relatives. Whenever hereafter any indigent or dependent child shall be committed by any judge or other competent authority to the care and custody of any person or family, for the purpose of maintenance and education in the home of such person or family, such child shall be conveyed to such home by the county commissioners, sheriff, or other proper officer, at the expense of the proper county, and the cost of maintenance of such child also be paid by the proper county, but at a sum not exceeding what it would cost to maintain and educate such child in the house of refuge, or other public institution of such county: Provided, however, That if at any time the parents or other relatives of such child shall become able to pay such costs, or to refund the money already paid, the said county may apply for and obtain an order for the payment thereof, and enforce the same, in the same court, and in the same manner as is or may be provided by law for compelling the maintenance and support of deserted wives and children.

Sec. 1, Act of May 31, 1907, P. L. 331.

396. Payment of Costs of Maintenance in Industrial Schools. Whenever a child shall have been committed by a court or judge thereof to any industrial school, or other institution of like character, or shall become an inmate thereof, whose parents or guardian are not of sufficient ability to pay the expense of maintaining and instructing such child, such maintenance and instruction shall be paid by the county from which such child shall have been committed: Provided however, That the actual cost of maintaining and instructing such child shall be paid only, and in no event shall such per capita maintenance and instruction exceed the amount of per capita costs of maintenance and instruction of inmates of the house of refuge.

And provided also, That the treasurer of such industrial school, or other institution of like character, shall transmit an account quarterly, to the commissioners of such county as may have become indebted for the maintenance and instruction of inmates in such industrial school, or other like institution, which account shall be signed by said treasurer and sworn or affirmed to by him, and attested by the superintendent of the department of such industrial school, or other institution of like character, in which such inmates may be living. It shall be the duty of said commissioners immediately upon receipt of said accounts to order the treasurer of their respective counties to pay the same.

Act of April 15, 1903, P. L. 208.

397. Payment of Costs of Maintenance in Institution not Exclusively Under State Control. Whenever a child shall be or heretofore shall have been committed to any house of refuge which is not exclusively under state control, and shall become or shall have become an inmate thereof, one-half of the expense of maintaining and instructing such child hereafter shall be borne by the county from which such child shall have been received, and the remaining one-half shall be paid out of the appropriations made to such house of refuge from time to time, by the State.

The method of collecting the amount due by the several counties from which children have been sent, shall be by orders drawn by the treasurer of any such house of refuge on the treasurers of said counties, who shall accept and pay the same; Provided, That the said orders shall be presented quarterly, on the first days of May, August, November, and February, in each and every year, or as soon thereafter as may be convenient. And provided also, That the treasurer of such house of refuge, on or before the first Monday of the proceeding month, shall transmit by the public mail, to the commissioners of such of the counties as may have become indebted for the maintenance and instruction of inmates in such house of refuge, an account of the expense of maintaining and instructing them, which account shall be signed by the treasurer, and sworn or affirmed to by him, and attested by the superintendent of the department of such house of refuge in which each of such inmates may be living. It shall be the duty of the said commissioners, immediately upon the receipt of said accounts, to give notice to the treasurers of their respective counties of the amount of said accounts, with instructions to collect and retain money for the payment of said orders when presented.

For the purpose of fixing the amount to be charged for the maintenance and instruction of each inmate, the per capita cost of maintaining and conducting such house of refuge for the year terminating on the preceding thirty-first day of December shall be taken as the rate to be charged and one-half of such per capita cost, so calculated, shall be charged to the respective counties for each child from such counties.

Act of March 27, 1903, P. L. 83, supplementing Act of May 11, 1901, P. L. 158.

The Act of May 11, 1901, P. L. 158 seems to be entirely supplied by the above Act of March 27, 1903, P. L. 83, which was evidently passed because the Act of 1901 had been declared unconstitutional by the Court of Common Pleas of Luzerne County in 1902, which ruling was subsequently reversed by the Supreme Court in House of Refuge v. Luzerne County, 215, Pa. 429.

398. Payment of Costs of Maintenance of Children in Institutions Outside the State. Where the courts of quarter sessions of the peace of any county within this Commonwealth heretofore have or hereafter may sentence and commit children or minors, under the various juvenile court acts of this Commonwealth to homes or institutions without this Commonwealth, in every such case such county, from which such child or minor had been or shall be so sentenced, shall be liable for a reasonable charge for such maintenance, when the amount is ascertained and approved as hereinafter provided for.

Sec. 1, Act of June 7, 1911, P. L. 676.

399. Institution Without the State to Present Statement of Claim. Adult. Such institution shall prepare a written itemized statement of its claim, in such form and detail as the controller of the county shall prescribe, which statement shall be signed and sworn to by its president, attested by its secretary, and shall be under its corporate seal, if incorporated, or, if not incorporated, the written statement shall show the fact, and shall be signed and sworn to by its superintendent, and attested by its chief clerk; and, when so prepared and presented to the proper officers of the respective county, it shall be audited, and the sum or sums found to be reasonably and equitably due by such officers shall be paid.

Sec. 2, Act of June 7, 1911, P. L. 676.

400. Cost of Support and Maintenance of Delinquents Committed by United States Courts to be Paid by the United States. The cost for the support and maintenance of each convict, admitted into any such reform institution under the provision of this act, shall be paid for by the United States, in the same manner as the United States now pays or may hereafter pay for the support and maintenance of persons convicted in the circuit and district courts of the United States in and for the Eastern and Western districts of Pennsylvania, and sentenced and committed to county jails or State penitentiaries in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Sec. 2, Act of March 22, 1899, P. L. 15, No. 12.

This section refers to persons resident of the Commonwealth sentenced to any reformatory, house of refuge, or other institution for juvenile delinquents or juvenile convicts by any circuit or district court of the United States. See Sec. 1, Act of Mar. 22, 1899, P. L. 15, supra section. 382.

L. INSTITUTIONAL CARE.

1. Provisions Relating to Institutions in General.

401. Boards of Trustees of State Institutions created. The following departmental administrative boards and commissions are hereby created in the respective administrative departments, as follows:

In the Department of Public Instruction—
Board of Trustees of Home for Training in Speech of Deaf Children before They are of School Age.
Board of Trustees of Pennsylvania Soldiers' Orphan School.
In Department of Welfare—
Board of Trustees of Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory.
Board of Trustees of State Industrial Home for Women.
Board of Trustees of Pennsylvania Training School.

Part of Sec. 203, Act of June 7, 1923, P. L. 498.

The appointive members of these boards are appointed by the Governor by and with the advice and consent of two thirds of all the Members of the Senate, under Sec. 206 (b) of this act.

402. Board of Trustees of State Institutions. How Constituted. The board of trustees of each of the State institutions hereinafter mentioned shall consist of nine members and the head of the department having supervision over the institution ex-officio.

Of the first members of each such board appointed under this act, three shall be appointed for two years, three for four years, and three for six years. Thereafter all appointments shall be for terms of six years.

Five members of any such board shall constitute a quorum.

Each such board shall annually elect a president and vice-president from among its members, and a secretary and treasurer who need not be members of the board. The secretary and treasurer may be the same person.

The section shall apply to—

Board of Trustees of Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory.
Board of Trustees of State Industrial Home for Women.
Board of Trustees of Pennsylvania Training School.
Board of Trustees of Home for Training in Speech of Deaf Children before They are of School Age.

403. Transfer of Functions of Abolished Boards of Managers. All rights, powers, and duties, which have heretofore been vested in, exercised by, or imposed upon any officer whose office is abolished by this act, or any board, commission, institution, bureau, division, or department abolished by this act, or any deputy, officer, agent, or other subordinate or employe thereof, and which are by this act transferred, either in whole or in part, to a department, board, or commission created by this act, shall be vested in, exercised by, and imposed upon the department, board, or commission to which the same are transferred by this act, and not otherwise; and every act done in the exercise of such rights or powers and the performance of such duties shall have the same legal effect as if done by the former officer, board, commission, institution, bureau, division, or department, or deputy, officer, agent, or other subordinate or employe thereof. Every person or corporation shall be subject to the same obligation and duties, and shall have the same rights arising from the exercise of such rights or powers or in the performance of such duties, as if such rights or powers had been exercised or such duties performed by the officer, board, commission, institution, bureau, division, or department, or deputy, officer, agent, or other subordinate or employe thereof, designated in the respective laws which are to be administered by departments, boards, or commissions created by this act. Every person and corporation shall be subject to the same penalty or penalties, civil or criminal, for failure to perform any such obligation or duty, or for doing a prohibited act, as if such obligation or duty arose from, or such act where prohibited in, the exercise of such rights, powers, or duties by the officer, board, commission, institution, bureau, division, or department, deputy, officer, agent or other subordinate or employe thereof, designated in the respective laws which are to be administered by the departments, boards, or commissions created by this act.

Sec. 3, Act of June 7, 1923, P. L. 498.

404. Administration of State Appropriations by Department of Welfare. The Department of Welfare shall have power, and its duty shall be:

(a) Whenever the General Assembly shall have specifically appropriated money to the department for the purpose, to issue requisitions upon the Auditor General for warrants to be drawn by the Auditor General upon the State Treasurer, in favor of such hospitals, homes and institutions as shall conform to at least the minimum standards of plant, equipment, service, administration, and care and treatment established by law, in amounts computed upon the per diem rates of payment established by laws for free service to indigent persons, as follows:

1. The care and treatment of sick or injured persons in hospitals.
2. The care of dependent, delinquent, and defective children in homes or institutions.
3. The care of dependent adults in homes or institutions.
4. The care and treatment of crippled children in homes or hospitals.
5. The care, treatment, and removal of insane persons in county hospitals for the insane or private institutions licensed by the department.
6. The removal of nonresident dependent children.
7. The placement of dependent children through child-caring agencies.

(b) To approve requisitions issued by hospitals, homes, or institutions to which the General Assembly shall have appropriated money for care and treatment of indigent persons, if such hospitals, homes, or institutions shall conform to at least the minimum standards of plant, equipment, service, administration, and care and treatment established by law, and if such requisitions are in the amounts to which such hospitals, homes, or institutions are entitled according to law;

(c) To establish rules and regulations, not inconsistent with law, for determining the number of free days, of care and treatment rendered to indigent persons by hospitals, homes, or institutions.

Sec. 2017, Act of June 17, 1923, P. L. 498.

405. Duty of Department of Welfare as to Visitations and Inspections. The Department of Welfare shall have the power and its duty shall be:

(a) To make and enforce rules and regulations for the visitation examination, and inspection of all supervised institutions;

(b) To visit and inspect, at least once in each year, all State, semi-State, and supervised institutions, to inquire and examine into their methods of instruction, discipline, detention, imprisonment, care, or treatment, the care, treatment, government, or management of their inmates or those committed thereto or being imprisoned, detained, treated, or residing therein, the official conduct of their inspectors, trustees, managers, directors, or other officer or officers charged with their management by law or otherwise or having the management, care, custody or control thereof, the buildings, grounds, premises, and equipment thereof connected therewith, and all and every matter and thing relating to their usefulness, administration, and management, and to the welfare of the inmates thereof or those committed thereto or being imprisoned, detained, treated, or residing therein.

For these purposes the Secretary of Welfare, or other officer, inspector, or agent of the department shall have free and full access to the grounds, premises and buildings of, and to all the records books or papers of or relating to, any such State, semi-State or supervised institution, and full opportunity to interrogate or interview any inmate thereof, or any person or persons committed to or being imprisoned, detained, treated, or residing therein, and all persons connected with any such State, semi-State, or supervised institution as officers or charged with the management thereof by law or otherwise, or in any way having the care, custody, control, or management thereof, or connected therewith as employes, are hereby directed and required to give to the Secretary of Welfare, or to such officer, inspector, or agent of the department, such means, facilities, and opportunity for such visitation, examination, inquiry, and interrogation as is hereby provided and required, or as the Department by its duly ordained rules or regulations, may require;

(c) Whenever upon the visitation, examination, and inspection of any State, semi-State or supervised institution, any condition is found to exist therein which, in the opinion of the department, is unlawful, unhygienic, or detrimental to the proper maintenance and discipline of such State, semi-State, or supervised institution, or to the proper maintenance, custody, and welfare of the inmates thereof, or of the persons committed thereto or being treated, detained, or residing therein, to direct the officer or officers charged by law with, or in any way having or exercising the control, government, or management of such State, semi-State, or supervised institution, to correct the said objectionable condition in the manner and within the time specified by the Department;

(d) To cause to be visited and examined any person found by an inquisition to be insane, and to authorize such visiting and examining by an officer or agent of the department, or any board of visitors, or by a physician, and to apply to the court having jurisdiction over the committee or guardian of such insane person, or to the judge of a court of common pleas of the county in which the insane person is a resident or detained, to make such orders for the maintenance, custody, or care of the insane person, and for the care and disposition of the property of the insane person, as the case may require.

Sec. 2004, Act of June 7, 1923, P. L. 498.

"Supervised institution" as defined by Sec. 2002, of the same act as follows:

"(e) 'Supervised Institution' shall mean any charitable institution within the Commonwealth which receives financial assistance from the Commonwealth, either directly or indirectly, and to which the Governor does not appoint any member of the board of inspectors, managers, trustees, or directors, all houses or places within the Commonwealth in which any person of unsound mind is detained, whenever the occupant or owner of the house or person having charge of such person of unsound mind receives any compensation for custody, control, or attendance, other than as an attendant or nurse, and also all institutions, houses or places in which more than one such person is detained with or without compensation paid for custody or attendance, all children's institutions and maternity homes and hospitals within the Commonwealth, all homes or hospitals for crippled children within the Commonwealth, all prisons, jails, hospitals, almshouses, or poorhouses maintained by any county, city, borough, township, or poor district of this Commonwealth, and all institutions, and societies within this Commonwealth into whose care the custody of delinquent dependent, or neglected children may be committed, and all houses and places maintained by such institutions, associations, or societies in which such children may be kept or detained."

406. Appointment of Visitorial Bodies by Department of Welfare. The Department of Welfare shall have the power to appoint a bord of three or more members in any county of the Commonwealth to act, without compensation, as a board of visitors to visit any supervised institution in such county in aid of, and as the representatives of, the department; such board to make a report of such visitation as the department may require. It shall be the duty of the officers or other persons having charge of such institution to afford full facilities for such board to make an examination thereof.

Sec. 2005, Act of June 7, 1923, P. L. 498.

407. Visitation etc. by State Agent. The General Agent and Secretary of the Board of Public Charities shall (hold his office for three years, unless sooner removed; he shall be a member of the board ex-officio; and it shall be his duty to cause a correct record of its proceedings to be kept) oversee and conduct its out-door business, visit all (charitable, penal), reformatory, and correctional institutions in the State at least once in each year, except as hereinafter provided, and as much oftener as the board may direct; he shall prepare a series of interrogations. with the necessary accompanying blanks, to the several institutions of charity, reform, and correction in the State, and to those having charge of the poor in the several counties thereof, or any subdivision of the same, with a view to illustrate in his annual report the causes and best treatment of pauperism and crime, and shall have free access to all reports and returns now required by law to be made; and he may also propose, for the approval of the board, such general investigations as he may think best.

Part of Sec. 1, Act of May 1, 1913, P. L. 149 amending Sec. 4, Act of Apr. 24, 1869, P. L. 90.

The Board of Public Charities was abolished by the Act of May 25, 1921, P. L. 1144, which transferred its powers and duties to the Department of Welfare.

Quaere: Whether this provision is not supplied by Sec. 2004, of the Administrative Code, supra Sec. 405.

408. State Supervision of Institutions. The said commissioners shall have full power, either by themselves or the general agents at all times to look into and examine the condition of the charitable reformatory, or correctional institutions within the State, financially and otherwise; to inquire and examine into their methods of instruction, the government and management of their inmates, the official conduct of trustees, directors, and other officers and employes of the same the condition of the buildings, grounds, and other property connected therewith, and into all other matters pertaining to their usefulness and good management; and for these purposes they shall have free access to the grounds, buildings, and all books and papers relating to said institutions; and all persons now or hereafter connected with the same are hereby directed and required to give such information, and afford such facilities for inspection, as the said commissioners may require; and any neglect or refusal on the part of any officer or person connected with such institution to comply with any of the requirements of this act shall subject the offender to a penalty of one hundred dollars ($100.00), to be used for and collected by the general agent in the name of the board.

Part of Sec. 2, Act of May 1, 1913, P. L. 149, amending Sec. 5, of Apr. 24, 1869, P. L. 90.

The commissioners herein referred to are the commissioners of the Board of Public Charities. See note to section immediately preceding.

409. Visitation by State Agents. The said commissioners, by themselves or their general agent, are hereby authorized and required, at least once in each year, to visit all the charitable and correctional institutions of the State receiving state aid, and ascertain whether the moneys appropriated for their aid are or have been economically and judicially expended; whether the objects of the several institutions are accomplished; whether the laws in relation to them are fully complied with; whether all parts of the State are equally benefitted by them, and the various other matters referred to in the fifth section of this act; and in their annual report to the legislature, to embody the result of their investigations, together with such other information and recommendations as they may deem proper.

Sec. 6, Act of Apr. 24, 1869, P. L. 90. The "Commissioners" herein referred to are the Commissioners of the Board of Public Charities. See note to Sec. 407 Spra.

410. Supervision of Institutions Other Than State Institutions. When Children Not to be Committed to Such Institutions. The institutions, associations, and societies, into whose care the custody of delinquent, neglected or dependent children may be committed by order of the courts of this Commonwealth, shall be subject to the same visitation, inspections, and supervision of the Board of Public Charities of the public charitable institutions of this State; and the courts of common pleas of this Commonwealth may require such information and statistics from such institutions, associations or societies as said judges deem necessary in order to enable them to exercise a wise discretion in dealing with children. Every such institution, association or society shall file with the Board of Public Charities an annual written or printed report, which shall contain a statement of the number of children cared for during the year, the number received, the number placed in homes, the number died, the number returned to friends; also, a financial statement, showing the receipts and disbursements of such institutions, associations or societies. The statement of receipts shall indicate the amounts received from public funds, the amount received from other sources, specifying the several sources. The statement of disbursements shall show the amount expended for salaries and other expenses, specifying the same; the amount expended for lands, buildings and investments. The secretary of the Board of Public Charities shall furnish to each of the said courts of common pleas a list of such institutions, associations, and societies filing such annual reports, and no child shall be committed to the care of any such institution, association or society which shall not have filed a report; for the fiscal year last preceding, with the Board of Public Charities.

Sec. 1, Act of Mar. 5, 1903, P. L. 11.
The Board of Public Charities was abolished by the Act of May 25, 1921, P. L. 1144, which transferred its powers and duties to the Department of Welfare.

411. Appointment of Board of Visitors by Court of Common Pleas. That it shall be the duty of the court of common pleas in each county within this Commonwealth to appoint a board, consisting of six or more reputable citizens, who shall serve without compensation, to constitute a Board of Visitors, whose duty it shall be to visit, at least once a year, all institutions, societies, and associations, within the county, into whose care and custody dependent, neglected, and delinquent children shall be committtd under the provisions of the law of this Commonwealth; and all charitable, reformatory, or penal institutions, and all institutions, within the county, which receive their inmates from more than one county, and art supported or managed, in whole or in part by the Commonwealth, or any of the officers thereof; and all institutions, within the county, which are wholly supported and managed by any city, county, borough, or poor district of the Commonwealth. Such visits shall be made monthly by not less than two of the members of the board, who shall report to the Board. The said Board of Visitors shall make reports to the court from time to time, on matters pertaining to the welfare of the institutions, particularly the treatment received by the inmates. A copy of such report shall be submitted by the board to the persons in charge of such institutions, societies, and associations. The board shall make an annual report to the Board of Public Charities. The said Board of Visitors shall be entitled to receive, from the counties in which they shall be appointed, such sum or sums of money for actual and necessary expenses as may be approved by the board of county commissioners in their respective counties.

Sec. 1, Act of June 6, 1913, P. L. 452, amending Sec. 1, Act of Feb. 26, 1903, P. L. 8.
The Board of Public Charities was abolished by the act of May 25, 1921, P. L. 1144 which transferred its powers and duties to the Department of Welfare.
The Board of Visitation has power to visit only those charitable, reformatory or penal institutions to which children or adults or both are committed by some legal authority under the provisions of some law of this Commonwealth, and not those institutions in which children are placed by parents, guardians or friends without legal commitment. Such visits should be made monthly by at least two members of the board: Opinion of Attorney General, December 2, 1913, Board of Visitation, 22 Dist. Rep. 313.

412. Nomination of Visitors. That the court of common pleas in each county within this Commonwealth may receive nominations of persons for appointment on the said boards of visitation, submitted to the court by any corporation organized under the laws of this Commonwealth for the study and improvement of the conditions of charitable, reformatory, or penal institutions, and such nominations shall in no way interfere with the exercise of free discretion by the court in making such appointments.

Sec. 2, Act of June 6, 1913, P. L. 452.
The nominations herein referred to are to the Boards of visitors appointed under the section immediately preceding.

413. When Official Visitors may Enter Penal and Reformatory Institutions. Any person designated by law to be official visitor of any (jail, penitentiary, or other) penal or reformatory institution, in this Commonwealth, maintained at the public expense, is hereby authorized and empowered to enter and visit any such (jail, penitentiary, or other) penal or reformatory institution, on any and every day, including Sundays, between the hours of nine o'clock ante meridian, or five o'clock, post meridian; and not before nine o'clock ante meridian, or five o'clock, post meridian, except with the special permission of the warden, manager, overseer, or superintendent in charge of any such (jail, penitentiary, or other) penal or reformatory institution.

Sec. 1, Act of May 14, 1909, P. L. 838.

414. Interviews With Inmates of Penal and Reformatory Institutions by Official Visitors. Upon any such visit of any official visitor to any such (jail, penitentiary, or other) penal or reformatory institution, such visitor shall have the right to interview privately any prisoner or inmate confined in any such (jail, penitentiary, or other) penal or reformatory institution, and for that purpose to enter the cell, room, or apartment wherein any such prisoner or inmate shall be confined: Provided, however, That if any warden, manager, overseer, superintendent, or person in charge of such institution at the time of such visit, shall be of the opinion that such entry by the official visitor into the cell, room, or apartment of such prisoner or inmate would be dangerous to the discipline of the institution, then and in that case the said warden, superintendent, overseer, manager, or person in charge, conduct any prisoner or inmate within whom such official visitor may desire a private interview, into such other cell, room or apartment within the institution as he may designate, and there permit the private interview between the official visitor and such prisoner or inmate to take place: Provided, further however, That no official visitor shall have the right or power of privately interviewing any such prisoner or inmate except prisoners or inmates of the same sex as such official visitors.

Sec. 2, Act of May 14, 1909, P. L. 838.

415. Official Visitors Prohibited From Giving Anything to Inmates. Exceptions. All powers, functions, and privileges heretofore belonging to official visitors of (jail, penitentiary and) penal or reformatory institutions, under the common statute laws, are hereby confirmed: Provided, however, That no such official visitor shall have the right or power to give or deliver to any prisoner or inmate of any such (jail, penitentiary, or) penal or reformatory institution during such visit, any chattel or object whatsoever, except objects and articles of religious or moral instruction or use.

Sec. 3, Act of May 14, 1909, P. L. 938.

416. Penalty. Removal as Official Visitor. If any such official visitor shall violate any of the prohibitions herein contained, any warden, manager, overseer, or superintendent, of any such (jail, penitentiary,) penal or reformatory institution, may apply to any court of common pleas of the county wherein such institution may be situated, for a rule upon such visitor to show cause why he or she should not be deprived of his or her office; and upon proof to the satisfaction of said court being made, such court shall enter a decree against such official visitor, depriving him or her of all rights, privileges, and functions of official visitor.

Sec. 4, Act of May 14, 1909, P. L. 938.

417. Jurisdiction of Municipal Court of Philadelphia Over Houses of Detention. Board of Managers. Hereafter the municipal court of Philadelphia shall have exclusive jurisdiction ove rall houses of letention that are now or may hereafter be established within the limits of the city of Philadelphia, for the care of delinquent, dependent, and neglected children; and that the board of managers of the said house or houses of detention shall hereafter be appointed by the judges of the municipal court of Philadelphia, to the exclusion of any authority to appoint said board that may be now vested in the judges of the court of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery, and the courts of quarter sessions of the peace, having jurisdiction in the said city.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 26, 1917, P. L. 108.

418. Power of Board of Managers of Houses of Detention in Philadelphia County. The said board of managers shall have the same power and authority, and shall serve for the same term, and be subject to the same supervision, as now provided by law; subject, however, to removal from office by the judges of the municipal court of Philadelphia.

Sec. 2, Act of Apr. 26, 1917, P. L. 108.

2. Correctional Institutions

(Note: It seems that juvenile courts have jurisdiction to commit children only under the age of sixteen years. These commitments may be made to the Pennsylvania Training School at Morganza, Glen Mills Schools, Homes for Friendless Children, the Philadelphia Protectory, and certain incorporated societies. In counties containing a population from 300,000 to 1,200,000 male children may be committed by juvenile courts to the county schools established for that purpose, and in counties containing a population from 750,000 to 1,200,000 female children may be committed to similar institutions established for similar purposes. To these county schools may also be committed juvenile offenders from counties other than those by which the schools are maintained. The House of Correction, Employment and Reformation, seems to be devoted largely to the reception of persons convicted in the municipal court, sitting as a misdemeanants' Court.

It may also be pertinent to note at this place that Sec. 10, Act of Apr. 23, 1903, P. L. 274, supra Sec. 381, makes it unlawful to commit the custody of any neglected or dependent child * * * * to any institution of correction or reformation in which delinquent children are received, or to commit any delinquent child to any institution in which dependent or neglected children are received.)

(a) State Institutions. General Provisions.

419. Powers and Duties of Boards of Trustees of State Institutions. The board of trustees of each State institution within the Department of Welfare shall have general direction and control of the property and management of such institution. It shall have the power and its duty shall be:

(a) To elect a superintendent or warden of the institution who shall, subject to the authority of the board, administer the institution in all its departments;

(b) On nomination by the superintendent or warden, from time to time to appoint such officers and employes as may be necessary;

(c) To fix the salaries of its employes in conformity with the standards established by the Executive Board:

(d) Subject to the approval of the Secretary of Welfare, to make such by-laws, rules, and regulations for the management of the institution as it may deem wise.

The boards of trustees of the several State institutions created by this act shall exercise the foregoing powers in the management of such institutions, as follows:

Board of Trustees of Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory, of Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory, at Huntingdon.

Board of Trustees of State Industrial Home for Women, of State Industrial Home for Women, at Muncy.

420. Huntingdon Reformatory. The Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory at Huntingdon was established by the Act of June 8, 1881, P. L. 63. By Sec. 4 of the Act of Apr. 28, 1887, P. L. 63 provision was made for the commitment to the institution by any court exercising criminal jurisdiction, "any male criminal between the age of fifteen and twenty-five years and not known to have been previously sentenced to a State prison in this or any state or country." In the report of the board of managers of this institution for the years 1919-1920 the statement is made that the Huntingdon Reformatory cannot receive persons committed by the Juvenile Courts.

Compiler's note.

421. State Industrial Home for Women. The State Industrial Home for Women at Muncy Station was established by the Act of July 25, 1913, P. L. 1311, and receives by commitment of any court of record in this Commonwealth exercising criminal jurisdiction, any female between sixteen and thirty years of age, upon conviction for, or upon pleading guilty of, the commission of any criminal offense punishable under the laws of this State.

Compiler's note.

422. Incorporation of "The House of Refuge of Western Pennsylvania". All such persons as shall become subscribers in an association, in the manner hereinafter provided, shall be a corporation and body politic in law, by the name, style and title of "The House of Refuge of Western Pennsylvania;" and by that name, and style and title shall have succession; with the power to have a common seal, and to change the same at pleasure; to establish, erect and manage a house of refuge in the counties of Allegheny or Westmoreland, and to make contracts relative to the same; to sue and be sued, and by that name and title be capable in law, of purchasing, taking, holding and conveying any estate, real or personal, for the use of the said corporation; and to establish by-laws and orders for the regulation of the institution, and the preservation and application of the funds thereof: Provided, The same be not repugnant to the constitution and laws of the United States or of this Commonwealth.

Sec. 10, Act of April 22, 1850, P. L. 538.

This institution, originally the House of Refuge of Western Pennsylvania, was styled, by the Act of March 20, 1872, P. L. 27, The Pennsylvania Reform School. By order of the court of Common Pleas of Allegheny County, (No. 377 First Term 1912) the name of the institution was changed to the Pennsylvania Training School.

423. Membership in Corporation. Every person who shall subscribe the articles of such association, and pay to the funds of the institution the sum of fifty dollars, or ten dollars annually, for the term of six years shall be a member for life; and every person paying the sum of two dollars annually, shall be a member while he continues to contribute the said sum; such payment to be made at the time and in the manner to be prescribed by the by-laws of said association.

Sec. 11, Act of April 22, 1850, P. L. 538.

424. Management of Training School. Sec. 12 of the Act of April 22, 1850, which provided for the officers and board of managers of the institution was repealed by the Administrative Code (Act of June 7, 1923, P. L. 498), Sec. 435 of which (supra Sec. 402) creates a board of trustees for the Pennsylvania Training School. The broad powers and duties of the board are prescribed by Sec. 2019 of the Code (supra Sec. 419) and other powers and duties are transferred to it by reference (supra Sec. 403).

Compiler's note.

425. Regulations of Inmates. Appointment of Officers. Reporting to Legislature. That the said managers may from time to time make by-laws, ordinances and regulations relative to the management, government, instruction, discipline, employment and disposition of the said children while in the said house of refuge, not contrary to law, as they deem proper; and may appoint such officers, agents and servants as they may deem necessary, to transact the business of the said corporation, and may designate their duties; and further, the same managers shall annually lay before the contributors on the first Monday of January, and transmit to the legislature a report, setting forth the number of children received into the said house of refuge, the disposition which shall be made of them by instructing or employing them in the said house or refuge, or by binding them out as apprentices, the receipts and expenditures of said managers, and generally all such facts and particulars as may tend to exhibit the effects, whether beneficial or otherwise, of the said association; and the right is hereby reserved to the legislature to alter, amend or repeal this act.

Sec. 18, Act of 1850, April 22, P. L. 538.
See section immediately preceding.

426. Exemption of Taxes. That the ground and buildings erected thereon for the use and object of said association, shall be exempt from taxation.

Sec. 20, Act of April 22, 1850, P. L. 538.

427. Duties of Board of Managers. That the board of managers shall * * * * establish such regulations respecting the religious and moral education, training, employment, discipline and safe keeping of its inhabitants, as may be deemed expedient and proper.

Part of Sec. 14, Act of April 22, 1850, P. L. 538.
This would now be done by the board of trustees created by the Administrative Code, subject to the approval of the Secretary of Welfare. See supra Secs. 401 and 404.

428. Who May be Received by Commitment. Employment of Inmates. Vocational Training. It shall be lawful for the board of managers of said homes of refuge, at their discretion, to receive into their care and guardianship infants, males under the age of twenty-one years, and females under the age of twenty-one years, committed to their custody in either of the following modes, to wit:

First. Infants committed by an alderman or justice of the peace on the complaint, and due proof made thereof by the parent, guardian or next friend of such infant, that by reason of incorrigible or vicious conduct, such infant has rendered his or her control beyond the power of such parent, guardian or next friend, and made it manifestly requisite, that from regard to the morals and future welfare of such infant, he or she should be placed under the guardianship of the managers of the said house of refuge.

Second. Infants committed by the authority aforesaid, where complaint and due proof have been made that such infant is a proper subject for the guardianship of the managers of the said house of refuge, in consequence of vagrancy, or of incorrigible or vicious conduct, and that from the moral depravity or otherwise of the parent, or guardian or next friend, in whose custody such infant may be, such parent, guardian or next friend is incapable or unwilling to exercise the proper care and discipline over such incorrigible or vicious infant.

Third. Infants who shall be taken or committed as vagrants or upon any criminal charge, or duly convicted of criminal offenses as may in the judgment of the court of over and terminer, or of the court of quarter sessions of the peace of any county within the western district; and the said managers shall have power to place the said children committed to their care, during their minority, at such employment, and cause them to be instructed in such branches of useful knowledge as may be suitable to their years and capacities; and they shall have power at their discretion to bind out the said children, with their consent, as apprentices during their minority to such persons and at as in their judgment will be most conclusive to the reformasuch places, to learn such proper trades and employments tion and amendment, and will tend to the future benefit and advantages of children.

Sec. 15, Act of April 22, 1850, P. L. 538.
No child under the age of sixteen may now be committed by magistrates and justices of the peace to any institution, see Sec. 1, Act of March 26, 1903, P. L. 66, supra. Sec. 377.

429. Alderman and Justices of the Peace Committing Vagrants to Annex List of Witnesses. It shall be the duty of any alderman or justice aforesaid, committing a vagrant, or incorrigible or vicious infant as aforesaid, in addition to the adjudication required by the sixth section of this act, to annex to his commitment the names and residences of the different witnesses examined before him, and the substance of the testimony given by them respectively, on which the said adjudication was found.

Sec. 16, Act of April 22, 1850, P. L. 538.
See note to section immediately preceding.

430. Infants Convicted in District and Circuit Courts of the United States May be Committed. The managers of the House of Refuge for Western Pennsylvania shall have power to admit, into said House of Refuge, infants convicted of any criminal offense in any district or circuit court of the United States, in and for the Western district of Pennsylvania, in like manner as they are now authorized to admit infants convicted in the courts of oyer and terminer and quarter sessions: Provided, That no such infant shall be admitted, unless residing within the Western district of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

Sec. 1, Act of April 11, 1862, P. L. 425, No. 423 supplementing the Act of April 22, 1850, P. L. 538.

431. Children Committed to be Clothed Maintained and Instructed at County Expense. Accounts How Kept. The children received by said managers under the conviction of any court within the said western district, shall be clothed, maintained and instructed by the said managers at the public expense of the proper county from which they came; and the accounts of said children shall be kept by the said managers in the same manner that the accounts of convicts in the penitentiaries are now directed to be kept by the inspectors thereof.

Sec. 19, Act of April 22, 1850, P. L. 538.

432. Children Committed to be Properly Clothed, Maintained and Instructed. Commitments by Mayors, Aldermen and Justices of the Peace. The act of assembly, approved the twenty-second day of April, one thousand eight hundred and fifty (P. L. 538), entitled "An act to secure the cities of Pittsburgh and Allegheny, and the neighborhood thereof, by damage from gun-powder; to incorporate an association for the establishment of a house of refuge for Western Pennsylvania; and relative to the Pennsylvania State lunatic asylum," is hereby so amended in its nineteenth section, as to include in the enactment and provision therein made, also such children received by the managers of the said house of refuge as may be convicted, or committed thereto agreeably to the provisions of the charter thereof, by any mayor, alderman or justice of the peace within the said Western district: and further, that the mayors of any city within the said Western district shall have like authority with that given to alderman and justices of the peace to commit to the custody of the managers of the said house or refuge, and that any commitment heretofore made by any mayor of any such city, is hereby legalized and made good.

Sec. 1, Act of May 12, 1857, P. L. 454, No. 509.
extending the Act of April 22, 1850, P. L. 538.
No child under the age of sixteen may now be committed by magistrates and justices of the peace to any institutions, see Sec. 1, Act of March 26, 1903, P. L. 66, supra Sec. 377.

433. All Children Committed to be Properly Clothed, Maintained and Instructed. The nineteenth section of the act to which this is a further supplement, shall extend and apply to all children received into the house of refuge of western Pennsylvania.

Sec. 1, Act of January 31, 1855, P. L. 6, No. 9, supplementing the Act of April 22, 1850, P. L. 538.

The nineteenth section herein referred to is the nineteenth section of the Act of April 22, 1850, P. L. 538, supra section 431 See also sec. 1, of the Act of April 16, 1859, P. L. 219, supra sec. 432 amending said nineteenth section by extending the same to certain cases.

434. Power of Board Over Females. It shall be lawful for the board of managers of said institution, at their discretion, to retain or bind out female infants committed to their care (who may be sixteen years of age at the time they are committed), until they shall reach the age of twenty-one years.

Sec. 2, Act of January 31, 1855, P. L. 6. No. 9, supplementing Act of April 22, 1850, P. L. 538.

435. Indenturing of Children Committed. The boards of managers of the houses of refuge for the reformation of juvenile delinquents, in (Philadelphia and) Allegheny counties, are hereby respectively authorized, whenever they deem it for the interest of any white inmate duly committed to their custody to bind or indenture such white inmate to service during his or her minority, although the party to whom the indenture may be made may be a citizen of one of the United States other than this Commonwealth: Provided, That no such indenture to service out of this Commonwealth shall be made without the consent first given of said white inmate.

Sec. 1, Act of May 12, 1857, P. L. 454, No. 509.

436. Spiritful Ministrations to Inmates. From and after the passage of this act, all persons committed to the Western house of refuge shall be allowed, in all cases of sickness, spiritual advice and spiritual ministration from any organized clergymen of the denomination to which said inmate may belong; such advice and ministration to be obtained within sight of the person or persons having such inmates in charge; but if the person or persons seeking such, desire religious consolation out of hearing of any officer of said institution, then, in that instance, they shall not be debarred by any rule of said house of refuge.

Sec. 1, Act of April 8, 1862, P. L. 318, No. 333, supplementing the Act of April 22, 1850, P. L. 538.

437. County Chargeable with Expenses of Maintenance of Children Cimmitted. The county chargeable with the expense of any child committed to the House of Refuge for Western Pennsylvania shall be the county in which the parents of said child reside, or if there be no parents living or resident within this Commonwealth, then said expense shall be charged to the county wherein the person committed may have last resided for a period not less than ninety consective days: Provided, however, That where infants have been inmates of eleemosynary institutions prior to commitment to the house of refuge, the residence of such infants or of their parents prior to their having become inmates of said institutions shall be regarded as their domicile for the purpose of this act.

Sec. 1, Act of April 11, 1868, P. L. 847, No. 786.

(c) Semi-State Institutions. Glen Mills Schools.

438. Reason for Establishment. Whereas, An association of citizens of this Commonwealth hath been formed in the city and county of Philadelphia, for the humane and laudable purpose of reforming juvenile delinquents, and separating them from the society and intercourse of old and experienced offenders, with whom, within the prisons of the said city, they have been heretofore associated, and thereby exposed to the contamination of every species of vice and crime; and the members of the said association having prayed to be incorporated.

Preamble Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 133.

439. Incorporation of House of Refuge. All such persons as now are or shall hereafter become subscribers to the said association, in the manner herein after provided, be and they are hereby incorporated and made a body politic, in law by the name, style and title, of "The House of Refuge;" and by that name, style and title shall have perpetual succession, with the power to have a common seal, and to change the same at pleasure, to make contracts relatice to the institution, to sue and be sued, and by that name and style, be capable in law, of purchasing, taking, holding and conveying, any estate real or personal, for the use of said corporation: Provided, That the annual income of such estate, shall not exceed in value five thousand dollars, nor be applied to any other purposes than those for which this incorporation is formed, and also to establish by-laws and orders for the regulation of the society, and the preservation and application of the funds thereof: Provided, The same be not repugnant to the constitution and laws of the United States or of this Commonwealth.

Sec. 1, Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 133.

The change of name of this institution from the House of Refuge, adopted at the original organization in 1826, to Glen Mills Schools was made by order of the Court of Common Pleas, No. 4, (of Philadelphia,) on the petition of the managers. This change was made at the suggestion of many of the judges throughout the State, after due consideration by the board and the contributors.

440. Members of Association. Every person who hath subscribed the said articles of association, or who shall hereafter subscribe the same, and pay to the funds of the institution, the sum of fifty dollars, or ten dollars annually, for the term of six years, shall be a member for life; and every person paying the sum of two dollars annually, shall be a member while he continues to contribute the said sum; such payment to be made at the time and in the manner to be prescribed by the by-laws of the said association.

Sec. 2, Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 133.

441. Officers and Managers. The estate and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by the following officers: a president, two vice presidents, a treasurer and a secretary, and twenty-one managers, of whom five shall constitute a quorum, for the transaction of business, who shall appoint from their own body a chairman and a secretary, and prescribe the duties of each; that the members of the said association, shall assemble on the first Monday of May, annually, at such place in the said city as the board of managers may from time to time appoint, and of which the president, or in case of his absence or refusal to give the same, the secretary or any member of the said association, shall give notice in at least two of the daily papers of the city of Philadelphia, and elect by a plurality by ballots, the aforesaid officers; and whenever any vacancy shall occur by death removal from the city or county, or otherwise, the same shall be filled for the remainder of the year, by such person, being a subscriber to the said articles of association, as the board of managers for the time being, or a major part of them shall appoint: Provided, That notice of the election, to be held in May next, may be given by the committee appointed for that purpose, by a meeting of citizens held on the first day of March, instant.

Sec. 3, Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 133.

442. Election of Board of Managers. If the annual election shall not take place on the days appointed for that purpose, the said corporation shall not therefore be dissolved but the members of the said board shall continue in office until a new election, which shall be had at such time and place, and after such notice as the said board shall prescribe, and in case of an equality of votes for any one or more persons, as a member or members of the said board of managers, the said board shall determine which of such persons shall be considered as elected, and such person or persons shall take his or their seats, and act accordingly.

Sec. 4, Act of Mar. 24, 1826, P. L. 133.

443. Free from Tax. The lot of ground, and the buildings which may be erected thereon, for the use and objects of the said association shall be free of tax.

Sec. 8, Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 133.

444. Who May be Committed to House of Refuge of Philadelphia, Binding Out and Apprenticing of Inmates. The said managers shall at their discretion receive into the said house of refuge, such children who shall be taken up or committed as vagrants, or upon any criminal charge, or duly convicted of criminal offenses, as may be in the judgment of the court of oyer and terminer, or of the court of quarter sessions of the peace, of the county, or of the mayors courts of the city of Philadelphia, or of any alderman or justice of the peace, or of the managers of the almshouses and house of employment be deemed proper objects; and the said managers of the house of refuge shall have power to place the said children committed to their care, during the minority of the said children, at such employments, and cause them to be instructed in such branches of useful knowledge as may be suitable to their years and capacities; and they shall have power, in their discretion, to bind out the said children, with their consent, as apprentices, during their minority to such persons, and at such places, to learn such proper trades and employments, as in their judgment will be most conducive to the reformation and amendment, and will tend to the future benefit and advantage of such children: Provided, That the charge and power of the said managers upon and over the said children, shall not extend in the case of females, beyond the age of eighteen years.

Sec. 6, Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 133.

This act was held to be constitutional in ex parte Crouse 4, Wharton 9, and not depriving the children committed of their right of trial by jury. "The house of refuge is not a prison, but a school, where reformation, and not punishment, is the end."

The proviso in this section seems to be repealed by Sec. 7, Act of Apr. 11, 1850, P. L. 448, immediately following this section.

The children under the age of sixteen may no longer be committed by magistrates and justices of the peace, see Sec. 1, Act of Mar. 26, 1903, P. L. 66, supra Sec. 377.

445. Power and Charge of Managers Over Females. The power and charge of the managers of the House of Refuge over the inmates of that institution, shall extend in the case of females, who on their admission may be sixteen years of age, to the age of twenty-one years; and that so much of any law or laws of this Commonwealth as conflicts with the provisions of this section, be and the same is hereby repealed.

Sec. 7, Act of Apr. 11, 1850, P. L. 448.

It would seem that the repealing clause herein repeals the proviso in Sec. 6, Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. Mar. 2, 1827, P. L. 76, infra sec. 448.

446. Who May be Committed. In lieu of the manner prescribed by the sixth section of the act to which this is a supplement, it shall be lawful for the managers of the House of Refuge, at their discretion, to receive into their care and guardianship, infants, males under the age of twenty-one years, and females under the age of eighteen years, committed to their custody in either of the following modes, viz: First. Infants committed by an alderman or justice of the peace, on the complaint and due proof made to him by the parent, guardian, or next friend of such infant, that by reason of incorrigible or vicious conduct, such infant has rendered his or her control beyond the power of such parent, guardian or next friend, and made it manifestly requisite, that from regard for the morals and future welfare of such infant, he or she should be placed under the guardianship of the managers of the House of Refuge. Second: Infants committed by the authority aforesaid, where complaint and due proof have been made, that such infant is a proper subject for the guardianship of the managers of the House of Refuge, in consequence of vagrancy, or of incorrigible or vicious conduct, and that from the moral depravity or otherwise of the parent or next friend, in whose custody such infant may be, such parent or next friend is incapable or unwilling to exercise the proper care and discipline over such incorrigible or vicious infant. Third: Infants committed by the courts of this Commonwealth in the mode provided by the act to which this is a supplement.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 10, 1835, P. L. 133, supplementing the Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 133.

This act was held to be constitutional in ex parte Crouse 4, Wharton 9, and not depriving the children committed of their right of trial by jury. "The House of Refuge is not a prison, but a school, where reformation and not punishment, is the end."

Children under the age of sixteen may no longer be committed by magistrate and justices of the peace, see Sec. 1, Act of Mar. 26, 1903, P. L. 66, supra Sec. 377.

447. Alderman and Justices of the Peace Committing Delinquents to Annex Names of Witnesses. It shall be the duty of any alderman or justice aforesaid, committing a vagrant or incorrigible or vicious infant as aforesaid, in addition to the adjudication required by the first section of this act, to annex to his commitment the names and residence of the different witnesses examined before him, and the substance of the testimony given by them respectfully, on which the said adjudication was founded.

Sec. 2, Act of Apr. 10, 1835, P. L. 133, supplementing the Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 133.

See notes to the section immediately preceding.

448. Commitments by Quarter Sessions and Oyer and Terminer Other Than the County of Philadelphia. Maintenance and Instruction of Such Children. Apprenticing of Children. Control of Inmates by Managers of Institution. The managers of the house of refuge, shall receive into the same, such children who shall be convicted in the court of oyer and terminer or quarter sessions of any county except the county of Philadelphia, or mayors court of any city except the city of Philadelphia, of any offence which under the existing laws would be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary, as may be in the judgment of the said courts deemed proper objects for the house of refuge; and the children so received, shall be clothed, maintained and instructed by the said managers, at the public expense of the proper county; and the accounts of the said children shall be kept by the managers, in the same manner that the accounts of convicts in the penitentiary are now directed to be kept by the inspectors thereof, and the said managers, of the house of refuge shall have power to place the said children committed to their care during the minority of the said children, at such employments, and cause them to be instructed in such branches of useful knowledge as may be suitable to their years and capacities; and they shall have power, in their discretion to bind out the said children with their consent, as apprentices during their minority, to such persons, and at such places, to learn such proper trades and employments as in their judgment will be most conducive to the reformation and amendment and will tend to the future benefit and advantage of such children: Provided, That the charge and power of the said managers, upon and over the said children, shall not extend in the case of females beyond the age of eighteen years: And provided, That this section shall not be construed to apply to children received into the said house of refuge, from the city and county of Philadelphia, or to repeal or affect the sixth section of an act, entitled, "An act to incorporate the subscribers to the articles of association, for the purpose of establishing and conducting an institution for the confinement and reformation of youthful delinquents, under the title of 'the house of refuge,'" passed the twenty-third day of March, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six.

Sec. 4, Act of Mar. 2, 1827, P. L. 76.

It was attempted to repeal this section by the third section of the Act of Jan. 10, 1867, P. L. 1317. This repealing clause, however, was later to be ineffective on account of being unconstitutional. House of Refuge v. Luzerne Co., 215 Pa. 429. This section so far as it relates to the power and charge of the managers over females is repealed by Sec. 7, Act of Apr. 11, 1850, P. L. 448, Supra Sec. 445.

449. Commitments by Courts of Common Pleas of the Eastern District Other Than Philadelphia. In addition to the cases provided for by the fourth section of the act, entitled "An act to endow the House of Refuge, and for other purposes therein mentioned," passed the second day of March, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven (P. L. 76), the managers of "The House of Refuge" shall receive under their care and guardianship, infants under the age of twenty-one years, committed to their custody by two judges, the president judge being one, of the court of common pleas of any county in the eastern district of Pennsylvania, (which said district shall embrace all the counties of the Commonwealth from which infants cannot be sent to the "House of Refuge of Western Pennsylvania",) except the county of Philadelphia, in which said infant resides or may be found, on complaint and due proof made to them by the parent, guardian, or next friend of such infant, that such infant is unmanageable and beyond the control of the complainant and that the future welfare of said infant requires, that such infant should be placed under the care and guardianship of the said managers of the House of Refuge; or when said complaint and due proof shall be made by the prosecuting officer of the county, that said infant is unmanageable, or a vagrant, and has no parent, or guardian, capable and willing to restrain, manage and take proper care of such infant.

Sec. 1, Act of Jan. 26, 1854, P. L. 12, supplementing the Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 133.

450. Hearings Before Courts for Commitment of Delinquents to House of Refuge of Philadelphia. Testimony to be Taken Under Oath or Affirmation and to be Submitted to Managers of the Institution. The said judges shall carefully examine the complaint made to them in the presence of the complainant and infant complained of, and for the purpose of bringing the parties and witnesses before them, shall be fully authorized to use such process of the court as may be necessary; and where the said judges shall adjudge an infant to be a proper subject for the care and guardianship of the said managers of the House of Refuge, they shall, in addition to their adjudication, transmit to the said managers the testimony taken before them, on which their adjudication was founded; and the said testimony shall be taken under oath or affirmation of the witnesses, and in the presence of the party complained of.

Sec. 2, Act of Jan. 26, 1854, P. L. 12, supplementing the Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 133.

The "said Judges are judges of the court of common pleas of the Eastern district other than Philadelphia. See the section immediately preceding.

451. Power of Managers Over Committed Delinquents. The power and authority of the said managers of the House of Refuge shall be as full and ample, in all respects, over the infants committed to their care and guardianship under this act, as are given and granted to the said managers over infants committed to their care and guardianship from the county of Philadelphia, by the said act, entitled "An act to incorporate the subscribers to the articles of association for the purpose of establishing an institution for the confinement and reformation of juvenile delinquents, under the title of 'The House of Refuge'". (Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 133)

Sec. 3, Act of Jan. 26, 1854, P. L. 12 supplementing the Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 133.

452. Commitments by Courts of Quarter Sessions of the Eastern District Other Than Philadelphia. The managers shall, in their discretion, receive into the House of Refuge such children, as may be convicted of any misdemeanor, or criminal offense, in any court of quartersessions of any county, other than the county of Philadelphia, in the Eastern District of this Commonwealth, as shall, in the judgment of the said court, be deemed proper subjects for the care and guardianship of the managers of the house of refuge aforesaid.

Sec. 1, Act of Jan. 10, 1867, P. L. 1371, supplementing the Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 135.

Sec. 3, of this act was held unconstitutional because there was no notice of its provisions in the title: See House of Refuge v. Luzerne County, 215 Pa. 429.

This section and Sec. 2, next succeeding, do not seem to be affected by the decision.

453. Power and Authority of Managers Over Certain Inmates. The power and authority of the managers of the house of refuge aforesaid, shall be as full and ample, in all respects, over the children committed to their care and guardianship, under this act, as are given and granted to the said managers, over children committed to their care and guardianship, by the said act, entitled, "An act to incorporate the subscribers to the articles of association for the purpose of establishing and conducting an institution for the confinement and reformation of juvenile delinquents, under the title of the House of Refuge". (Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 133).

Sec. 2, Act of Jan. 10, 1867, P. L. 1371, supplementing the Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 135.

See notes to the section immediately preceding.

454. Indenture of Children Committed. The boards of managers of the House of Refuge for the reformation of juvenile delinquents, in Philadelphia, (and Allegheny) counties, are hereby respectfully authorized, whenever they deem it for the interest of any white inmate duly committed to their custody, to bind or indenture such white inmate to service during his or her minority, although the party to whom the indenture may be made may be a citizen of one of the United States other than this Commonwealth: Provided, That no such indenture to service out of this Commonwealth shall be made without the consent first given of said white inmate.

Sec. 1, Act of May 12, 1857, P. L. 454.

455. Official Visitors of House of Refuge of Philadelphia Duties of Visitors. Investigations into Commitments. It shall be the duty of the president and legal associates of the (court of common pleas of Philadelphia county, the judges of the district court of the city and county of Philadelphia, and the recorder of the city of Philadelphia, alternately, in such manner as may be arranged between them, at a joint meeting for that purpose from time to time held, to visit the House of Refuge, at least once in two weeks or oftener, if to the said judges it shall seem requisite; and it shall be the duty of the judge or recorder so visiting the House of Refuge, carefully to examine into all the commitments to the said House of Refuge, made by the aldermen, justice or guardians, of the poor aforesaid, that have not previously been adjudged upon by one of the said judges or the recorder in the manner hereinafter directed, which commitments it shall be the duty of the managers of the House of Refuge, truly and correctly, to lay before such judge or recorder, and on such examination, such judge or recorder shall have produced before him by the managers aforesaid, their superintendent or agent, the infant or infants described in such commitment, and the testimony upon which he or she shall have been adjudged a fit subject for the guardianship of said managers, or on which he or she shall be claimed to be held as such, and if after examining the infant and such testimony, the said judge or recorder shall be of opinion that according to the laws of this Commonwealth regulating the control of infants, a case has been established, which in his opinion, would according to law authorize the transfer of the parental authority over such infant to the managers of the House of Refuge, then and in that case it shall be the duty of the said judge or recorder to endorse an order on the commitment of the justice or alderman or guardians of the poor, directing the infant to be continued under the guardianship of the managers of the House of Refuge, after which it shall be lawful for said managers to exercise over all such infants, the powers and authorities given them by the act to which this is a supplement. But if the said judge or recorder shall be of opinion that such case has not been made out, he shall order such infant to be forthwith discharged, which order shall be obeyed by the managers, under the pains and penalties provided by law against wrongful imprisonment: Provided, That it shall be the duty of said judge or recorder, at the request of such infant or any person in his behalf, to transfer such hearing to the court house of the court of which he is a member, in order that the infant may have the benefit of counsel and of compulsory process to obtain witnesses, required in his or her behalf, which such judge or recorder is hereby authorized to award, as fully and amply as any judge or court could do on the hearing of writ of habeas corpus: And provided also, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to interfere with the provisions of an act, entitled "An act for the better securing of personal liberty and preventing unlawful imprisonment," passed on the eighteenth day of February, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-five. (2 Sm. 275; Vol. XI, page 427,) commonly called the habeas corpus act.

Sec. 3, Act of Apr. 10, 1835, P. L. 133, supplementing the Act of Mar. 23, 1826, P. L. 133.

For provisions as to visitation of institutions in general, see supra Secs. 405 to 416.

456. Inspectors of County Prison of Philadelphia May Deliver Colored Convicts to Colored House of Refuge of Philadelphia. It shall and may be lawful for the inspectors of the prisons of the county of Philadelphia, under the direction of the court of quarter sessions, to transfer and deliver to the managers of the Colored House of Refuge of the city and county of Philadelphia, with their assent, any colored convicts, under the age of twenty-one committed to said prison; and when so transferred, they shall be dealt with as other minors committed and delivered to the said managers.

Sec. 6, Act of Apr. 25, 1850, P. L. 569.
Quaere: Whether this institution is the House of Refuge of Philadelphia, now Glen Mills Schools?

457. Indenturing of Colored Inmates of House of Refuge of Philadelphia. The board of managers of the House of Refuge, for the reformation of juvenile delinquents, in Philadelphia, are hereby authorized whenever they may deem it for the interest of any colored inmate duly committed to their custody to bind or indenture such colored inmate to service during his or her minority, although the party to whom the indenture may be made may be a citizen of one of the United States, other than this Commonweath: Provided, That no such indenture to service out of this Commonwealth, shall be made without the consent first given of such colored inmate: Provided, further, That the said board of managers are not permitted to bind such colored inmates to persons residing within slave states.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 29, 1858, P. L. 452, No. 453.
See notes to section immediately preceding.

(d) State Aided Institutions.

458. Eight Hours to Constitute a Day's Labor in Reformatory Institutions. From and after the passage of this act, eight hours out of the twenty-four of each day shall make and constitute a days' labor and service in the (penitentiaries and) reformatory institutions which shall receive support from appropriation made by the General Assembly of this Commonwealth, and by the taxes levied and paid by the several counties thereof in whole or in part.

Sec. 1, Act of May 20, 1891, P. L. 100.
As to state institutions see supra Sec.

459. Superintendents and Officers Not to Allow or Compel More Than Eight Hours Work. All superintendent and officers over, and all persons authorized to make contracts for, and to employ persons for labor and service or appoint under-officers in, for and around said (penitentiaries and) reformatory institutions mentioned in the first section of this act, are hereby forbidden and prohibited under the penalties mentioned in the third section of this act, from allowing or compelling any of said employes or under-officers to give and serve any more than eight hours out of each twenty-four hours in such service or labor.

Sec. 2, Act of May 20, 1891, P. L. 100.

460. Governor to Investigate Charges of Violating Eight Hour Law. Suspension and Dismissal of Person Guilty of Violating Law. The Governor of this Commonwealth is hereby authorized and directed to execute and carry out the foregoing sections of this act, and is hereby authorized, empowered and directed, upon complaint and petition of any of the laborers, employes and under-officers mentioned in the foregoing sections, that he or they have been compelled or required to serve contrary to the provisions of same foregoing sections of this act, to hear and determine the same, and in the event of its appearing to him that the provisions of this act have been violated or in any manner evaded he is authorized and empowered to suspend or dismiss from his office or post the officer, superintendent or other person determined to be guilty of violating or evading the same, and that such vacancy caused by the suspension or dismissal of said officers, superintendents or other persons so determined to have violated the provisions of this act, shall be filled in the manner heretofore provided by law.

Sec. 3, Act of May 20, 1891, P. L. 100.

461. Repeal. Construction of Act. (All acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith be and the same are hereby repealed:) Provided, That this act shall not be construed to have reference to any institution wherein the employes are resident.

Sec. 4, Act of May 20, 1891, P. L. 100.

462. Employment of Inmates of Reformatory Institutions Receiving State Aid. Contract Labor Abolished. The chief officers of the various reformatory institutions, deriving their support wholly or in part from the State, are hereby directed at the expiration of existing contracts, to employ the inmates of said institutions for and in behalf of such institutions; and no labor shall be hired out by contract.

Sec. 2, Act of June y3, 1883, P. L. 112, No. 99.

(e) County Institutions.

463. Schools For Care And Education of Children Under Jurisdiction of Juvenile Courts. The county commissioners of the several counties of this Commonwealth are hereby authorized and empowered to establish and maintain a school or schools for the care and education of children, under the jurisdiction of the courts of quarter sessions of the peace, or other courts, sitting as juvenile courts, wherever, in the opinion of the county commissioners, or a majority of them, such school or schools are required in any county for the proper care and education of such children.

Sec. 1, Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 693.

464. Approval of Establishment of Juvenile Schools by Court Upon Petition of Commissioners. Whenever, in the opinion of the county commissioners of any county, a school or schools for the care and education of such children is required, they may petition the court of common pleas of the proper county, in writing, for their approval of the establishment and maintenance of such school; and if, in the opinion of said court, such school or schools are required, said court shall enter an order approving the establishment and maintenance thereof. If, in the opinion of said commisioners, or a majority of them; and in the opinion of said court, such school or schools are required, the county commissioners of any county are authorized and empowered to establish and maintain the same, upon the entry of such order by said court.

Sec. 2, Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 699.

465. Schools For Male or Female Children. Said county commissioners may, under this act, establish a school for male children a school for female children, or one school for both, as the needs of the particular county requires, with the approval of the court of common pleas in the manner herein provided.

Sec. 12, Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 693.

466. Construction and Equipment of Schools. Purpose. Any school established shall be established on the Cottage Home plan, and the buildings thereof shall be substantially constructed, and adequately lighted, and ventilated, and provided with baths, playrooms, sleeping rooms, and kitchens; and there shall be adequate provisions for playgrounds, as well as provisions for instruction in the common branches, and for manual, domestic, and moral training, to the end that said schools shall, as far as possible during the period of detention, adequately provide for the mental, moral, and physical welfare and advancement of the children therein detained, and in order that said schools may be supplementary to the public school system of the Commonwealth.

Sec. 5, Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 693.

467. Location of Schools. Acquisition of Land. The schools herein provided for may be established upon farms, within or without the limits of said counties, or at such other places in such counties as shall be selected by the commissioners thereof, with the approval of said board of managers; and for said purpose such counties may acquire as much land as shall, in the judgment of the county commissioners, be necessary for said purpose, by purchase or condemnation with the same power and under the same procedure as land is now acquired, under existing laws, by school districts for school purposes, the county commissioners exercising the authority exercised by school directors for that purpose.

Sec. 6, Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 693.

468. Appropriations by County for Support of School. Loans. The several counties of this Commonwealth are hereby authorized and empowered, by and through their county commissioners, or a majority of them, to appropriate annually, out of the general funds of such county, such amounts as are necessary to establish and maintain any such school or schools; and to levy taxes therefor, and to borrow money and to incur indebtedness in compliance with the laws regulating the increase of indebtedness by the counties of this Commonwealth, for the purpose of acquiring lands and erecting buildings necessary therefor, and for the purpose of enlarging, extending, or making additions to any such school or schools; and to issue, as evidence of such indebtedness, registered or coupon bonds, payable within thirty years from the date of their issue, and bearing interest at a rate not exceeding six per centum per annum, payable semiannually, which bonds shall not be sold for less than their par value and accrued interest; and to levy and collect taxes on all taxable property in the several counties, in addition to all other taxes, for the purpose of paying any indebtedness so incurred. Any county incurring any such indebtedness shall, at or prior to the time of incurring any such indebtedness shall, at or prior to the time of incurring the same, make provision for a sinking-fund to pay at maturity for any indebtedness so incurred.

Sec. 9, Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 693.

469. Expenditures. The county commissioners are authorized and empowered to pay, from time to time to the board of managers, out of the funds appropriated to it, sums not exceeding ten thousand dollars, by warrants countersigned by the county controller or county auditors, in the manner now used in the disbursement of funds of the county from which the expenditures necessary to the conduct of said school shall be made by the said board of managers, all of which said expenditures shall be subject to audit by the county controller or county auditor of the proper county.

Sec. 11, Act of July 4, 1917, P. L. 693.

470. Board of Managers. For more effectually carrying out the establishment and maintenance of said school or schools, in the event that such order is made, the said court of common pleas shall appoint a board of managers, consisting of nine citizens of the county, three of whom shall serve for one year, three for two years and three for three years, and thereafter three shall be appointed annually in the same manner. The members of said board shall be appointed as herein provided, as soon as convenient after the court of any county approves the petition of the county commissioners for the establishment and maintenance of such school or schools. Any vacancy occurring in said board shall be filled by said courts, and any member of said board may be removed at any time by the said court. Persons appointed to fill vacanicies shall serve for the unexpired term.

Sec. 3, Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 693.

471. One Board of Managers for Different Schools. Boards for Schools for Females to Contain One Woman Member. If a school for male children, and one for female children, is established in any county, under this act, the court of common pleas in its discretion may appoint the same board of managers, to conduct and manage both schools: Provided, however, That any board of managers, appointed for the management of a school to which female children are committed hereunder, shall have at least one woman as a member thereof.

Sec. 13, Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 693.

472. Powers and Duties of Board of Managers. Said board of managers shall meet from time to time as fixed by them, and shall report at least every six months to the county commissioners of the proper county, in the form by them prescribed. They shall have power to recommend the amount of money required for the establishment of the school or schools provided for, and the amount encessary for their annual maintenance, to appoint a superintendent and employes thereof hereinafter provided for, and to manage, supervise, and regulate the conduct of the said school or schools.

Sec. 4, Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 693.

473. Superintendent. Said school shall be presided over by a superintendent, who shall be a person trained in educational and social work, and said superintendent shall have the power of detention over the children committed thereto.

Part of Sec. 7, Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 693.

474. Election of Superintendent, Teachers and Employes. Salaries. Said board of managers shall have power to elect a superintendent, hereinbefore provided for, and such teachers, officers, and employes as are necessary for the proper management of said school. The number of said employes, and the salaries of said superintendent and employes, shall be fixed by said board of managers, with the approval of the county commissioners and the county controller or auditor of the county.

Sec. 10, Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 693.

475. Commitment. Said school shall receive children upon the commitment of the court of quarter sessions of the peace, or other court of such county, sitting as a juvenile court.

Sec. 8, Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 693.

476. Parole of Inmates. When any child committed to said school shall have attained a condition of mental and moral advancement satisfactory to the superintendent and the board of managers, they shall so certify to the juvenile court which committed said child to said school; whereupon the said court may order the release of said child, upon parole, under conditions which shall be prescribed by said board, by general rule and subject to the approval of the proper juvenile court; and in case the conduct of any child released upon parole shall be such as to satisfy the board of managers that a further period of training and detention is necessary such board shall certify said fact to the proper juvenile court; and thereupon such court shall have power, at any time during the minority of said child, to direct the apprehension and return of said child to said school, where it shall remain, subject to the same control as when originally committed thereto.

Part of Sec. 7, Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 693.

477. Schools for Juvenile Offenders Under Prior Acts. The act of May 1, 1909, P. L. 302. provided for the establishment, in counties then or thereafter having a population of not less than three hundred thousand inhabitants and not more than one million two hundred thousand inhabitants, of schools properly equipped for the care, maintenance and instruction of such male children as came within its provisions. These boys were defined in section six of said act as boys under commitment of the juvenile court of said county and boys committed thereto by juvenile courts of other counties. The act provided for the purchase of condemnation of ground, the construction of buildings, the appointment of a board of managers and for the maintenance of the school by appropriation to be made by the county commissioners.

The Act of May 5, 1915, P. L. 244 was similar to the Act of May 1, 1909, P. L. 302 but the school was for girls instead of boys. The latter act was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court in the case of Commonwealth ex rel. Brown v Gumbert et al 256 Pa. 531 and was repealed by the Act of July 11, 1917, P. L. 802. The decision above referred to is equally applicable to the Act of May 1, 1909, P. L. 302. Any action taken by any county under the provisions of the Act of 1909 were validated by the Act of May 29, 1917, P. L. 313.

Compiler's note.

478. Removal of Board Previously Appointed Under Prior Acts. Appointment of New Board. Any school or schools for the care and education of children under the jurisdiction of the juvenile courts, heretofore established and maintained by any county, under or by virtue of any act of Assembly heretofore enacted, shall forthwith come under the terms of this act; and any board of managers heretofore appointed for the purpose of managing any such school, under any act heretofore passed, shall be, and the same is hereby, removed; and it shall be the duty of the court of common pleas to forthwith appoint a board in conformity with the provisions of this act, for the purpose of maintaining and managing the said school under the terms hereof.

Sec. 14, Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 693.

479. Use of Land Acquired by County Under Prior Acts for School Purposes. Whenever heretofore any county of this Commonwealth has acquired land, or any other property, for a school for the care and education of either male or female children, under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court, by virtue of any acts heretofore enacted, it is hereby authorized and empowered to use any part of such land, or of such other property, for a school for either male or female children, or part thereof for a school for male and part thereof for a school for female children, if, in the judgment of the county commissioners, it is advisable so to do.

Sec. 15, Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 693.

480. Employment of Inmates of County Reformatory Institutions. The officers of the various county (prisons, workhouses and) reformatory institution within this Commonwealth, now letting the labor of convicts by contract, shall, at the expiration of existing contracts, employ the same for and in behalf of their respective counties.

Sec. 3, Act of June 13, 1833, P. L. 112, No. 99.

481. Inmates of County Reformatory Institutions. Number Of To Be Employed In Certain Vocations. The officers of the various county [prisons, workhouses, and] reformatory institutions, within the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, shall not employ more than five per centum of the whole number of inmates in said institutions in the manufacture of brooms and brushes and hollow-ware, and ten per centum in the manufacture of any other kind of goods, ware, articles, or other things that are manufactured elsewhere in the State, except mats and matting, in the manufacture of which twenty per centum of the whole number of inmates may be employed. Provided, This act shall not apply to goods manufactured for use of the inmates of such institution, or for any institution or the inmates of any institution supported, wholly or in part, by the county in which the prison, workhouse, or reformatory institution is located, or for the use of the county itself.

Sec. 1, Act of June 1, 1915, P. L. 654, amending Sec. 2, Act of June 18, 1897, P. L. 170, as amended by Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 28, 1899, P. L. 122.

This section seems to apply only to county institutions.

(f) Municipal Institutions.

482. Incorporation House of Correction, Employment and Reformation of Philadelphia. The managers of the house of correction, employment and reformation, for adults and minors, elected under ordinance of the councils of the city of Philadelphia, approved December twenty-ninth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy, and their successors forever, be and they are hereby erected and made a body politic and corporate, in deed and in law, by the name, style and title of the House of Correction, Employment and Reformation for adults and minors, in the city of Philadelphia, and shall have full power to make improvements, maintain and control the said institution, buildings and grounds; they shall elect a president, secretary and treasurer, and such other officers, teachers, keepers and servants, as may be necessary for the management of the institution, who shall hold their offices during good behavior, and they shall receive such compensation as they the said managers shall deem proper; the managers may make any by-laws and regulations they may deem expedient for their own government, or the government and discipline of the said house of correction, employment and reformation: Provided, The same shall not be inconsistent with the constitution and laws of the United States or of this Commonwealth.

Sec. 1, Act of June 2, 1871, P. L. 1301.

483. Powers of Board of Managers. The same power and authority that are given by ordinance of councils or acts of assembly to the guardians of the poor, prison inspectors and managers of the house of refuge of the city of Philadelphia, are hereby extended to the managers of the house of correction, employment and reformation of the city of Philadelphia.

Sec. 15, Act of June 2, 1871, P. L. 1301.

484. Purchase of Necessary Articles. Reports. The superintendent shall make a monthly requisition on the board of managers for all articles which he shall deem necessary for the said institution, and such as shall be approved by them shall be purchased; the superintendent shall, once in every month, report to the board of managers the number of persons committed, discharged, sick, dead or remaining in the institution, also the quality and kind of labor performed; and the Board of managers shall transmit annually, to the councils of Philadelphia, a condensed statement of the affairs of the institution.

Sec. 10, Act of June 2, 1871, P. L. 1301.

485. Annual Statement to Councils of Sums Necessary for Ensuing Year. The board of managers shall, on or before the first day of November of each year, submit to councils a statement of the sums necessary for the maintenance of the house of correction, employment and reformation for the ensuing term.

Sec. 18, Act of June 2, 1871, P. L. 1301.

486. Application for Appropriations for Deficiencies. For any deficiency in furnishing, keeping and maintaining said house of correction, employment and reformation, in conformity with the provisions of this act, the managers are authorized to apply to the said city councils for such sum or sums as shall be necessary, and the said city councils are hereby directed to appropriate the said sum or sums deemed necessary.

Sec. 11, Act of June 2, 1871, P. L. 1301.

487. Transfer of Inmates from Blockley and County Prison Commitment of Vagrants, Habitual Drunkards, Street Walkers and Disorderly Persons. (Minors). Transfer of Inmates of Poorhouses. (Whenever the managers of the house of correction, employment and reformation shall desire to make any additional permanent improvement, or purchase additional ground, and shall recommend that the same be done, and after the committee of councils of Philadelphia on house of correction shall endorse the said recommendation, then the councils of the city of Philadelphia shall make all necessary appropriations asked for by the said managers, for the purposes so recommended; and the managers of the house of correction, employment and reformation shall have power to superintend and direct the erection, completion and furnishing of said buildings during the progress of the said work. The said managers may extend from their property a single track railroad along and over such lands as may intervene between their ground and the Philadelphia and Trenton Railroad Company, and connect therewith: Provided, The said railroad company assent thereto, (the distance of the said road not to exceed two thousand yards,) and to purchase right of way over the land to Philadelphia and Trenton railroad, and to erect wharves upon their property; the managers may provide for such inmates as may be necessary to aid in the construction of the permanent building, and after the two first wings have been furnished,) the said board of managers shall have full and entire control to regulate the inmates therein, and shall at such time as they think proper, certify to the court of quarter sessions and to the board of managers of the Blockley almshouse, which court and managers and the inspectors of the Philadelphia county prison respectively thereafter commit to the said house of correction, employment and reformation, such able-bodied paupers and vagrants as may have been committed or sentenced to be confined in the county prison or Blockley almshouse for a period of not less than three months: and it shall be the duty of the said judges of the court of quarter sessions and the inspectors of the Philadelphia county prison to commit to said house of correction, employment and reformation, all vagrants, habitual drunkards, streetwalkers and disorderly persons, (adult or) minors, whom they may deem best to so confine: and it shall be the duty of the managers of the Blockley almshouse, managers of the poor for township of Germantown, managers of Lower Dublin and Oxford poor house, to transfer, within twenty-four hours after entrance in said almshouse, all ablebodied paupers, (adults or) minors, except such as may be necessary to employ in the service of said almshouses.

Sec. 2, Act of June 2, 1871, P. L. 1301.

488. Commitment to Institution. Instruction and Binding Out of Inmates. The managers of the house of correction, employment and reformation, or any one of them, may commit thereto any and all persons who are willing to be so committed; and the mayor and recorder of the city of Philadelphia, the inspectors of the county prison, and all committing magistrates in the city and county of Philadelphia, may and they are hereby authorized to commit to said house of correction, employment and reformation, for any period of time not less than three nor more than twelve months, all or any person or persons who, under existing laws, are liable to be committed to places of confinement, who shall apply to them for such purpose; all persons, (adults or) minors, that may hereafter be convicted, according to the existing laws of this Commonwealth, before the mayor or recorder, or any alderman of the city of Philadelphia, as a vagrant, drunkard or disorderly street walker, shall be sentenced to suffer confinement in the said house of correction, employment or reformation for the terms hereinafter mentioned, and to be fed, clothed and treated in the manner hereinafter mentioned; and any minors not under sixteen years of age, except by permission of the board of managers, absenting themselves from school or who shall disobey their parents' command, or be found idle in the streets, may be arrested, upon the complaint of the parents of said minor or upon the complaint of any citizen and after the examination of the case, if the mayor, recorder or magistrate shall deem the charges sustained, he shall commit said minor to the house of correction, employment and reformation for such length of time as he may regard proper: Provided, That the time of incarceration for a boy shall not exceed his maturity, twenty-one years of age, nor a girl beyond the age of eighteen years, except in cases where a commitment for the time heretofore named, of not less than three months, nor more than twelve months, would exceed the ages specified; and managers shall have power, in their discretion to place the said children committed to their care, during the time of commitment of the said children, at such employment and cause them to be instructed in such branches of useful knowledge as may suited to their years and capacities, and to place them at such work as they may be able to do, and to bind them out to such tradesmen or employers as may offer to receive them until the expiration of their commitment, under such regulations and conditions as the managers may agree upon.

Sec. 3, Act of June 2, 1871, P. L. 1301.

489. Commitment of Certain Children Over the Age of Sixteen. All children, not under the age of sixteen years, deserting their homes without good and sufficient cause, or keeping company with dissolute or vicious persons, against the lawful command of their fathers, mothers, or guardians, or other person standing in the place of a parent, shall be deemed disorderly children.

Sec. 4, Act of June 2, 1871, P. L. 1301.

Part of the jurisdiction of the Municipal Court of Philadelphia seems to be conferred with a view of embracing those cases in which convicted persons were formerly sentenced to the House of Correction, Employment and Reformation in Philadelphia by the mayor and aldermen of this city. The jurisdiction above referred to, which is exclusive, is found in the Act of June 17, 1915, P. L. 1017, amending Sec. 11, Act of July 12, 1913, P. L. 711, and is as follows:

"(c) In all proceedings concerning, or trials of charges brought against, all persons, whether adults or minors, accused of disorderly street walking.

(d) In all proceedings concerning, or trials of charges brought against, all minors between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one years who shall disobey their parents' command, or be found idle in the streets, and against all disorderly children.

(e) All children not under the age of sixteen years deserting their homes without good and sufficient cause, or keeping company with dissolute or vicious persons, against the lawful commands of their fathers, mothers or guardians, or other persons standing in the place of a parent, shall be deemed disorderly children."

490. Complaint and Arrest of Children Over the Age of Sixteen. Upon complaint made on oath to any police magistrate or justice of the peace against any child within the city of Philadelphia, not under the age of sixteen, by his or her parent or guardian, or other person standing to him or her in place of a parent, as being disorderly, such magistrate or justice shall issue his warrant for the apprehension of the offender, and cause him or her to be brought before himself or any other police magistrate or justice for examination.

Sec. 5, Act of June 2, 1871, P. L. 1301.

491. Proceedings Before Magistrates and Justices, for Commitment of Minors. Appeals by Persons Committed. If such magistrate or justice be satisfied, by competent testimony, that such person is a disorderly child within the description aforesaid, he shall make up and sign a record of conviction thereof, and shall by warrant, under his hand, commit such person to the house of correction, employment and reformation; and the powers and duties of the said managers in relation to the said children shall be the same in all things as are prescribed as to other minors received by them; and it shall be the duty of such magistrate or justice as aforesaid in addition to the record of conviction, to annex the names and residence of the different witnesses examined before him, and the substance of the testimony given by them respectively on which the said conviction was founded: Provided, That any person committed shall have the same right of appeal as is now secured by law to persons convicted of criminal offences; but no such appeal mere informality in the issuing of any warrant shall not be held to be sufficient cause for granting a discharge.

Sec. 6, Act of June 2, 1871, P. L. 1301.

Since the Act of Mar. 26, 1903, P. L. 66, supra Sec. 377, justices of the peace and magistrates no longer have the power to commit minors under the age of sixteen.

492. Habeas Corpus. Any person committed to the said house of correction, employment and reformation, by any other authority than the court of quarter sessions of the peace of the city and county of Philadelphia, may apply for a writ of habeas corpus to any judge of the said court, and upon return thereof, if such judge shall deem there is sufficient or reasonable ground for granting the same, he shall enter upon a re-hearing of the evidence, and either discharge the individual, modify or confirm the commitment.

Sec. 13, Act of June 2, 1871, P. L. 1301.

493. Employment of Inmates of Institution. Every person in the custody of the said board of managers, not disqualified by sickness or casualty, shall be employed by the superintendent in quarrying stone, cultivating the ground, manufacturing such articles as may be needed for the prison, almshouse, or other public institution of the State of city, or for other persons, and at such other labor as shall, upon trial, be found to be profitable to the institution, and suitable to its proper discipline and to the health and capacities of the inmates; and the superintendent may detail such numbers of the inmates as he may regard proper to do the work outside the grounds of the institution, for any of the departments or institutions of the city, or for such other persons as may be approved by the board of managers.

Sec. 7, Act of June 2, 1871, P. L. 1301.

494. Penalty Upon Inmates Refusing or Neglecting to Work. Records to be Kept. Examination of Such Inmates by Physicians. If any person committed to the said house of correction, employment and reformation, according to law, shall refuse or neglect to perform the work assigned to him or her, it shall be the duty of the superintendent to punish such persons by close confinement, on a diet of bread and water only, for such time as may be deemed necessary; which refusal and punishment shall be forthwith reported to the managers, and shall, by the clerk of the board, be recorded in a book to be kept for that purpose: it shall be the duty of the physician of the institution to visit every person, so confined for punishment, at least once in each and every twenty-four hours, and he shall record, in a book to be kept for that purpose, his opinion upon the health of the person confined: upon his opinion being given of said confinement acting injuriously thereon, the said confinement or diet shall be altered in such manner as he shall direct.

Sec. 8, Act of June 2, 1871, P. L. 1301.

495. Misdemeanor by Inmates. Penalty. Any inmate of said institution who shall wilfully break, destroy, or injure any of the material, machinery, tools, property or thing belonging to the said institution, or shall escape therefrom, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof before any court of record of the county of Philadelphia, may be punished by imprisonment at hard labor for not less than one month or more than one year.

Sec. 9, Act of June 1871, P. L. 1301.

496. Appropriations by Cities of the First Class to House of Refuge. That every city of the first class be and it is hereby authorized, in the discretion of the councils thereof, to make appropriations from the treasury of said city, to houses of refuge and institutions of the citizens of said city may, by law, be committed, by the courts, judges or magistrates of the county, within which such city may be situate, and all laws or parts of laws inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Act of May 25, 1887, P. L. 265.

(g) Miscellaneous Institutions.

497. Commitment of Juveniles to Philadelphia Protectory for Boys. From and after the passage of this act, it shall be lawful for judges of the court of quarter sessions of the peace, (magistrates and justices of the peace) in this Commonwealth to commit, with the consent of parents, guardian or custodian, victims or incorrigible minors, of the male sex, to the Philadelphia Protectory for Boys, located at Protectory, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania.

Sec. 1, Act of May 11, 1901, P. L. 187.
With regard to commitment by magistrate and justices of the peace of minors under sixteen and of age, see section 1, Act of March 26, 1903, P. L. 66, supra section 377.

498. When Commitment to be Made. Such commitment shall be made by any judge, (magistrate or justice,) as aforesaid, upon complaint and due proof that such minor, by reason of incorrigible behavior or vicious conduct, has become beyond the control of his parents, guardians or custodians.

Sec. 2, Act of May 11, 1901, P. L. 187.

499. Commitment of Delinquents to Incorporated Societies Having for its Object Protection of Children from Cruelty, or the Placing of Children. It shall be lawful for any society duly incorporated, having for one of its objects the protection of children from cruelty or the placing of children not otherwise provided for in families, to receive into its care and guardianship, at its discretion, minors committed to such care and guardianship by any justice of the peace, magistrate or judge of any court, upon complaint and due proof made, first, that such minor by reason of incorrigible, unmanageable vicious or wayward conduct is beyond the control of the parent or guardian of such infant, or, second, that the parents of such minor by reason of vagrancy, incorrigible or vicious conduct, criminal offense, moral depravity or cruelty, are unfit to have the training and control of such minor, or, third, that the said minor is a vagrant and has no parent or guardian capable or willing to restrain, manage or take proper care of such minor, or the said society may receive under its care and guardianship any minor as aforesaid, when such minor has been committed to its care and guardianship by the judge of any court after said minor shall have been duly convicted of any criminal offense.

Sec. 1, Act of June 8, 1893, P. L. 399.
The Act of April 23, 1903, P. L. 274, Supra Section , makes it unlawful to commit the custody of any neglected or dependent child * * * * to any institution of correction or reformatory in which delinquent children are received, or to commit any delinquent child to any institution in which dependent or neglected children are received.
See Secs. 5 and 6 of the Act of June 8, 1893, infra secs. and relating to the binding out of children and visitation of the children committed.

500. Power of Justices of the Peace, Magistrates and Court to Commit Delinquent Children. It shall be lawful for any justice of the peace, magistrate, or judge of any court to commit minors to any society duly incorporated, having for one of its objects the protection of children from cruelty or the placing of children not otherwise provided for in families, upon complaint and due proof made of facts such as set forth in the first section of this act after the said minors have been duly convicted of any criminal offense.

Sec. 2, Act of June 8, 1893, P. L. 399.
Justices of the peace and magistrates no longer have the power to commit children under the age of sixteen, see Sec. 1, Act of March 26, 1903, P. L. 66, supra sec. 377.

501. Names and Addresses of Witnesses and Substance of Evidence to be Attached to Commitment. It shall be the duty of the justice of the peace or magistrate aforesaid committing a vagrant or incorrigible or vicious minor as aforesaid, or any minor as provided in section one of this act, to annex to his commitment the names and residences of the different witnesses examined before him and the substance of the testimony given by them respectively on which the said adjudication was founded.

Sec. 3 Act of June 8, 1893, P. L. 399.
See notes to section immediately preceding.

502. Acts of Magistrates, Etc., Committing Delinquents, to be Reviewed by Judge. Delinquents to be Detained or Discharged. It shall be the duty of any magistrate or justice of the peace making a commitment as provided in the first and second sections of this act of a minor to any society to transfer his commitment, together with the various matters annexed thereto as provided in the third section of this act, to the district attorney of the county in which said commitment shall be made, and it shall be the duty of the district attorney when the same shall be placed in his hands, or as soon as it is possible thereafter, to place the said commitment, with the matters annexed, in the hands of a judge sitting at quarter sessions, who shall examine the same and shall endorse thereon an order for the detention of the said minor by the said society, or if he shall be of the opinion that the said minor has been wrongfully committed, he shall endorse upon the commitment an order for the discharge of the said minor: Provided, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to interfere with the provisions of an act, entitled, "An act for the better securing of personal liberty and preventing unlawful imprisonment," passed on the eighteenth day of February, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-five, commonly called the habeas corpus act.

Sec. 4, Act of June 8, 1893, P. L. 399.
See notes to Sec. 2, of this act, supra sec.

503. Appointment and Duty of Visitors. It shall be the duty of the judges of the several courts of common pleas within this Commonwealth to appoint visitors to visit the children committed in accordance with the provisions of this act by any magistrate, justice of the peace or judge in their respective counties, the said visits to be made at intervals not longer than once every six months, and the said visitors shall report upon the character of the home in which said child shall be placed, and the expense of said visitation shall be fixed by the court and borne by the counties aforesaid.

Sec. 6, Act of June 8, 1893, P. L. 399.

(h) Miscellaneous Provisions Relating to Correctional Institutions.

504. Houses of Refuge and Reform Schools Changing Names to Have Benefit of Certain Laws. Whenever any house of refuge or reform school, now incorporated and existing within this Commonwealth, shall have duly changed its name in accordance with the laws of the Commonwealth, all laws applicable to such house of refuge or reform school, within this Commonwealth, shall be equally applicable to such institution, by whatever name it shall thereafter be known.

Sec. 1, Act of March 19, 1909, P. L. 44.

505. Reasons for Removal of Houses of Refuge and Institutions of Reformation. Whereas, experience has demonstrated that houses of refuge and institutions for the reformation of juvenile delinquents can be more successfully conducted on farms in the country, where the family life and home influence can more nearly be secured and agricultural and other industrial occupations more easily secured;

And whereas, the managers of such institutions located in cities may desire to remove them, or some department of them, to the country, where these advantages can be obtained.

Preamble to Act of May 13, 1889, P. L. 209.

506. Removal of Houses of Refuge and Reformatories. Office for Service of Process. Wherever, by virtue of its charter, any house of refuge or institution for the reformation of juvenile delinquents is now, or may hereafter be, located in a city, it shall and may be lawful for the managers thereof, whenever in their discretion it may be desirable, to purchase real estate and locate such institution, or any department thereof, in a rural district in the same or in any county other than that in which it has theretofore been located: Provided, That, if removing to another county, the managers shall file in the office of the clerk of the court of quarter sessions of the county in which the institution has theretofore been located, a certified copy, under the seal of the corporation, of a resolution appointing some place within said county as its office, where writs of habeas corpus or other legal process issuing out of the courts of said county and directed to said managers may be served, which process it is hereby made incumbent upon said managers to obey with the same force and effect as though issuing out of the courts of the county in which said institution or department thereof shall be located.

Sec. 1, Act of May 13, 1889, P. L. 209.

507. Extension of Laws to Institutions Removed. All laws or parts of laws relating to the commitment of children, to the class of institutions named in the first section of this act, shall apply with equal force and effect to any such institution, or any department thereof, when removed in pursuance of said section to some locality outside of the limits of the county in which said institution was originally located.

Sec. 2, Act of May 13, 1889, P. L. 209.

508. Review of Inmates of Institutions Removed. Power of Judges to Remand or Discharge. Whenever, by existing law, it has been provided that commitments to any house of refuge or institution for the reformation of juvenile delinquents, made by an alderman, justice of the peace or magistrate of a county, shall at stated times be reviewed by the judge or judges of the court of common pleas of the said county, it shall be incumbent upon the managers of such institutions, which shall be removed either wholly or in part from said county, in pursuance of section one of this act, at such stated times to prevent the children so committed to such institution or department thereof outside of said county, together with their commitments, before the judges of the said county, at the place designated by the said managers as its office for the service of process, and the judges of the said county are hereby authorized and empowered to remand or discharge any child so committed with the same force and effect as though such institution, or department thereof, were still located within said county.

Sec. 3, Act of May 13, 1889, P. L. 209.

509. Visitation of Institution Removed, by Judges. Power of Judges to Order Discharges. It shall be the duty of the judge, or one of the judges alternately in such manner as may be arranged between them, of the court of common pleas of the county to which such institution, or department thereof, may be removed, to visit such institution once in each month or oftener, if in his or their discretion it may be necessary, and if in the judgment of such visiting judge there is any child illegally detained therein he shall forthwith order his or their discharge, or appoint a time and place for further investigation and act in the premises as in his discretion he may deem proper.

Sec. 3, Act of May 13, 1889, P. L. 209.

510. Laws Made Applicable to Institutions Removed. All charters, laws or parts of laws, relating to houses of refuge and institutions for the reformation of juvenile delinquents, not inconsistent herewith, shall be equally applicable to them or any department of them, whether located in the county originally designated by their charter or removed to another county in pursuance of section one of this act.

Sec. 5, Act of May 13, 1889, P. L. 209.

(i) Detention, Control and Boarding Out.

511. Female Juvenile Offenders Subject to Restraint During Minority. Whenever a girl shall have been duly committed to a house of refuge or reform school within the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, the charge and power of the managers of such institution, upon and over the said girl, shall continue in all cases during her minority.

Sec. 1, Act of March 24, 1909, P. L. 62.

512. Inmates of Houses of Refuge and Reform Schools Unfit to be Indentured, May be Boarded Out. Whenever, in the opinion of the board of managers of any house of refuge or reform school in this Commonwealth it shall be for the best interests of any minor committed to it, that he or she shall leave the institution on parole, and there is no relative or guardian fit or capable of assuming the custody or care of such minor and such minor is through mental or physical defects unfit to be indentured or placed out on wages or for a home, and it is necessary that board shall be paid to secure a home, it shall be lawful for such house of refuge or reform school to pay such board as may be necessary, not exceeding in any case the current per capita charge, one-half of which is paid by the counties from which children are committed to such institution, and to charge the amount so paid to the current expenses of the institution; and in the charges made to the county from which such minor has been committed, he or she shall be counted as an inmate from such county so long as he or she shall remain under the guardianship of such house of refuge or reform school.

Sec. 1, Act of April 22, 1909, P. L. 113.

513. Lodgment of Prisoners About to Become Mothers. From and after the passage of this act, it shall be lawful for the warden or superintendent, or other person in charge of any penitentiary, jail, reformatory, workhouse, or other penal institution within the Commonwealth, upon the application of any female prisoner or inmate about to become a mother, endorsed by the physician of such institution, to lodge such prisoner or inmate, in his discretion, and upon such terms and conditions and for such length of time as he shall see fit, outside such penitentiary, et cetera, at the time at which such prisoner or inmate may become a mother, and to make any expenditures which may seem to him proper for her care and that of her child, and to guard against her escape.

Sec. 1, Act of May 8, 1913, P. L. 166.

514. Payment of Costs of Lodgment Outside Place of Commitment. The expense so incurred shall be collectable as are the expenses of said female prisoner or inmate within such penitentiary, et cetera, under existing laws.

Sec. 9, Act of May 16, 1921, P. L. 666, No. 281.

(e.) Home for Friendless Children.

543. Homes for Friendless May Petition Courts for County Aid. The board of trustees and the board of managers, or a majority of each thereof, of any school, commonly known as a home for friendless children, destitute or vagrant children, now formed, organized or established, or that may hereafter be formed, organized or established in this Commonwealth, not of a denominational or sectarian character, shall have the right to petition the judge or judges of the court of common pleas of the county in which said school or institution is located, asking for a decree authorizing and directing the payment of moneys out of the funds of said county for the education and support of the children of such school or institution; said petition shall set forth, under the oath or affirmation of the president of the board of trustees and the president of the board of managers of such school or institution, the number of children cared for during the current year, the number of children bound out or apprenticed, and the age and sex of the same, the income and expenditures of such school or institution, the cost of educating and maintaining the children per capita, and such other matter relative to the wants and condition of the school or institution, and the welfare and advancement of the children, as the said court may direct for its information.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 12, 1875, P. L. 46, No. 51.

544. Powers of Court with Respect of Payment of Moneys by Counties to Homes for Friendless. Manner of Payment. The court of common pleas have the power, and it shall be their duty, on the presentation of a petition as provided for in the preceding section, after full investigation of the same, to order and direct the commissioners of the county or city in which such school or institution is situate, to pay to the treasurer of school or institution, out of the county funds, such sum or sums of money and in such installments as in the discretion of the said court may be deemed just and necessary; and it shall be the duty of the said commissioners to draw their warrant upon the county or city treasurer for the payment of such appropriation in such manner and form as shall be provided for by the said court.

Sec. 2, Act of Apr. 12, 1875, P. L. 46, No. 51.

545. Appointment of Trustees and Managers. Accounts. The court of common pleas shall appoint one-third in number of the trustees and managers of any such school or institution accepting the benefits of this act; (and shall have power,) to require the treasurer of any such school or institution to furnish the county or city commissioners an itemized account of the receipts and expenditures of such school or institution at the end of each fiscal year; to advertise the same in not less than two weekly newspapers published in the county, supporting any such school or institution, one insertion weekly, for four successive weeks; and to require the county auditors, controller or city controllers, of any city or county, as the case may be, and it shall be the duty of said officers, to audit, settle and adjust the account of the said treasurer, and to make report thereof to the said court.

Sec. 3, Act of Apr. 12, 1875, P. L. 46, No. 51.

546. Admission of Destitute and Vagrant Children to Homes for Friendless. Refusal to Admit. When any such school or institution has accepted the provisions of this act and has sufficient building capacity, the management thereof shall admit to the benefits of any such school or institution any friendless, destitute or vagrant child, recommended for admission by the board of school directors of the school district in which such child may reside or be found, or by the directors of the poor of any county in which school school or institution is located, guardians of the poor, overseers, of the poor or poor directors, as the case may be, of any city or district included in said county; in case any child is refused admission, the said court of common pleas, on complaint made thereto by any person after due and legal proof of such refusal, shall enjoin the payment of moneys out of the county funds as authorized by this act: Provided, however, That no child shall be admitted under the age of four years nor above the age of sixteen.

Sec. 4, Act of Apr. 12, 1875, P. L. 46, No. 51.

547. Official visitors of Homes for Friendless. Examination and Inspection by Grand Juries. The judges of the court of common pleas of the several counties of this Commonwealth are hereby constituted and appointed ex-officio visitors of any such school or institution; and the grand jury of the court of quarter sessions of the county in which any such school or institution is located, shall, as often as directed by the said court, visit, examine and inspect the needs and management of any such school or institution, and the condition of the children therein, as directed by the said court, and report the same to the said court.

Sec. 5, Act of Apr. 12, 1875, P. L. 46, No. 51.

548. Acceptance of Act. Employment of Teachers. The board of trustees and the board of managers of any such school or institution desiring to accept the provisions of this act, shall set forth the same in their first petition presented to the said court of common pleas, as authorized in the first section of this act; no teacher shall be employed in any such school or institution who has not received a valid certificate from the superintendent of the schools of the county in which such school or institution is situate.

Sec. 6, Act of Apr. 12, 1875, P. L. 46, No. 51.

549. Homes for Friendless Children Authorized to Receive and Bind Out Such Children. That all corporations organized under any general or special law of this Commonwealth, for the purpose of providing homes for friendless or destitute persons or children, shall be and are hereby authorized to receive such children, upon indenture from the guardians, overseers or directors of the poor of any municipality, and also to bind out and provide suitable homes for all children committed to their charge, when maintenance is unprovided for by their parents or guardians.

Act of May 25, 1878, P. L. 152, No. 193.

(f) Miscellaneous Provisions

550. Inmates of Institutions for Children to Attend Public Schools. Tuition. The board of school directors of any school district in this Commonwealth in which there is located any orphan asylum, home for the friendless, children's home, or other institution for the care or training of orphans or other children, shall permit any children who are inmates of such homes, but not legal residents in such district, to attend the public schools in said district, either with or without charge for tuition, text-books, or school supplies, as the directors of the district in which such institution is located may determine. If a charge is made by any school district for tuition for the inmates of any such institution, the officers of the institution shall submit to the board of school directors a sworn statement for tuition of all children who are inmates thereof and desire to attend public school in the district. If any of said inmates have been received from outside of Pennsylvania, or if the institution cannot certify as to their residence, their tuition shall be paid by the institution having the care or custody of said children. The tuition of such other inmates as are included in the sworn statement to the board of school directors shall be withheld by the Superintendent of Public Instruction from any moneys due to the district liable for said tuition upon receipt of a sworn statement setting forth the names, ages, tuition charges, and school district liable for tuition of said inmates; and all moneys thus withheld shall be paid by him to the district entitled to receive the same. The district so charged with tuition may file an appeal with the Superintendent of Public Instruction, in which it shall be the complainant, and the institution, the respondent. The decision of the Superintendent of Public Instruction as to which of said parties is responsible for tuition shall be final.

The cost of tuition in such cases shall be fixed as is now provided by law for tuition costs in other cases, except where for the accommodation of such children, it shall be necessary to provide a separate school or to erect additional school buildings, in which cases the charge for tuition for such children may include a proportionate cost of the operating expenses, rental, and interest on any investment required to be made erecting such new school buildings. The tuition herein provided for shall be paid annually by the Superintendent of Public Instruction or the institution, as the case may be.

Sec. 1, Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 978, amending Sec. 1412, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309 as amended.

551. Indenturing of Children by Certain Societies and Institutions. Procedure. Whenever any benevolent or charitable institution, asylum or corporation, whether created by general or special laws of this Commonwealth, shall hereafter maintain and care for any minor child for a period of one year or over at the expense, either in whole or in part, of such institution, asylum, or corporation, then the courts of common pleas of the proper county, or where the rights of a guardian are or may be affected thereby, the orphans' court of said county, are hereby authorized and empowered, in all proper cases, upon petition to them made by the board of managers or proper officers of such institution, asylum or corporation, and upon due notice to the parents, guardian, or next friend of said minor, said notice to be personally served, if practicable, otherwise such notice to be given by advertisement in such newspaper or newspapers and for such length of time, as said court may direct, to make and enter an order or decree granting unto such petitioners the right and power to indenture said minor, for and during its minority, to any suitable person or persons; and said indenture thus made shall vest in the person to whom said minor is so indentured the sole and absolute right to the care, control and custody and services of said minor, during its said minority, as against such parent, guardian or next friend so notified of said petition, as aforesaid: Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as to interfere in any manner with or prejudice the rights over said minor, reserved in such indenture by and to said institution, asylum or corporation.

Sec. 1, Act of April 13, 1899, P. L. 46, No. 46.

552. Child in Custody of Person Convicted of Assaulting it. To be Committed to Care of Humane Society. Whenever any person having the care, custody or control of any minor child, shall be convicted of an assault, or an assault and battery, upon such child, or of any violation of the provisions of this act, it shall be lawful for the justice of the peace, magistrate or court before whom such conviction has taken place, or where the parents or proper guardian of any child cannot be found, it shall be lawful for any magistrate or court, to commit such child to the care and custody of any duly authorized or incorporated humane society, having for one of its objects the protection of children from cruelty; and such society shall thereupon have all the rights of a guardian of the person of such child; but such society may at any time apply to the orphans' court of the proper county for the appointment of a guardian of the person, or the commitment of such child to an asylum or home for children, as provided in the seventh section of this act.

Sec. 9, Act of June 11, 1879, P. L. 142.

553. Appropriations to Societies by Cities of the First and Second Classes. Authority is hereby given to every city of the first and second classes, in the discretion of the councils thereof, to make appropriations from the treasury thereof to any society having for one of its objects the protection of children from cruelty or the placing of children not otherwise provided for in families, to which society children of the citizens of the city may by law be committed by the magistrate or judges of the county within which said city may be situated, and all laws and parts of laws inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Sec. 7, Act of June 8, 1893, P. L. 399.

The following approval is attached to this act. "Approved—The 8th day of June A. D. 1893, The general purpose of this bill as embodied in its first six sections meets with my hearty approval. The seventh section is not covered by the title to the bill and is not coming to its general purposes. I am of the opinion that so much of it is therefore unconstitutional, and will be so held by the courts when submitted to the test; inasmuch, however, as it has been well settled by a line of judicial decisions that the invalid portions of a statute may be declared inoperative without affecting the remainder of the law. I have given this act my approval with this timely notice that its seventh and concluding section is in my judgment inaffective."

The commitments herein referred to are those made under sections one and two of this act supra sections 499 and 500.

M. DEFECTIVE CHILDREN.

(Note: For State supervision over education of deaf and blind see supra Sec. 128. For establishment of schools for blind, deaf and mentally deficient see supra Sec. 128. For schools for tubercular children see supra Secs. 139 and 140.)

1. Education of Blind Children.

554. Education of Certain Blind Children Under Eight Years of Age. The State Board of Education is authorized to educate blind children, residing in this Commonwealth, under the age of eight years, whenever from any cause, the parent or parents thereof may be unable to properly educate them. With the written consent of the proper parents, parent or nearest relative, if there be no parents, or the poor authorities of the proper poor district, if there be neither parents nor relatives, the board may contract with any nonsectarian institution in this State, or elsewhere, established for the education of the blind, whereby any such child may, at a cost not exceeding one dollar and fifty cents per day,—to be paid out of the State school fund,—be educated until it shall reach the age of eight years: Provided, That such education may be continued beyond the age of eight years, when, for physical, mental or other proper reasons, such child or children need special care for a longer period. The contract may be canceled and the child or children removed at any time by the board. This act shall not repeal or modify any existing act relative to the education of the blind.

Sec. 1439, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, added by amendment of May 8, 1913, P. L. 158. Reamended by Act of May 17, 1917, P. L. 206, Sec. 1.

555. Blind Students Attending Higher Institutions of Learning. The State Board of Education is authorized to make provision for readers for students who are blind and in attendance upon higher institutions of learning. Before any contract is entered into the State Board of Education shall make a careful investigation of all the circumstances surrounding the case; and if, after such investigation, it appears that any blind student who desires to attend a higher institution of learning, or who is attending such institution, and seems to be fitted for special work, the State Board of Education is authorized to expend an amount, out of the general sum appropriated for this purpose, not to exceed three hundred dollars per year for each such blind student.

Sec. 1440, Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, added by Sec. 2, Act of May 17, P. L. 206.

2. Deaf Children.

556. Establishment of a Home for Training of Deaf Children Not of School Age. The sum of fifteen thousand dollars or as much thereof as is necessary be and is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the building of a home for the training in speech of deaf children before they are of school age.

Sec. 1, Act of June 20, 1891, P. L. 371.

557. Management of Home. Sec. 2 of the Administrative Code, (Act of June 7, 1923, P. L. 498), abolished the Board of Trustees for the Home for Training in Speech of Deaf Children before they are of school age. Sec. 203 of the Code (supra Sec. 318) creates a new board, to which all the powers and duties of the old board are transferred by Sec. 3, (Supra Sec. 320). The make-up of the new board and its organization are provided for by Sec. 435 (Supra Sec. 219).

Compiler's Note.

558. Boards of Trustees of State Institutions for the Deaf. The Board of Trustees of Pennsylvania State Oral School for the Deaf, the Board of Trustees of Home for Training in Speech of Deaf Children before They are of School Age, and the Board of Trustees. Pennsylvania Soldier's Orphan School shall have general direction and control of the property and management of their respective institutions. Each of the said boards of trustees shall have the power, and its duty shall be:

(a) To elect a superintendent of the institution who shall, subject to the authority of the board, administer the institution;

(b) On nomination by the superintendent, from time to time, to appoint such officers and employes as may be necessary;

(c) To fix the salaries of its employes in conformity with the standards established by the Executive Board;

(d) Subject to the approval of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, to make such by-laws, rules, and regulations for the management of the institution as it may deem advisable.

Sec. 1311, Act of June 7, 1923, P. L. 498.

559. Appropriation Conditioned Upon Method of Instruction. The Act of May 13, 1903, P. L. 363, made an appropriation to the Home for the Training in Speech of Deaf Children before they are of School Age in Philadelphia, which was conditioned however, upon the filing by the managers of the institution with the State Board of Charities and the Auditor General of a declaration that thereafter all pupils received into the institution under sixteen years of age who had not been pupils of similar institutions, should be taught by the oral method unless physically incapable of being so taught.

Compiler's Note.

3. Deficient Children.

560. Special Classes or Schools. It shall be the duty of the secretary of the school board, teachers, and attendance officers, in every school district in this Commonwealth, in accordance with rules of procedure prescribed by the Superintendent of Public Instruction, to secure information and report to the medical inspector of the school district and to the district or county superintendent of schools, on or before the fifteenth day of October of each year, every child within said district, between the ages of eight (8) and sixteen (16) years, who is gravely retarded in his or her school work, or who, because of apparent exceptional physical or mental condition, is not being properly educated and trained, and as soon thereafter as possible, the medical inspector shall examine such child, in accordance with rules of procedure prescribed by the Commissioner of health, and report whether such child is a fit subject for special education and training. In school districts of the first, second, and third class, having a district superintendent of schools, said report shall be made to the superintendent of the district. In all other districts, the report shall be made to the Commissioner of Health, and by him reported to the superintendent of schools of the county.

The county or district superintendent of schools shall submit to the board or boards of school directors plans for establishing and maintaining special classes in the public schools for the proper education and training of all such children reported to him as fit subjects for special education and training, and it shall be the duty of the board of directors of any district having such children to provide and maintain, or to jointly provide and maintain with neighboring districts, such special classes or schools: Provided, however, That if it is not feasible to form a special class with a minimum attendance of ten children in any district or if for any other reason it is not feasible to provide such education for any such child in the public schools of this district, the board of school directors of that district shall, if the parents or guardians of said child give written consent, secure such proper education and training outside of public schools of the district, or in special institutions, on terms and conditions not inconsistent with the terms of this act or of any other act then in force applicable to such children.

School districts maintaining special classes in the public schools or special public schools or providing special education, as hereinbefore specified in this section, shall receive reimbursement, as hereinafter provided, so long as such classes, such schools, and such special education are approved by the State Board of Education, as to location, constitution and size of classes, conditions of admission and discharge of pupils, equipment, course of study, methods of instruction, and qualification of teachers.

The State Superintendent of Public Instruction shall superintend the organization of such classes and shall enforce the provisions of this act.

On or before the first day of October of each year, the president and secretary of each board of school directors shall report to the proper county or district superintendent the amount expended by the district in the preceding school year for instruction in such classes or such schools or for such instruction outside the public schools of the districts. On or before the first day of November of each year, the said county or district superintendent shall make to the Superintendent of Public Instruction on blanks to be furnished, by him, tabulated returns by districts of the amounts so expended for instruction in special classes or special schools within the school district or in the provision of special instruction outside the public schools of the district. There shall be paid to each district by order on the State Treasurer, signed by the Superintendent of Public Instruction, from funds to be appropriated by the Legislature for the purpose, an equal amount to one-half the total expense incurred by said district for instruction in such special classes and special public schools and in the provision of such special instruction outside the public schools of the district.

Sec. 1413. Act of May 18, 1911, P. L. 309, as amended by Act of July 22, 1919, P. L. 1090.

4. Care of Dependent Crippled Children.

561. Commitment of Indigent and Neglected Crippled Children to Institutions for Treatment. Crippled children whose parents or guardians fail or are financially unable to provide suitable medical and surgical aid, treatment, and education, when necessary, may, with the consent of the parents or guardian of such child, be committed to a crippled children's home or orthopaedic hospital or other institution. Application for such care, treatment, and education shall first be made to the juvenile court by a parent, guardian, or some interested person. If such court is of the opinion that such child is in need of treatment and education, and finds that the parent or guardian fails to provide it, he may make an order committing the child to an institution as above specified, and shall at once forward a copy of the decree and a statement of the facts to the Department of Public Welfare, and shall provide for the child's conveyance, in charge of a suitable person, to the place designated for treatment. The expenses for maintenance, treatment, conveyance, and education of such crippled child shall be first paid by the county of its residence and then may be charged to the parent or guardian, if able to pay, in whole or in part, as the court may direct. Such committance shall be temporary, and shall be only for the period necessary for the treatment of such child.

Sec. 1, Act of June 7, 1923, P. L. 677, No. 276.

562. Return of Crippled Child After Success or Failure of Treatment. Whenever it appears that a crippled child has been successfully treated, or that it cannot be further benefited by such treatment, the Department of Public Welfare and the committing court shall be notified, and the child shall be returned to its own people.

Sec. 2, Act of June 27, 1923, P. L. 677, No. 276.

5. Feeble Minded Children

(a) General Provisions

563. Admission of Mental Defectives Under Twenty Years of Age to Schools for Mental Defectives. Procedure. The superintendent of any State or licensed school for mental defectives may receive and detain any mentally defective person, resident of this State, under twenty years of age and incapable of being properly educated and trained in the public schools, whose condition of mental defect and whose need of and fitness for care in a school for mental defectives shall have been certified to by a qualified physician, and whose admission shall be applied for by a parent, guardian, or relative of such person, or by any other responsible person having custody of such mentally defective person or being liable for his support.

The said application shall be made on form prescribed by the department, and shall state the name, sex, age, and residence of said mentally defective person, and such other facts as may be required by the department. If the facts or any of them are unknown to the applicant, it shall be so stated in the application.

If the said application is for the admission of a person to a school owned and controlled by the Commonwealth, it shall be endorsed by the poor authorities of the county in which the said person resides, if there be such authorities in said county, otherwise by the directors or overseers of the poor district in which said person resides.

But before any person shall be admitted to any school for mental defectives under the provisions of this section, the consent of the managers or superintendent thereof to such admission shall have been obtained.

The poor authorities of any county, or the overseers of the poor district therein, in endorsing an application for the admission of a person to said school, shall state whether or not such person has an estate of sufficient value or a parent or parents of sufficient financial ability to defray the expenses, in whole or in part, of supporting such person in said school, and if there be such means of support in part only, then the amount per month which the parents or parent or legal guardian of such person may be able to pay; and the person or persons who make the application for such admission shall therein make statement, under oath, as to such means of support. Said managers or superintendent in accepting an application for the admission of any person shall fix the amount, if any, which shall be paid for such support according to the ability of such parents or parent of the person, or according to the value of such person's estate, if any, and shall require payment for such support, so far as there may be ability to pay, as a condition to the admission or retention of said person. Said amount may, at any time, be changed by said managers or superintendent upon receiving further information concerning such means of support. When neither the said person nor his parent or parents are of sufficient financial ability to defray the expense, in whole or in part, of his support in said school, the ascertainment of the facts shall be as hereinbefore stated, and the poor authorities or directors or overseers of the poor endorsing the application shall agree to pay the school for clothing, as may be required for the comfort and advantage of said person, at an annual rate to be established by the trustees or managers of the school after submission of the same to and approval by the department. All other support at the school shall be provided for by annual appropriations, at such per capita rates as shall be appropriated by the General Assembly, on the application of the trustees or managers, after submission of the same to and approval by the department: Provided, however, That in any judicial district in which there is a municipal court vested with the exclusive jurisdiction over proceedings concerning children suffering from epilepsy, nervous and mental defects, then admission of mentally defective or epileptic children to any State or municipal institution from said judicial district shall be exclusively vested in said court.

Sec. 309, Act of July 11, 1923, P. L. 998.

564. Admission of Mental Defectives Twenty Years of Age to Schools for Mental Defectives. The Superintendent of any State or licensed school for mental defectives may receive and detain any mentally defective person twenty years of age, or who is of such inoffensive habits as to make him a proper subject for classification and discipline in a school for mental defectives. The procedure for admitting any such person shall be the same as for the admission of mentally defective persons under the age of twenty years.

Sec. 310, Act of July 11, 1923, P. L. 998.

565. Commitment of Mental Defectives to Schools for Mental Defectives. Any person mentally defective may be placed and detained in a proper State or licensed school for mental defectives by order of the court of common pleas or other court of record or the juvenile court of the county in which such person, is or resides, upon the sworn or affirmed petition of any parent, guardian, or other responsible person, addressed to the said court, praying that the said person may be placed therein. The said petition must be accompanied by a sworn or affirmed certificate of a qualified physician that it is his opinion that the said person is mentally defective and a proper subject for commitment to a school for mental defectives; in the said certificate, the physician shall further state the facts of his own observation and any other information upon which his said opinion is based. It shall be, in other respects, in form similar to that prescribed by the department for the admission of persons mentally ill to a hospital for mental diseases.

The said petition shall be, in form, prescribed by the department, and shall state the name, sex, age, and residence of the person alleged to be mentally defective, the opinion of the petitioner that the said person is mentally defective, and such other facts as may be required by the department, if the facts or any of them are unknown to the petitioner, it shall be so stated in the petition.

Thereupon the said court, or a judge thereof, may, in his discretion, appoint a day for a hearing of the said petition, and, if he shall appoint a day for a hearing, he shall cause notice thereof to be given to the proper parties in interest; and, in his discretion, he may or may not require the presence of the alleged mentally defective person at said hearing. If it shall be made to appear to the said court or judge that the said person is mentally defective and a proper subject for commitment to a school for mental defectives, and that the best interests of the said person or the safety and welfare of the public require such commitment, the court shall make an order commiting such mentally defefective person to the school named in the petition, and direct his removal thereto by a proper officer or person; but before any person shall be admitted, under the provisions of this section, to any school for mental defectives, the consent of the managers, trustees, or, superintendent thereof to such admission shall have been obtained.

At the said hearing the said court or judge shall inquire as to the estate of such mentally defective person, and, if the same be sufficient for the purpose, shall make an order directing the payment therefrom of the cost of clothing and other support of such mentally defective person in said school, otherwise that such payment be made by the husband or parent of such mentally defective person, if it appear that the circumstances of such husband or parent are such as to make such an order proper and advisable. Where the estate of said mentally defective person is insufficient, and the circumstances of said husband or parent are not such as to warrant such and order for the payment of clothing and other support, or either of them, the expense of clothing of said mentally defective person shall be paid for by the said county in which such mentally defective person resides; and all other support shall be provided for by the Commonwealth, at such per capita rates as shall be appropriated by the Legislature, on the application of the thustees or managers of the said school after submission of the same to and approval by the department.

When any mentally defective person shall have been committed to any school, under the provisions of this section, by a juvenile court, the managers or superintendent of said school have authority to detain such person after he shall have reached the age of twenty-one years; and thereafter, in the discretion of said managers or superintendent, such person may be discharged or allowed a leave of absence upon order of the court of common pleas or other court of record, or a judge thereof, of the county in which the said commitement was made.

Sec. 311, Act of July 11, 1923, P. L. 998.

566. Admission and Detention of Epileptics Under Twenty-one Years of Age to Institutions. Any person under twenty-one years of age suffering from epilepsy may be admitted to and detained in any institution or place for the care of epileptics, upon the written application to the superintendent of such institution or place by the parent, guardian, or other person liable for the support of such epileptic person; and any epileptic person twenty-one years of age or over may be admitted upon his own written application, signed in the presence of at least one witness if his mental condition is such as to render him, in the opinion of the superintendent or attending physician of such institution or place, competent to make such application.

No epileptic person, admitted upon such written application of parent, guardian, or other person, shall be detained more than ten days after the said parent, guardian, or other person shall have given notice to the said superintendent of his desire or intention to remove such epileptic person; and no epileptic person admitted upon his own written request shall be detained more than ten days after he shall have given written notice to the said superintendent of his desire or intenton to leave.

Sec. 312, Act of July 11, 1923, P. L. 998.

567. Payment of Cost of Maintenance, Etc. of Feeble Minded Children. The Department of Welfare shall have the power, and its duty shall be, from time to time to issue requisitions upon the Auditor Genral for warrants to be drawn by the Auditor General upon the State Treasurer in favor of semi-State institutions for the payment, out of moneys specifically appropriated to the department for the purpose, of the per diem, per week, or per capita rate of payment to such institutions for the care, treatment and removal of indigent insane, or the education and maintenance of children, or the care and maintenance of feeble-minded children, or for any other character of education or care and treatment in such institutions.

Sec. 2016, Act of July 10, 1923, P. L. 498.

568. Liability of Estates of Inmates of Charitable Institutions for Maintenance. Whenever any person is maintained as an inmate of any hospital, home, sanatorium, or other institution of the Commonwealth, in whole or in part at the expense of the Commonwealth, the property or estate of such person shall be liable for such maintenance, to be paid or recovered as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 1, Act of June 1, 1915, P. L. 661.

569. Reports to Attorney General by Trustees, Committees, Guardians, Etc. Every trustee, committee, guardian, or other person, nominated or appointed to take charge of the estate of any lunatic, feeble-minded, or any other person, who is an inmate of any home, asylum, or other institution, maintained in whole or in part by the Commonwealth, shall, within three months after his appointment, make a true and full report, under oath, to the Attorney General, showing the amount and character of said estate, and every year thereafter report to the Attorney General what, if any, changes there are in said estate; and every executor or administrator of any deceased inmate of any asylum, home, or institution, maintained in whole or in part by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, shall within three months after letters testamentary or of administration have been issued, make a true full, and complete report, under oath, to the Attorney General of the extent and character of such estate. Whenever any fiduciary or person aforesaid shall file, in any court, an account of his administration of such property or estate, he shall file a duplicate of such account with the Attorney General, and no such account shall be confirmed except upon due proof to the proper court of the filing of such copy with the Attorney General. Such fiduciary or person shall also notify the Attorney General when, where, and by whom such account will be audited, and there shall be no confirmation of the report of an auditor auditing such account or final adjudication thereof by any court, except after due proof to the proper court of the giving of such notice. Any fiduciary or person aforesaid who shall fail to make any report to the Attorney General hereby required shall be personally liable for such amount due the Commonwealth, which amount may be recovered by suit in the same manner as other debts are recoverable.

Sec. 1, Act of May 10, 1921, P. L. 438, amending Sec. 2, Act of June 1, 1915, P. L. 661.

570. Liability of Relatives and Estates by Entireties for Maintenance. The husband, wife, father, mother, child, or children of any person who is an inmate of any asylum, hospital, home, or other institution, maintained in whole or in part by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and who is legally able so to do, shall be liable to pay for the maintenance of any such person, as hereinafter provided. Whenever either of the owners of any property held by entireties shall be maintained in any institution as aforesaid, and the separate property of such inmates shall not be sufficient to reimburse the Commonwealth, such property held by entireties shall be liable for the same to the extent of any order that any court of record of this Commonwealth may make against the spouse of such inmate, either during the lifetime of such inmate or after his or her death. The liability for the support of such inmate is hereby declared to be the joint liability of such owners to the extent of such order and enforcement against their joint as well as their several properties.

Sec. 2, Act of May 10, 1921, P. L. 438, amending Sec. 3, Act of June 1, 1915, P. L. 661.

571. Powers of Courts to Make Orders for Maintenance. The court of common pleas of the county of the residence of any inmate of any home, hospital, asylum, or other institution, maintained in whole or in part by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, shall, upon the application of the Attorney General, make an order, for the payment of maintenance to the Commonwealth, upon the trustee, committee, guardian, or other person who has charge of the estate of any such inmate, or against the husband, wife, father, mother, child, or children of any person so maintained; and any order made against the husband, wife, father, mother, child or children shall be in such amount as the court, in its discretion, deems proper, taking into consideration their ability to pay for said maintenance; and said court may also, upon like application, direct any trustee, committee, guardian, or other person, having charge of any such estate, to file with the Attorney General the statement required by the section if this act.

Sec. 3, Act of May 10, 1921, P. L. 438, amending Sec. 4, Act of June 1, 1915, P. L. 661.

572. Order of Court on Estate of Minor for Maintenance in Mental Hospital. The court of common pleas or other court of record of the county in which any mental patient resided prior to his admission to any mental hospital maintained in whole or in part by the Commonwealth shall have power, upon the application of the Attorney General, to make an order, conformable to the provisions of this article, for the payment of maintenance to the Commonwealth, upon the trustee, committee, guardian, or other person who has charge of the estate of such patient, or against the husband, father, wife, mother, or child of any patient so maintained, in such amounts, respectively, as the court, in its discretion, may deem proper, taking into consideration the ability of the patient, or the person liable for his support, to pay for such maintenance; and the court may also, upon like application, direct any trustees, committee, guardian, or other person having charge of any such estate, to file with the Attorney General the statement required by the second section of the act, approved the first day of June, Anno Domini, one thousand nine hundred and fifteen (Pamphlet Laws, six hundred and sixty-one), entitled "An act relating to the maintenance of insane, feeble-minded, and other persons confined in the various institutions of the Commonwealth; fixing liability for their support; provding for the collection of the moneys due the Commonwealth therefor, and for proceedings relating thereto."

Sec. 505, Act of July 11, 1923, P. L. 998.

573. Prima Facie Priof of Expenditures for Maintenance. The sworn statement of the superintendent, steward, or other person, in whose custody are kept the records of any hospital, home, asylum, or other institution wherein persons are maintained in whole or in part at the expense of the Commonwealth, shall be received as prima facie evidence, in any court of this Commonwealth, of the amount expended by the Commonwealth for the support or maintenance of any such person, in any proceeding brought to recover the amount of such maintenance.

Sec. 5, Act of June 1, 1915, P. L. 661.

574. Claims for Maintenance Preferred. All claims by the Commonwealth for maintenance, as herein provided, in the distribution of any of the estate of any person so maintained, shall take precedence and be paid after other claims which by law are now given precedence, and before any claims of general creditors.

Section 6, Act of June 1, 1915, P. L. 661.

575. State and County to Share Jointly Where Estate of Inmates of Certain Institutions Are Insufficient. Where there is a claim against the estate of any person maintained in any home, hospital, asylum, or other institution, both on behalf of the Commonwealth and on behalf of any county or poor district, and there is not sufficient in the estate to pay the claim in full, the same shall be paid pro rata to the State and the county, in the proportion of the amount of maintenance legally recoverable by each.

Sec. 7, Act of June 1, 1915, P. L. 661.

576. Claims to Which the Act Applies. This act of Assembly is intended to apply to the collection of claims for maintenance due the Commonwealth at the time of its passage as well as those to become due hereafter.

Sec. 8, Act of June 1, 1915, P. L. 661.

(b) Pennsylvania Training School for Idiotic and Feeble-Minded Children at Elwyn.

577. Incorporation. Indigent Pupils Maintained by State. The Pennsylvania Training School for Idiotic and Feeble-Minded Children was incorporated by the Act of April seventh, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three, (P. L. 341), as a school for the mental, moral and physical education of idiotic and feeble minded children, but the Act of March twentieth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two (P. L. 27), extended the object of the corporation to embrace the training and care in asylums of idiots and feeble-minded persons without regard to age.

The original act made an appropriation toward the purchase of grounds and the fitting up of a suitable building to take effect when a like sum should be appropriated by other responsible contributors but this condition was removed by the Act of April twenty-first, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-four, (P. L. 456).

The sixth section of the Act of one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three provided that after the institution had been organized and the buildings prepared for pupils, the Commonwealth would contribute annually the sum of two hundred dollars for each indigent pupil of the State not exceeding twenty in number admitted into the institution and that such pupils so admitted should be apportioned among the several counties of the Commonwealth according to their representation in the house of Representatives. The section also provided that no pupil should be taught and maintained for a term exceeding five years. The maximum term was extended to seven years by the Act of March twenty-seven, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, (P. L. 208), and later was made an indefinite term whenever the directors of the institution decided that the time was inadequate and the discharge of the pupil would be injurious to society by the Act of May thirty-first, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven, (P. L. 281), which act however, limited the charge of maintenance of this class of persons to one hundred dollars per annum. This amount was made one hundred and seventy-five dollars by the Act of June twenty-six, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five, P. L. 348), and two hundred dollars by the Act of March twenty-seven, one thousand nine hundred and three, (P. L. 85).

Compiler's note.

(c) State Institution for Feeble-Minded of Western Pennsylvania at Polk.

578. Purpose of Institution. This institution shall be entirely and specially devoted to the reception detention, care and training of idiotic and feeble-minded children, and shall be so planned in the beginning and construction as shall provide separate classification of the numerous groups embraced under the terms idiotic and imbecile or feeble-minded. Cases afflicted with either epilepsy or paralysis shall have a due proportion of space and care in the custodial department. It is specifically determined that the processes of an agricultural training shall be primarily considered in the educational department, and that the employment of the inmates in the care and raising of stock and the cultivation of small fruits, vegetables, roots et cetera, shall be made legally tributary to the maintenance of the institution.

Sec. 10, Act of June 3, 1893, P. L. 289.

579. Commitment to. Who to Make Application. There shall be received into the institution feeble-minded children, under the age of twenty years, whose admission may be applied for as follows:

First. By the father if father and mother are living together.

Second If father and mother are not living together then by one having custody of the child.

Third. By the guardian duly appointed.

Fourth. By the superintendent of any county orphanage.

Fifth. By the person having the management of any other institution or asylum where children are cared for.

Under items three, four and five, consent of parents if living is not required.

All inmates are subject to such rules and regulations as the board of trustees may adopt.

Sec. 11, Act of June 3, 1893, P. L. 289.

580. Form of Application. Affidavit. Interrogatories. The form of application for admission into the institution and the necessary checks to improper admissions shall be such as the board of trustees, with the approval of the State Board of Charities, may prescribe, and each application shall be accompanied by answers, under oath, to such interrogatories as the trustees shall by rule require to be propounded.

Sec. 12, Act of June 3, 1893, P. L. 289.

581. Commitment by Parents and Guardian. Payment of Expense of Care. Any parent or guardian who may wish to enter a child into said institution for treatment, culture or improvement, and pay all expenses of such care, may do so under terms, rules, and regulations prescribed by the superintendent and approved by the trustees.

Sec. 13, Act of June 3, 1893, P. L. 289.

582. Who May be Admitted. Instructions and Applications for Admission. Said board shall receive as inmates of said institution, feeble-minded children, residents of this State, under the age of twenty years, who shall be incapable of receiving instruction in the common schools of this State. Said board shall prescribe and cause to be printed instructions and forms of application for the admission of such, and shall include therein interrogatories to which they shall require answers, under oath, showing such facts as they may be needed for the information of said trustees. Such printed instructions and forms shall be furnished to all applicants for the admission of any person or patient in whole or in part as a State beneficiary, and shall be endorsed by the board of commissioners or directors of the poor of the county in which he or she resides at the time of the making of the application.

Sec. 14, Act of June 3, 1893, P. L. 289.

583. Admission of Adults. Adults who may be determined to be feeble-minded, and who are of such inoffensive habits as to make them proper subjects for classification and discipline in an institution for the feeble-minded, can be admitted on pursuing the same course of legal commitment as govern admission to the State Hospital for the Insane.

Sec. 15, Act of June 3, 1893, P. L. 289.

584. Payment of Maintenance by Estates and Parents. The board of commissioners or directors of the poor of a county in approving an application for the admission of a person to said institution, shall state whether or not such child has an estate of sufficient value, or a parent or parents of sufficient financial ability to defray the expense in whole or in part of supporting such child in said institution, and if there be such means of support, in part only, then the amount per month which the parents or parent or the legal guardian of such child may be able to pay, and the person or persons who make the application for such admission shall therein make statement under oath as to such means of support. Said board of trustees in accepting an application for the admission of any person shall fix the amount, if any, which shall be paid for such support according to the ability of such parents or parent of the person or according to the value of such person's estate, if any, and shall require payment for such support, so far as there may be ability to pay, as a condition to the admission or retention of said person. Said amount may at any time be changed by said trustees according to their information concerning such means of support. Where the indigence of the child or its family be such as to require its admission upon the full beneficiary fund of the State, the ascertainment of the facts shall be as hereinbefore stated, and the support at the institution shall be appropriated by the Legislature on the application of the trustees, after submission and approval of the same by the State Board of Public Charities.

Sec. 16, Act of June 3, 1893, P. L. 289.

585. Reports. The said trustees shall make, under oath, by their president or treasurer, a quarterly report to the Auditor General of the State and to the State Board of Public Charities, containing an itemized statement of the receipts from all sources and expenses of the institution during the previous quarter, and unless such itemized report is made and approved by the State Board of Public Charities, Auditor General and State Treasurer, the State Treasurer is hereby directed not to pay any more money to said institution until such report is made as aforesaid.

Sec. 19, Act of June 3, 1893, P. L. 289.

586. Official Visitors. The Governor, judges of the several courts of the Commonwealth, members of the Legislature, and the Board of Public Charities shall be ex-officio visitors of said institution.

Sec. 20, Act of June 3, 1893, P. L. 289.

(d) State Institution for Feeble-minded of Eastern Pennsylvania at Pennhurst. (Near Spring City).

587. Acts Relating to the State Institution for Feeble-minded.

1903, May 15, P. L. 446.
1911, June 9, P. L. 862.
1911, June 20, P. L. 1090.
1913, June 12, P. L. 494, supplementing, and also amending sections 9 and 13 of the act of May 15, 1903, P. L. 446.

588. Purpose of Institutions. Occupations for Patients. The Eastern Pennsylvania State Institution for the Feeble-Minded and Epileptic shall be devoted to the segregation, care, maintenance, treatment, training, and education of epileptic, idiotic, imbecile, or feeble-minded persons of both sexes, and shall provide separate classification for the various grades of patients. For male patients, special attention shall be given to providing agricultural training, and their employment in the cultivation of the land, raising stocks, fruits, vegetables, et cetera, in accordance with such regulations as the board may prescribe.

Sec. 1, Act of June 12, 1913, P. L. 494, supplementing the Act of May 15, 1903, P. L. 446.

The trustees of this institution have power to require any parent or guardian where the estate of such patient is abundantly able to pay the whole amount of the cost of maintaining such patient, or to fix the proper proportion which the estate of such person is to pay. Opinion of Attorney General, July 30, 1912.

This opinion was rendered on sections twelve and fifteen of the Act of May 15, 1903, P. L. 446, which sections were repealed by the above supplementary Act of June 12, 1913, P. L. 494.

589. Who May be Committed. Counties in District. Procedure for Commitment. Payment of Cost of Commitment. Transfer from Other Institutions. Discharge of Patients. Said board of trustees shall receive as inmates of said institution only such idiotic, feeble-minded, or epileptic persons as may be committed thereto, in the manner hereinafter provided, by any of the courts of quarter sessions of the following named counties in the Commonwealth; namely:

Adams, Berks, Bradford, Bucks, Carbon, Chester, Columbia, Cumberland, Dauphin, Delaware, Franklin, Lackawanna, Lancaster, Lebanon, Lehigh, Luzerne, Lycoming, Monroe, Montgomery, Montour, Northampton, Northumberland, Perry, Philadelphia, Pike, Schuylkill, Snyder, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Tioga, Union, Wayne, Wyoming and York.

It shall be lawful for the husband, wife, parent, guardian, or other person standing in loco parentis to such idiotic, feeble-minded, or epileptic person, his or her next of kin, the county commissioners, or the overseers of the poor, or the managers or trustees of any institution having such person in charge, or the district attorney of the county in which such person shall reside, to apply, by petition, to the court of quarter sessions of the county in which said idiotic, feeble-minded, or epileptic person shall be resident, setting forth in said petition the age sex, and residence of such person, the address of his or her parents, and the address of the petitioner; praying for the commitment of such person to The Eastern Pennsylvania State Institution for the Feeble-Minded and Epileptic; which said petition shall be accompanied by a certificate, made, under oath, after a personal examination of such idiotic, feeble-minded, or epileptic person, by a reputable physician with an experience of at least five years in the actual practice of his profession, setting forth that such person is an idiot, of feeble mind or an epileptic, and a proper subject for commitment, to said institution. Thereupon the said court, or a judge thereof, shall appoint a day for the hearing of the said petition, and shall cause notice thereof to be given to all parties in interest; and if at the said hearing it shall be made to appear that said person is an idiot, of feeble mind or an epileptic, and a proper subject for commitment to said institution, and that the best interests of the said person or the welfare of society require such commitment, the court shall make an order committing such idiotic, feeble-minded, or epileptic person to the said Eastern Pennsylvania State Institution for the Feeble-Minded and Epileptic, and direct his or her removal thereto by a proper officer or person, at the cost of the said county.

At the said hearing the said court or judge shall inquire as to the estate of such idiotic, feeble-minded, or epileptic person, and, if the same be sufficient for the purpose, shall make an order directing the payment therefrom of the cost of maintaining such person in said institution; otherwise, that such payment be made by the husband or parent of such idiotic, feeble-minded, or epileptic person, if it appear that the circumstances of said husband or parent are such as to make such an order proper and advisable, and any such order shall be enforceable in the same manner in which orders in desertion cases are now enforceable by law. If default shall be made in the payment of any such order for the period of three months, the district attorney or city solicitor, of the proper county, shall, upon notice from the officers of the said institution, seting forth the amount of the arrearage, make application to the proper court for the enforcement of the said order. Where the estate of said idiotic, feeble-minded, or epileptic person is insufficient, and the circumstances of her husband or his or her parent are not such as to warrant an order for maintenance on either of them, the said idiotic, feeble-minded, or epileptic person shall be maintained and cared for in the said institution at the cost of the Commonwealth.

The costs of such hearing shall be paid by the county, and the court may, in its discretion, allow a fee of five dollars ($5.00) to the physician making the examination, and a fee of ten dollars ($10.00) to the attorney presenting the petition and appearing at the hearing, which fees shall be paid by the county.

The said board of trustees shall also receive all such idiotic, feeble-minded, or epileptic persons as may be transferred to such institution from any other State institution by the Committee on Lunacy of the Board of Public Charities; and the said Committee on Lunacy shall have authority to transfer any inmate of said institution to any proper State institution.

When, in the opinion of the board of trustees, it appears probable that the mental condition of any inmate of said institution has so improved that his or her release will be beneficial to such inmate, and not incompatible with the welfare of society, the said board may recommend the discharge of such inmate, to the court committing him or her to said institution; which recommendation shall be accompanied by a record of the case of such inmate, setting forth the date of his or her commitment, the time of his or her detention, the history of his or her case in the institution, and the opinion of the superintendent and medical staff as to his or her present mental condition, whereupon the said court may, in its discretion, after hearing all persons desirous of being heard in the premises, issue an order, under the seal of the court, upon the said board to discharge the said inmate from the said institution.

Sec. 3, Act of June 12, 1913, P. L. 494, amending Sec. 13, Act of May 15, 1903, P. L. 446.

590. Reports. The said trustees shall make, under oath by their president or treasurer, a quarterly report to the Auditor General of the State, and to the State Board of Public Charities, containing an itemized statement of the receipts from all sources and the expenses of the institution during the previous quarter.

Sec. 18, Act of May 15, 1903, P. L. 446.

591. Official Visitors. The Governor, Judges of the several courts of the Commonwealth, members of the Legislature, and the Board of Public Charities shall be ex-officio visitors of said institution.

Sec. 19, Act of May 15, 1903, P. L. 446.

(e) Laurelton State Village at Glen Iron.

592. Establishment. Purpose. Occupations of Inmates. A State village for the care of feeble-minded women is hereby constituted and established, the grounds and buildings for which are hereby directed to be selected and constructed, which village shall be governed and maintained in the manner hereinafter provided, and shall be known as the Laurelton State Village. That this institution shall be entirely and specifically devoted to the reception, segragation, detention, care and training of feeble-minded women, and shall be so planned in the beginning and construction as shall provide separate classification of the numerous groups embraced under the terms "idiotic," "imbecile," or "feeble-minded." It is specifically determined that the processes of an agricultural training shall be primarily considered in the educational department, and that the employment of the inmates in the care and raising of stock, and the cultivation of fruits, vegetables, roots, et cetera, shall be made tributary to the maintenance of the institution.

Sec. 1, Act of July 13, 1923, P. L. 1088, amending Sec. 1, Act of July 25, 1913, P. L. 1319.

593. Board of Managers to Adopt Rules. Work and Discipline for the Inmates. The board of managers shall have power to make all necessary rules and regulations, not contrary to the constitution and laws of this Commonwealth, for the admissoin, care, detention, employment, discipline, instruction, and temporary or permanent release of any and all persons received in the village for feeble-minded women. Under said rules there shall be established such a system of work and discipline for the inmates as will secure to each person instruction in English education and in such manual or handicraft vocation as may be useful to her.

Sec. 8, Act of July 25, 1913, P. L. 1319.

594. Records of Inmates to be Kept. A record shall be kept of each person at the village for feeble-minded women setting forth her name, age, nationality, date of admission, and such facts concerning the life, antecedents, and environment as can be obtained from herself and from other sources, either at the time of her admission or later; likewise, any further facts which may be directed by the Board of Public Charities. Detailed information on the subject shall be forwarded to the Board of Public Charities, upon forms to be furnished by said board, whenever it shall so request.

Sec. 9, Act of July 25, 1913, P. L. 1319.

595. Commitment. Transfer and Discharge. Section ten of the act of July twenty-fifth, one thousand nine hundred and thirteen, (P. L. 1319) as amended by Section four of the act of July sixteenth, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen, (P. L. 982), provided that the board of managers should receive and care for, as inmates of the village, such idiotic, imbecile or feeble-minded women as might be committed by the courts of quarter sessions. It further provided for the manner of commitment, the payment of costs, transfer of patients from other institutions, and the discharge of inmates. This section, however, was repealed by the "Mental Health Act of one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three". (Act of July 11, 1923, P. L. 998), to which recourse must now be had for these provisions.

Compiler's Note.

1. Specific Offences.

(a) Abduction, Kidnapping, Harboring Kidnapped Child.

596. Kidnapping with Intent to Extort. Penalty. Any person who shall take, or carry away or decoy, or entice away, or secrete, any child or person, with intent to extort money or any other valuable thing for the restoration or return of such person, such offender shall be guilty of felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to undergo imprisonment, by separate and solitary confinement at labor, for the term of his or her natural life, or for any term of years, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 1, Act of April 4, 1901, P. L. 65, (No. 33)

597. Assisting in the Kidnapping of a Child. Penalty. Any person who shall aid, assist, or abet, in the taking or carrying away, or in the decoying or enticing away, or secreting, of any child or person, with intent to extort money or any other valuable thing for the restoration or return of such child or person, such offender shall be guilty of felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine of five thousand dollars and undergo an imprisonment, by separate and solitary confinement at labor, for a period not exceeding twenty-five years, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 2, Act of April 4, 1901, P. L. 65, (No. 33)

598. Kidnapping Child Under Ten Years. Harboring Kidnapped Child. Penalty. If any person shall maliciously, either by force or fraud, lead, take or carry away, or decoy or entice away, any child, under the age of ten years, from its parent or parents, or any other person having the lawful charge or care of such child, or the possession of such child, with the intent to extort money or any valuable thing from the parent or any other person, for the restoration of such child, every such person shall be guilty of a felony; and upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine, not exceeding ten thousand dollars, and to undergo an imprisonment, by separate and solitary confinement at labor, for a period not exceeding twenty-five years. And if any person within this commonwealth shall knowingly conceal, harbor or detain, or assist in concealing, harboring or detaining, any such child so taken, carried or enticed away as aforesaid, either within or without this commonwealth, every such person shall be guilty of a felony; and upon conviction thereof, be sentenced to pay a fine, not exceeding five thousand dollars, and to undergo an imprisonment, by separate or solitary confinement at labor, not exceeding fifteen years: Provided, That this act shall not apply to the detaining or concealing of any child taken or carried away before the passage of this act, where the person or persons so harboring or concealing shall, within thirty days after the passage of this act, surrender up such child to the custody of the nearest magistrate or justice of the peace, or to the sheriff of any county within this commonwealth.

Sec. 1, Act of February 25, 1875, P. L. 4, supplementing Act of March 31, 1860, P. L. 382.

599. Enticing Child from Parents. Harboring Child Illegally Enticed. Penalty. If any person shall maliciously, either by force or fraud, lead, take or carry away, or decoy or entice away any child, under the age of ten years, with the intent to deprive its parents, or any other person having the lawful charge or care of such child, of the possession of such child, by concealing and detaining such child from such parent or parents, or other person or persons having the lawful charge or care of it, or with intent to steal any article of apparel or ornament, or other thing of value or use, upon or about the person of such child, to whomsoever such article may belong or shall receive, harbor, with any such intent as aforesaid, any such child, knowing the same to have been so by force or fraud led, taken or carried, or de-coyed or enticed away as aforesaid, every such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, be sentenced to pay a fine, not exceeding two thousand dollars, and to undergo an imprisonment by separate or solitary confinement at labor, not exceeding seven years: Provided always, That no person who shall have claimed to be the father of any illegitimate child, or to have any legal right to the possession of such child, shall be liable to be prosecuted by virtue hereof, on account of getting possession of such child, out of the possession of the mother or other person having lawful charge thereof.

Sec. 94, Act of March 31, 1860, P. L. 382.

(b) Abandonment and Neglect.

600. Abandonment of Infants by Parents or Others in Control. If the father or mother of any child, under the age of seven years, or any person to whom such child (shall) have been confided, shall expose such child in any highway, street, field, house, outhouse or other place, with intent to wholly abandon it, such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, be sentenced to an imprisonment, not exceeding twelve months, and to pay a fine, not exceeding one hundred dollars.

Sec. 45, Act of March 31, 1860, P. L. 395.

601. Abandonment of Child by Person Charged With its Custody. Penalty. A parent or other person charged with the care and custody, for nurture or education, of a child under the age of sixteen years, who abandons the child in destitute circumstances, and wilfully omits to furnish necessary and proper food, clothing, or shelter for such child, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not erceeding two years, or both or either, at the discretion of the court. In case a fine is imposed, the same may be applied, in the discretion of the court, to the support of such child. Proof of the abandonment of such child in destitute circumstances, and omission to furnish necessary and proper food, clothing, or shelter, shall be prima facie evidence that such omission was wilful.

Sec. 1, Act of May 29, 1907, P. L. 318.
See also Act of July 12, 1919, P. L. 939, supra Secs. 24 and 25.

602. Cruelty to, and Abandonment and Neglect of Children. Penalty. Any person whatsoever who shall cruelly illtreat, abuse or inflict unnecessary cruel punishment upon any infant or minor child, and any person having the care, custody or control of any minor child, who shall wilfully abandon or neglect the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof before any justice of the peace, magistrate or court of record, not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars for each offence.

Sec. 1, Act of June 11, 1879, P. L. 142.

603. Commitment for Failure to Pay Fine. Appeal. In default of payment of the fine or penalty imposed under any of the sections of this act, together with the costs of the proceedings, then said justice of the peace, magistrate or court of record, shall commit said offender to the county prison, there to remain for not less than twenty nor more than ninety days, or until discharged by due course of law: Provided, That when the fine imposed exceeds the sum of ten dollars, the party complained against may appeal from the decision of said justice of the peace or magistrate to the court of quarter sessions, upon his entering bail in the nature of a recognizance, in the usual manner, for his appearance at said court, when the offence shall be prosecuted in the same manner as is now directed by law in other cases of misdemeanor. If in lieu of deciding the cause, such justice of the peace or magistrate shall bind over or commit such person to appear at the court of quarter sessions, or if such person shall appear as aforesaid, or upon such binding over or commitment, appear before the said court, and be there convicted of such misdemeanor, he shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars, payable as aforesaid, or undergo an imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 11, Act of June 11, 1879, P. L. 142.

(c) Abuse and Cruelty.

(Note: See also two sections immediately preceding.)

604. Cruelty to Children by Persons Having Legal Control. If any master or mistress of an apprentice, or any person having the legal care and control of any infant, being legally liable to provide for such apprentice or infant; necessary food, clothing or lodging, and shall wilfully and without lawful excuse, refuse or neglect to provide the same; or when the master or mistress, or person having the legal care and control of such apprentice or infant, shall unlawfully and maliciously assault such apprentice or infant, whereby his life shall be endangered, or his health shall have been, or shall be likely to be permanently injured; such master, or mistress or other person, on being thereof convicted, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be sentenced to pay a fine, not exceeding five hundred dollars or to undergo an imprisonment, not exceeding two years, or both, or either, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 90, Act of March 31, 1860, P. L. 382.

(d) Employment, Use and Disposition of Children for Unlawful Purposes.

605. Taking or Sending Minors to Immoral Resorts. Penalty. Any person, firm, company or corporation, having authority over a minor, who knowingly takes or sends, or causes or permits such minor to be sent to any house of prostitution or assignation, or other immoral place of resort or amusement, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or to undergo an imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 1, Act of March 24, 1909, P. L. 59, No. 34.

606. Permitting Child to Become Denizen of House of Illrepute, etc. A parent or other person charged with the care or custody, for nuture or education, of a child under the age of sixteen years, who suffers or permits any such child to be or remain in any reputed house of prostitution or assignation, or in any place where opium or any preparation thereof is smoked, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding two years, or both or either, at the discretion of the court.

610. Permitting Children Under Fifteen Years of Age to Sing, or Dance in Dance Halls, etc. Prohibited. Penalty. Any person having the care, custody of control of any minor child under the age of fifteen years, who shall in any manner sell, apprentice, give away or permit such child to sing, dance, act, or in any manner exhibit, in any dance-house whatever, or in any concert-saloon, theatre or place of entertainment, where wines or spirituous or malt liquors are sold or given away, or with which any place for the sale of wines or spirituous or malt liquors is directly or indirectly connected, by any passage-way or entrance, and any proprietor of any dance-house whatever, or any such concert-saloon, theatre or place of entertainment, so employing any such child, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof in the manner provided in the first section of this act, shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each offense.

Sec. 4, Act of June 11, 1897, P. L. 142.

611. Employment of Children Under Fifteen Years of Age as Acribats, etc., or Retaining Them in Brothels. Penalty. Any person having the care, custody or control of any minor child under the age of fifteen years, who shall in any manner sell, apprentice, give away or otherwise dispose of such child, and any person who shall take, receive or employ such child for the vocation or occupation of rope or wire-walking, or as an acrobat, gymnast, contortionist or rider, and any person who, having the care, custody or control of any minor whatsoever, shall sell, apprentice, give away or otherwise dispose of such child, or who shall take, receive or employ such child, for any obscene, indecent or illegal exhibition or vocation, or any vocation injurious to the health or dangerous to the life or limb of such child engaged therein, or for the purpose of prostitution, and any such person who shall retain, harbor or employ any minor child in or about any assignation house or brothel, or in any place where any obscene, indecent or illegal exhibition takes place, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof before any justice of the peace, magistrate or court of record, shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each offense.

Sec. 2, Act of June 11, 1879, P. L. 142.

612. Employment of Children Under Eighteen Years of Age in Theatrical Performances without Consent of Parents. Penalty. Any person, association, agency, or corporation who shall take, receive, hire, employ, or have in custody, any child under the age of eighteen years, or who shall endeavor to secure by advertisement or otherwise any such minor child for the violation, occupation, calling, service or purpose of taking part in any theatrical performance, or athletic exhibition, or of singing, or of playing upon musical instruments, without the consent of the parents or legally appointed guardians of such child having been first obtained, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof before any justice of the peace, magistrate or court of record, shall be fined not less than fifty dollars and not more than one hundred dollars. And upon second conviction, shall be imprisoned not less than one year and not more than three years.

Sec. 1, Act of May 16, 1901, P. L. 220.

613. Employment of Children Under Twelve Years of Age, in Any Underground Work. Penalty. Any person who shall take, receive, hire, or employ any child under twelve years of age, in any under-ground work or mine, or like place whatsoever, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof in the manner provided in the first section of this act, shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than fifty dollars.

Sec. 5, Act of June 11, 1879, P. L. 142.

614. Proceedings for Enforcement of Acts. Whenever any person shall, before a magistrate or justice of the peace, make oath or affirmation that the affiant believes that this act has been or is being violated in any place or house, such justice or magistrate shall forthwith issue a warrant to a constable or other authorized officer, to enter such place or house and investigate the same; and such person may arrest or cause to be arrested all offenders, and bring them before any justice, magistrate or court of record for a hearing of the case, and it shall be the duty of all constables and policemen to aid in bringing all such offenders before said authorities for a hearing.

Sec. 6, Act of June 11, 1879, P. L. 142.

615. Buying and Selling of Infant Children. Penalty. If any person or persons shall, within this Commonwealth, trade, barter, buy, sell or deal in humanity, by trading, bartering, buying, selling, or dealing in infant children, he, she, or they shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars ($1,000.00), or undergo an imprisonment not exceeding five years, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 1, Act of April 18, 1905, P. L. 213.

(e) Sexual Crimes.

616. Prostituting or enticing Into Houses of Ill-Fame, Female Children Under Sixteen Years. Penalty. Any person who takes a female child under the age of sixteen years for the purpose of prostitution or sexual intercourse, or, without the consent of her father, mother, guardian or other person having legal custody of her person, for the purpose of marriage, or who inveigles or entices any such minor female child into a house of ill-fame, or of assignation, or elsewhere, for the purpose of prostitution, or sexual intercourse, shall, in every such case, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to imprisonment, at separate or solitary confinement at labor, for not more than five years, or pay a fine, not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 1, Act of May 28, 1885, P. L. 27.

617. Seduction. The seduction of any female of good repute, under twenty-one years of age, with illicit connection, under promise of marriage is hereby declared to be a misdemeanor; and any person who shall be convicted thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine, not exceeding five thousand dollars, and to undergo an imprisonment either at labor by separate or solitary confinement, or imprisonment without labor, not exceeding three years, or both, or either, at the discretion of the court: Provided, That the promise of marriage shall not be deemed established, unless the testimony of the female seduced is corroborated by other evidence either circumstantial or positive.

Sec. 41, Act of Mar. 31, 1860, P. L. 382.

The right of action for seduction may be maintained by the mother where the father is deceased, see Sec. 2, Act of Apr. 18, 1843, P. L. 348, supra Sec. 52.

618. Carnal Knowledge of Woman Child Under Sixteen Years of Age. Penalty. If any person shall have unlawful carnal knowledge of a woman, forcibly and against her will, or who being of the age of sixteen years and upwards, shall unlawfully and carnally know and abuse any woman child under the age of sixteen years, with or without her consent, such person shall be adjudged guilty of felonious rape, and on conviction, be sentenced to pay a fine, not exceeding one thousand dollars, and undergo an imprisonment by separate or solitary confinement at labor, or by simple imprisonment, not exceeding fifteen years: Provided, however, That upon the trial of any defendant charged with the unlawful carnal knowledge and abuse of a woman child under the age of sixteen years, if the jury shall find that such woman child was not of good repute, and that the carnal knowledge was with her consent, the defendant shall be acquitted of the felonious rape and convicted of fornication only.

Sec. 1, Act of May 19, 1887, P. L. 128.

(f) Admittance to Dance Halls, Saloons, Etc.

619. Admitting Minors Under Eighteen Years to Certain Places of Amusement. Penalty. Any proprietor or any person in charge of any dance-house, concert-saloon, theatre, museum or similar places if amusement where wines or spirituous or malt liquors are sold or given away, or any place of entertainment injurious to health or morals, who admits or permits to remain therein any minor under the age of eighteen years, unless accompanied by his or her parent or parent or guardian, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars.

Sec. 4, Act of May 28, 1885, P. L. 27.

620. Minors Under Eighteen Years Age Not Permitted In Any Licensed Poolroom Nor To Play Billiards etc., Therein. It shall not be lawful for any licensee under the provisions of this act to knowingly allow or permit any minor, under eighteen years of age, to even be present in the premises licensed, nor to allow or permit any minor, under eighteen years of age, to play any game of billiards, pool, or bagatelle. Any violation thereof, on rule granted, shall be sufficient for said license to immediately be revoked and forfeited.

Sec. 9, Act of June 7, 1911, P. L. 668, No. 261. This section related to first class cities only.

621. Minors Not to be Admitted to Billiard Rooms Etc. In Certain Counties. Penalty. It shall not be lawful for the licensed keeper, proprietor or owner, or the superintendent or marker of any billiard-room, bowling-saloon, or ten-pin alley in the counties of Chester and Delaware knowingly to allow or permit any minor to be present in such billiard-room, bowling-saloon, or ten-pin alley; and any keeper, proprietor, owner, superintendent or marker of such billiard-room, bowling-saloon, or ten-pin alley, knowingly allowing or permitting any minor to be present therein, shall upon conviction thereof in the court of quarter sessions of the said county, be punished by a fine of not less than the amount of the license, nor more than five hundred dollars; and the said licensed keeper, proprietor or owner shall forfeit his license.

Sec. 1, Act of Apr. 13, 1859, P. L. 614.

622. Innkeepers Not to Receive, Harbor or Trust Minors After Being Warned. Penalty. No innkeeper or tavernkeeper shall receive, harbor, entertain or trust any person under the age of twenty-one years, or any apprentice or servant, knowing him to be such, or after being warned to the contrary by the parent, guardian, master or mistress of such minor apprentice or servant, under penalty, for the first or second offense, of three dollars, over and above the forfeiture of any debt contracted by such minor, apprentice or servant, for liquors or entertainment; and for the third offense, under penalty of fifteen dollars, and the forfeiture of his license, and of being for ever incapable of receiving a license to keep a public inn within this Commonwealth.

633. Deadly Weapons or Dangerous Explosives not to be Sold to Minors Under Sixteen Years of Age. Penalty. Any person who shall knowingly and wilfully sell or cause to be sold to any person under sixteen years of age, any cannon, revolver, pistol or other such deadly weapon, or shall knowingly and wilfully sell or cause to be sold, to any such minor, any imitation or toy cannon, revolver, or pistol so made, constructed or arranged as to be capable of being loaded with gunpowder or other explosive substance, cartridges, shot, slugs, or balls, and being exploded, fired off and discharged, and thereby become a dangerous or deadly weapon, or who shall knowingly and wilfully sell or cause to be sold, to any such minor, any cartridge gunpowder or other dangerous and explosive substance, shall, in every such case, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding three hundred dollars.

Sec. 1, Act of June 10, 1881, P. L. 111.

(j) Medicines and Poisons.

634. Distribution of Samples of Medicine in Places Accessible to Children. It is hereby made unlawful for any person or persons to distribute any free or trial samples of any medicines, dyeing, ink, coloring or polishing compounds, or any of them, in any form of preparation, upon the ground, sidewalks, porches, into yards, or into or under doors or windows, or in any way or manner, that children may get possession of or secure the same.

Sec. 1, Act of May 2, 1901, P. L. 111.

635. Penalty. Any person or persons found guilty of a violation of any of the provisions of section one of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall upon conviction thereof before any alderman or justice of the peace be fined in a sum not exceeding twenty dollars,—said fine for the use of the county in which the conviction is had,—or not more than twenty days imprisonment in the county jail, at the discretion of the officer before whom such person or persons may be convicted.

Sec. 2, Act of May 2, 1901, P. L. 111.

(k) Receiving goods from Minors.

636. Junk, Etc. Not to be Bought or Received from Minors. If any person or persons shall, after the passage of this act, buy or receive from minors, knowing them to be such, or from persons unknown to such person or persons so buying or receiving, or from persons pursuing no trade, labor or employment for a livelihood, any junk, rope, iron, brass, lead, copper, or other metal, such person or persons shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof in a court of quarter sessions of the proper county, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not exceeding five hundred ($500) dollars, or to undergo an imprisonment of not more than one year, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 1, Act of May 5, 1899, P. L. 247.

637. Loans to Minors under Sixteen Years of Age by Pawnbrokers. No person, being a pawnbroker or the employee of a pawnbroker, shall make any loan or advance or permit to be made any loan or advance to any minor under the age of sixteen years; or in any manner to receive, directly or indirectly any goods, chattels, wares, or merchandise from any such minor under the age of sixteen years, in pledge for loans made or to be made to such minor or to any other person.

Sec. 1, Act of June 7, 1911, P. L. 671.

638. Loans to Minors by Pawnbrokers Through Intermediaries. No person shall act as an intermediary between any pawnbroker or the employee of a pawnbroker to effect any loan, the benefit of which shall accrue to any minor under the age of sixteen years.

Sec. 3, Act of June 7, 1911, P. L. 671.

639. Penalty. Any person violating any of the provisions of this act shall be subject to a fine of not less than five dollars, nor more than twenty-five dollars, for each offence, to be collected by process of summary conviction before any magistrate or justice of the peace, as like fines and penalties are now by law collected; or, in case of nonpayment of such fine within forty-eight hours, to undergo an imprisonment in the county prison for a period not exceeding five days.

Sec. 2, Act of June 7, 1911, P. L. 671.

2. Enforcement and Enforcement Agencies.

640. Agents of Humane Societies Commissioned as Constables to Make Arrests for Violations of Act. Any duly organized or incorporated humane society, having for one of its objects the protection of children from cruelty, may offer any agents or officer employed by them to the mayor of any city of the first, second, third, fourth or fifth class for the purpose of being commissioned, to act as police officers through the limits of said city, for the purpose of arresting all the offenders of this act, or any of the provisions thereof; whereupon the mayor in such city shall, if such persons are proper and discreet persons, commission them to act as such police officers, with all the rights and powers appertaining thereto; but no such city shall be liable in any way for the salary or wages of such officers, or for any expenses whatever in relation thereto, except for the detention of prisoners. And in any district or township not incorporated, such humane society may offer similarly qualified persons to the court of common pleas of the county whereupon such court or any judge thereof shall, if they be fit persons commission such person to act as constables, with power to arrest all offenders against this act or any provisions thereof; but no township, borough, or county, shall in anywise (be) liable for the salary or wages of any such officer, or for any expense in relation thereto, except for the detention of prisoners. All persons thus qualified under this section, shall be deemed to be constables and authorized officers, within the meaning of section six of this act; and the keepers of jails, or lock-ups, or station-houses in any of said counties are required to receive all persons arrested by Constitution of the United States.

Sec. 8, Act of June 11, 1879, P. L. 142.

COMPACT AS TO THE WATER RESOURCES OF THE DELAWARE RIVER.

January 31, 1925.

The Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Sir: I transmit herewith a copy of the report to me of the Commissioners appointed under the Act approved May 24, 1923, to negotiate with the duly authorized agents of the States of New York and New Jersey a compact for the regularization of the flow of the Delaware River, the conservation of the water resources of the Delaware Basin, the apportionment thereof for domestic and municipal supply, and the utilization thereof for power and other beneficial uses. Attached to the report is a certified copy of the compact negotiated under this statute which was signed by the Commissioners of the three States on January 24, 1925. The triplicate original has been deposited in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

I recommend the ratification of the compact by legislative act.

Upon such ratification and receipt of information of like action by the States of New York and New Jersey, a certified copy of the compact will be submitted to Congress for its consent, as required by Article I, Section 10 of the Constitution of the United States.

Respectfully,
GIFFORD PINCHOT.

Harrisburg, Pa., January 27, 1925.

Hon. Gifford Pinchot, Governor of Pennsylvania, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

Dear Governor Pinchot: In fulfillment of your commission to us, given by letter of September 29, 1923, and in accordance with the provisions of the Act of May 24, 1923 (P. L. 448), we, the undersigned, as Commissioners for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, have met with duly authorized agents of the States of New York and New Jersey for the purpose of negotiating a compact for the regulation of the flow of the Delaware River, the conservation of the water resources of the Delaware Basin, the apportionment thereof among the said States for domestic and municipal supply, and the utilization thereof for power and other beneficial uses.

By legislative Acts of similar import the States of New York and New Jersey provided also for Commissioners to conduct such negotiations for their respective States. The Commissioners of New York and New Jersey, designated by the respective Governors as provided by law and known to us by official communications to be the duly authorized and accredited representatives of their respective States for this purpose, are:—

For the State of New York:
George MacDonald, Chairman,
Rudolph Reimer,
Jefferson DeMont Thompson.

For the State of New Jersey:
William A. Starrett, Chairman,
Frederick C. Schneider.

The Commissioners of the three States met formally for the first time in New York City on June 3, 1924, and organized as the Tri-State Delaware River Treaty Commission. The following officers were then and there elected and have since served in these capacities:—

For the Tri-State Delaware River Treaty Commission, Chairman, George MacDonald, New York; Vice Chairman, Charles H. Miner, Pennsylvania; Secretary, William A. Starrett, New Jersey.

Numerous meetings of the Tri-State Delaware River Treaty Commission and of Committees designated by the Chairman of that Commission have been held to collect, compile, study and report on relevant data and to secure the views of all agencies and persons known to be interested in the use and development of the Delaware River.

The Pennsylvania Commissioners have also met frequently in their study of the questions involved as they pertain to the use and development of the Delaware River by or for the Commonwealth, its municipalities, industries and citizens. By correspondence and conference the Pennsylvania Commissioners solicited and secured helpful data and suggestions on the subject matter of the compact from agencies, public and private, known to be interested in or affected by the use or development of the waters of the Delaware River for any purpose. So far as the Commissioners are aware the terms of the compact are acceptable to all Pennsylvania interests, public and private, that are or may be affected by its terms.

At a meeting of the Tri-State Delaware River Treaty Commission held in New York City on January 23, 1925, and attended by all the Commissioners of the respective States, there was unanimous agreement upon the terms of the compact. The compact thus agreed upon and prepared in final form was signed in New York City on January 24, 1925, by all Commissioners of the Tri-State Delaware River Treaty Commission.

We have the honor to attach to this report one of the three original signed compacts for the official records of the Commonwealth. The remaining two original signed identical compacts were retained by the Commissioners of New York and New Jersey for their respective State records. True copies of the compact as signed are being furnished for the General Assembly.

We hereby certify that the signatures of Commissioners George MacDonald, Rudolph Reimer, and Jefferson DeMont Thompson, representing the State of New York, and of Commissioners William A. Starrett and Frederick C. Schneider, represinting the State of New Jersey, were made by them in our presence, the Commissioners of the three States signing the document consecutively. It is known also to us that the New York and New Jersey Commissioners here mentioned acted with full authority for their respective States in signing the compact.

With renewed appreciation of the honor conferred upon us in representing the Commonwealth in this important matter, and in the firm belief that the compact offers in full measure the opportunity sought for the use and development of the Waters of the Delaware River in the highest interest of this Commonwealth and of the public welfare of all the States party to it, we are

Respectfully,

Charles H. Miner, Chairman.
Robert Y. Stuart.
Philip P. Wells.

COMPACT

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania by Legislative Act, approved the twenty-fourth of May A. D. 1923 (Pamphlet Laws 448), and the State of New Jersey by Chapter 94 of the Laws of 1923, and the State of New York by Chapter 56 of the Laws of 1923, having authorized their respective Governors to appoint Commissioners for the purpose of negotiating a form of compact or treaty between the said three states, and the said states through their Governors having appointed as their Commissioners:

Charles H. Miner,
Robert Y. Stuart,
Philip P. Wells,
} for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania

William A. Starrett,
Frederick C. Schneider,
} for the State of New Jersey

George MacDonald,
Rudolph Reimer,
Jefferson DeMont Thompson } for the State of New York who, after negotiations, have agreed upon the following articles:

Article I.

This compact, between the sovereign states of Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey is entered into for the purpose of conserving by storage and otherwise for all uses the water resources of the said states in the Delaware river, its tributaries and drainage area and, as a means to that end, for making allotments from the said water resources to the said states respectively and determing and adjusting their respective rights therein.

Article II.

Where used in this compact, singular words shall be construed as including the plural, masculine words shall be construed as including the feminine and neuter, and the following terms and expressions shall have the meanings as respectively designated for each:

The term "waters of the Delaware river" means all of the surface waters which following their natural courses, flow into the channel of the Delaware river above that point in the said channel which marks the boundary between the states of Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The term "channel of the Delaware river" means the lands and bed of the river on and over which the waters of the Delaware river flow, beginning at that point near "Monument Island" which is the northeastern corner of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and extending thence continuously as the said channel winds and turns to the point which is the common boundary between the States of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware.

The term "drainage area of the Delaware river" means the entire area of both land and water from which the surface waters naturally flow into the channel of the Delaware river.

The term "tributary" or "tributary of the Delaware river" means any watercourse, the waters of which naturally reach the channel of the said river.

The term "domestic and municipal" as applied to the use of water means the use of water by or for waterworks serving the public.

The term "sanitation" as applied to the use of water means the use of water for the conveyance of sewage and industrial wastes.

The term "sewage" means any substance or liquid containing any of the waste products or excrementitious or other discharges from the bodies of human beings or animals.

The term "industrial waste" means any liquid or solid substance, not sewage, resulting from any process employed in manufacturing or industry.

The term "water returned" or its equivalent means the return into a tributary or into the channel of the Delaware river of water after the same has been used for any purpose and in this sense the terms "sewage" and "industrial waste" shall be construed as being "water returned".

The term "industry" as applied to the use of water means the use of water for manufacturing and industrial purposes in all cases in which the water used is not taken from a public water supply system.

The term "power" as applied to the use of water means the use of water for the development of energy whether that use be direct or indirect.

The term "navigation" as applied to the use of water means the use of water for transportation and for the operation of water craft for all purposes.

The term "develop," "developed" or "development," when referring to the use of water from the channel of the Delaware river or a tributary shall include any means for making the water available for use by the construction of any intake, dam or other works.

The term "point of development" means the point nearest the mouth of a tributary at which any dam or intake is built in connection with any development of the waters of such tributary.

The term "divert" or "diversion" when referring to water in the channel of the Delaware river means the taking or removal of water from the said channel when the water taken or removed is not returned into the said channel within a distance of twelve miles below the point of diversion measured along the center line of the said channel.

The term "divert" or "diversion" when referring to the water of a tributary of the Delaware river means the taking or removal of water from that tributary or from any portion thereof when the water taken or removed is not returned into the channel of the Delaware river above the point at which the tributary enters the said channel or within a distance of twelve miles below that point, measured along the center line of the said channel.

The term "point of diversion" means the point or place at which water is taken or removed from a tributary or from the channel of the Delaware river.

The term "developed for diversion" means conservation of water by storage or otherwise on or from any one or more tributaries for the purpose of diversion at any point on the tributary or tributaries, or at some lower point in the channel of the Delaware river after the water shall have reached said lower point as water in transit.

The term "ordinary flow" means a flow of forty-five hundredths (0.45) of a cubic foot per second for each square mile of drainage area above the point at which the "ordinary flow" is to be determined.

The term "ordinary low flow" means a flow of fifteen hundredths (0.15) of a cubic foot per second for each square mile of drainage area above the point at which the "ordinary low flow" is to be determined.

The term "allotment" means the share of any signatory state in the water flowing in the channel of the Delaware river which is in excess of all water in transit.

The term "New York-New Jersey state line" means the boundary line between the states of New York and New Jersey, which line, for the purposes of this compact, shall be considered as crossing the channel of the Delaware river due east to the so-called "Tri-State Rock" and continuing thence in a southeasterly direction across the Neversink river to a rock on the west shore of the Hudson river near the village of Nyack.

The term "water in transit" means water which has been developed by storage or otherwise and which is flowing in the channel of the Delaware river under the provisions of Article VII.

The term "point of storage" means the point or place in the channel of the Delaware river at which a dam is maintained.

The term "Commission" means the Tri-State Delaware River Commission.

Article III.

In the development, use or diversion of the waters of the Delaware river and in all considerations of quantity and preservation of quality the order of importance and public value of water shall be as follows: (A) domestic and municipal, (B) sanitation, (C) industry and power, and (D) navigation.

Article IV.

Any administrative department, political subdivision, corporation, partnership, association or person authorized in that behalf by or under the laws of any signatory state may exercise the rights and privileges herein conferred on such state, subject to the duties and obligations herein imposed on such state.

Article V.

Any tributary or any part of any tributary of the Delaware river may be developed for any purpose by or under the authority of the signatory state in which it is located, and water so developed may be diverted for use at any point either within or without the drainage area of the Delaware river. In case water so developed is diverted, then the following restrictions and limitations shall apply:

(1) Every such development shall be carried out in compliance with the legislative provisions governing such matters in the state in which it is located.

(2) Every such development shall be so planned and the works shall be so constructed as to bring about the greatest practicable conservation and use of the waters of the tributary on which it is located.

(3) In the case of every such development located above the New York-New Jersey state line there shall be maintained below the point of development during the months of July, August, September and October a reserve flow equal to the ordinary flow at that point, and also if at any other time during the year the flow in the tributary at the point of development is less than the ordinary flow at that point, then a reserve flow equal to the ordinary flow shall be maintained below the point of development. In the case of every such development located below the New York-New Jersey state line there shall, at all times, be maintained below the point of development a reserve flow equal to the ordinary low flow at that point.

(4) The total drainage area in any state which may be developed for diversion under the provisions of this article shall not exceed three-fifths of the drainage area of the Delaware river which lies within that state.

Article VI.

All water which, at any time, is flowing in the channel of the Delaware river above the New York-New Jersey state line and which is in excess of all water in transit in said channel is allotted to the states of New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania, and with the approval of the Commission, as provided in Article VIII hereof, each of these states may divert from the said channel at any point, above the said state line, that portion of its allotment which is in excess of a reserve flow of fifteen hundredths (0.15) of a cubic foot per second for each square mile of drainage area above the point of diversion and any point below the New York-New Jersey state line each of the said states may divert that portion of its allotment which is in excess of a reserve flow of twelve hundredths (0.12) of a cubic foot per second for each square mile of drainage area above the New York-New Jersey state line. The allotments of the respective states shall be computed from time to time as follows:

In case no tributary within the drainage area above the New York-New Jersey state line shall have been developed for diversion, then the allotment of each state, at any point in the channel of the Delaware river above the said state line, hereinafter called the normal allotment, shall be one-third of the total water which may, at any time, be flowing in said channel at that point. In case one or more tributaries within said drainage area shall have been developed for diversion by only one of the signatory states, then the respective allotments of the signatory states shall be determined by the following rule. The allotment of said diverting state shall be determined by subtracting from its normal allotment an amount to be computed by multiplying said normal allotment by a fraction, the numerator of which shall be the total drainage area developed for diversion on said tributaries within that state above the New York-New Jersey state line and the denominator of said fraction shall be the total drainage area above the said state line; and the allotment of each one of the other two states shall be determined by adding to its normal allotment one-half of the amount subtracted from the allotment of the diverting state. In case tributaries within the drainage area above the New York-New Jersey state line shall have been developed for diversion by two or more states the rule herein above stated shall be applied separately and in turn as to each diverting state, and the subtractions from and additions to the normal allotments of the states, thus determined, shall fix the allotments of the states as of that time.

All water which originates within the drainage area below the New York-New Jersey state line and enters the channel of the Delaware river below that line and which is in excess of all water in transit in said channel is hereby allotted to the states of New Jersey and Pennsylvania and with the approval of the Commission as provided in Article VIII hereof, each of said states may divert from said channel at any point below the said state line that portion of its allotment which is in excess of a reserve flow of eigtheen hundredths (0.18) of a cubic foot per second for each square mile of drainage area lying above the point of diversion and below the New York-New Jersey state line. The allotments of the states of New Jersey and Pennsylvania in the waters which originate within the drainage area below the New York-New Jersey state line shall be computed from time to time as follows:

In case no tributary within the drainage area below the New York-New Jersey state line shall have been developed for diversion, then the allotment of the states of New Jersey and Pennsylvania at any point in the channel of the Delaware river below said state line, hereinafter called the normal allotment, shall be one-half of the water which has originated within the said drainage area and which, at any time, is flowing in the said channel at such point below said state line; in case New Jersey or Pennsylvania shall have developed for diversion one or more tributaries within said drainage area, then the allotment of the diverting state shall be determined by subtracting from its normal allotment an amount to be computed by multiplying said normal allotment by a fraction, the numerator of which shall be the total drainage area developed for diversion on said tributaries within that state below the New York-New Jersey state line and the denominator shall be the total drainage area below the said state line, and the allotment of the other state shall be increased by the amount by which the allotment of the diverting state has been reduced. In case tributaries within the drainage area below the New York-New Jersey state line shall have been developed for diversion by both New Jersey and Pennsylvania the rule herein above stated shall be applied separately and in turn as to each of them and the subtractions from and additions to the normal allotments of the states, thus determined, shall fix the allotments of the states as of that time.

Dams may be constructed across the channel of the Delaware river by or under the authority of any one of the signatory states for the purpose of storing water developed for diversion, water in transit belonging to said state, or any part or all of the water allotted to it under the provisions of this article. All water so stored may be diverted or released from such reservoir or reservoirs by or under the authority of such state but the flow in the said channel below the point of storage must not be reduced below the ordinary flow whenever the flow above the point of storage is greater than the said ordinary flow. When and if the flow in the said channel above the point of storage is less than the ordinary flow then and in every such case a flow equal to that above the point of storage shall be maintained in the said channel below the point of storage. At all times, however, neither the water in transit nor the allotment or allotments of the other signatory state and states shall be interfered with but must at all times be permitted to pass such dam or dams.

It is the intention of this article that no water shall be diverted from the channel of the Delaware river above the New York-New Jersey state line whenever the flow in the said channel is less than forty-five hundredths (0.45) of a cubic foot per second for each square mile of the total drainage area lying above the point of diversion and it is further intended that no water shall be diverted from the channel of the Delaware river below the New-York-New Jersey state line whenever the flow in the said channel is less than thirty-six hundredths (0.36) of a cubic foot per second for each square mile of the total drainage area lying above the point of diversion, but nothing contained in this article shall be construed to limit or prevent the diversion of water in transit, of water diverted under any vested right, or of water stored for diversion as herein provided.

Article VII.

The channel of the Delaware river is hereby constituted a carrier for conducting water, designated as "water in transit," which has been developed or stored in accordance with the terms of Article V or Article VI. Such water may be removed or diverted at any time or place from the channel of the Delaware river by or under authority of the state under whose auspices the development was made, irrespective of the quantity of water flowing in the channel of the Delaware river and the reserve flow provisions of Article VI. The rate at which such water is released or delivered shall be regulated so far as may be consistent with its economic utilization in such manner as not to unduly interfer with private rights or public interests along the said channel. The daily rate at which such water may be removed or diverted from the channel of the Delaware river shall not exceed the daily rate at which it is released or delivered and no greater quantity may be diverted from the said channel than shall have been released or delivered from the developments made under the provisions of Articles V and VI less the reserve flows provided for in the said Articles V and VI, except that allotted water may be diverted as provided in Article VI. No development or construction in the channel of the Delaware river shall be permitted to interfere with the regularity of the flow of any water which has been released or delivered for carriage.

Article VIII

In order to render possible the utilization or diversion of water flowing in the channel of the Delaware river, each signatory state shall have the right to build dams entirely or partly across said channel and to construct wig dams, headworks, intakes or other necessary facilities at any point or points in or along said channel, subject to the following limitations and stipulations:

(a) All such works shall be built in compliancé with the legislative provisions governing such matters in the state or states in which they are located.

(b) Works for the development of water power may not be built except with the approval of the Commission in accordance with the provisions of Article X hereof.

(c) Approval of the Commission shall be secured for every project which involves the removal or diversion of more than two million gallons of water per day from the channel of the Delaware river; such approval, however, need not at any time be obtained by any administrative department of a signatory state or any political subdivision within a signatory state or by any corporation, partnership, association or person in the case of any intake which is in existence at any point in said channel on the date when this compact becomes effective.

In the exercise of this authority, said Commission shall be governed and its power and authority shall extend to and be limited by the following principles, restrictions and reservations, to wit:

(1) In the case of any project which, in the judgment of the Commission, will not interfere or conflict with any other use of the water flowing in the channel of the Delaware river, the Commission shall approve said project without imposing any restrictions or conditions except such as may be necessary to insure compliance with the provisions of this compact.

(2) As between any one or more proposed or possible conflicting uses, the action of the Commission shall be based upon the relative importance of the uses to which the water may be put, as fixed in Article III of this compact, and to the extent that conflict is irreconcilable, that possible and practicable project which will effect the use of water standing highest in the order of importance shall be approved without restrictions or conditions, except such as the Commission may deem necessary to insure compliance with the provisions of this compact. To the extent that conflict is avoidable by a reasonable modification of any or all of the projects which may be involved, the Commission shall fix the terms of such modification, but such terms shall not require, as against the higher use, pumping in place of gravity delivery of water, nor impose on the higher use the cost of any impounding works or any unreasonable enlargement of pipe lines, conduits or tunnels, or impose on the higher use any undue burden in either expense or convenience of operation. In the case of conflict in uses of the same relative order of importance, preference shall be given to an established use over a proposed one and the Commission shall have authority to determine the manner in which such conflicting uses may be harmonized, without imposing unreasonable expense or undue burden upon either or any of them.

Article IX.

No water from the drainage area of the Delaware river shall be diverted to any point outside of the boundaries of the states signatory to this compact. No one of the signatory states may give, grant or dispose of to another signatory state, or to any holder of an authorization therefrom, any water developed by or allotted to it under the provisions of this compact, except by legislative act when necessary and then only with the approval of the Commission; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent or prohibit the joint exercise by or under the authority of any two or more of the signatory states of the rights conferred by this compact and such joint exercise of rights is hereby authorized.

Article X.

With the approval of the Commission any signatory state may construct or authorize the construction of a dam, wing dam, headworks, power house or other structure in or across the channel of the Delaware river for the main purpose of the development of water power. Provided, that every such authorization shall be limited to such period not exceeding fifty years as the said state shall determine and set forth in its authorization. Provided further, that the holder of such authorization shall be entitled to extension and renewal thereof upon the same terms until such holder shall have received, through recapture or purchase by the authorizing state or by a duly authorized subsequent holder of like authority from said state, repayment of the capital prudently invested in the power project upon the faith of the authorization plus such reasonable damages, if any, to property of such holder which is valuable, serviceable and dependent for its usefulness upon the continuance of such authorization, but not recaptured or purchased, as may be caused by the severance therefrom of property taken. Provided further, that the authorizing state may, in the discretion of its appropriate agency, officer or employee empowered in that behalf, embody in its authorization such other terms, conditions and stipulations as such agency, officer or employee shall deem necessary to protest the present and future interests of each of the three signatory states and their people in the construction, maintenance and operation of the project and in the water and power resources to be utilized thereby and suitable to secure to the holder of such authorization a reasonable opportunity for a fair return on the capital prudently invested in the project. And provided further, that every such authorization shall be on the following conditions, which shall be expressed in such authorization, namely: (a) That the authorization shall become null and void unless, within the time specified therein, the holder of such authorization shall secure from the United States such license, permit or authority as may be lawfully required; and (b) that if and to the extent that any of the rights or powers set forth or reserved as rights or powers of the United States in or pursuant to the provisions of such license, permit or authority shall be waived by the United States or be unenforceable by the United States, then and to that extent such rights and powers (including, if so waived or unenforceable any rights of recapture, extension, or renewal so set forth or reserved), subject to such alterations in plans, specifications, or structures, and such extensions of time for commencing or completing structures, as may have been made or granted by the United States, may be exercised and enforced by the signatory state which originally authorized the construction. No project authorized and constructed under the provisions of this article shall, at any time, be operated so as to injuriously affect any project for municipal and domestic water supply which has been or may be established under the provisions of this compact. Subject to such conditions as the Commission may embody in its approval, water for the development of power may be removed from the channel of the Delaware river and carried in a canal or in a pipe to any point below a dam constructed under the provisions of this article, but said water shall be returned to the said channel within a distance of twelve miles below the point of removal measured along the center line of the said channel and there shall always be maintained in the said channel immediately below the dam, such regular and uniform flow of water as the Commission may determine to be reasonable and proper.

Article XI.

In connection with each and every development made under any provisions of this compact, there shall be installed and maintained all equipment and apparatus for measuring quantities and rates of water flow, the determination of which may be necessary for the purpose of showing that the development or construction is being operated in compliance with the provisions of this compact.

Article XII.

In order to put and maintain the waters in the channel of the Delaware river in a condition sanitary and suitable for the uses and purposes set forth by this compact no sewage or industrial waste shall be discharged or permitted to flow into or be placed in or permitted to fall or move into the channel of the Delaware river or into any of its tributaries otherwise than under the following conditions and restrictions:

(1) All sewage discharge or permitted to flow into the channel of the Delaware river above the confluence with the Lehigh river shall, within a time reasonable for the construction of the necessary works, have been so treated as to remove settleable solids, to render the effluent nonputrescible and to effect a reasonable reduction of B. Coli Communis.

(2) All sewage discharged or permitted to flow into the channel of the Delaware river below the confluence with the Lehigh river shall, within a time reasonable for the construction of the necessary works, have been so treated as to at least remove settleable solids and shall be discharged through submerged outlets into said channel; provided that such submerged outlets shall be located and constructed as may be required by the Commission; and provided further, that in order to protect the public health in specific instances such higher degree of treatment shall be used as may be determined to be necessary by the Commission after due notice and hearing.

(3) All sewage discharged or permitted to flow into any tributary of the Delaware river, except the Lehigh river shall be treated to that extent, if any, which may be necessary to maintain the water of such tributary immediately above its confluence with the Delaware river in a sanitary condition at any time at least equal to the sanitary condition at such time of the water of the Delaware river immediately above such confluence.

All sewage discharged or permitted to flow into the Lehigh river shall be treated to that extent, if any, which may be necessary to maintain the water of the Lehigh river immediately above its confluence with the Delaware river in that sanitary condition which the Commission, after due notice and hearing, shall have determined to be necessary because of the nature and extent of the use of the water of the Delaware river below such confluence, provided, however, that the Commission may not require the sanitary condition of the Lehigh river immediately above its confluence with the Delaware river to exceed that of the sanitary condition of the Delaware river immediately above such confluence.

(4) All industrial wastes discharged or permitted to flow into or be placed in or permitted to fall or move into the channel of the Delaware river or any tributary thereof shall first have been treated to such extent, if any, as may be necessary to maintain in the channel of the Delaware river sanitary conditions equivalent to those which would be attained by the treatment of sewage above required in this article; provided, nevertheless, that industrial wastes containing substances likely, in the judgement of the Commission, to produce offensive tastes and odors in any public water supply from the channel of the Delaware river, shall either be wholly prevented from being discharged or from flowing into or from being placed in or permitted to fall or move into said channel or any tributary of the Delaware river, or shall first have been treated to such an extent as to wholly eliminate such taste and odor producing constituents.

This article shall become effective when any one of the signatory states, or any holder of an authorization therefrom shall have begun the work of construction on any project under the provisions of this compact.

Nothing in this article shall be construed to repeal or prevent the enticement of any legislation or the enforcement of any requirement by any signatory state imposing any additional conditions and restrictions to lessen or prevent the pollution of streams within their several jurisdictions.

In order to maintain the water of any tributary immediately above its confluence with the channel of the Delaware river in a sanitary condition which will meet the requirements set forth in paragraphs (3) and (4) of this article, the administrative determination and enforcement of the degree of treatment, if any, necessary to fulfill such requirements shall be made and undertaken by the proper officer or agent of the state wherein such tributary lies, provided, however, that any other signatory state or any municipality, citizen or resident thereof or property owner therein or any holder of any authorization therefrom under this compact, shall nevertheless have full right either jointly or severally to sue for the enforcement of any and all of the provisions of this article and for the redress of any injuries which may have resulted by reason of a violation thereof.

Article XIII.

The beneficial effects of forest covered areas on the regularization of stream flow, with attendant greater potential use of streams for domestic, industrial and navigation purposes, and the greater stability of public ownership in management for the protection of forested drainage areas is clearly recognized and agreed to by the states party to this compact. Each signatory state hereby adopts and will adhere to a policy covering the establishment and maintenance of an adequate forest cover on public and privately owned land in the drainage area of the Delaware river and the maintenance of the highest practicable standards of protection from fire on these lands.

Article XIV.

All lands, water-rights or easements necessary for the construction and maintenance of any dam in or across the channel of the Delaware river may, with the approval of the Commission, be appropriated and condemned by any signatory state or by the holder of authorization therefrom. All damage resulting from the exercise of the right and power of condemnation conferred by this article shall be ascertained, recovered and paid as provided by Article XV hereof.

Article XV.

All damage to persons or property resulting from the exercise of any rights under this compact shall be determined under the rule of damages, in accordance with the procedure, and in such manner as is provided by the law of the state in which the damages are suffered. The damages suffered in the State of Pennsylvania shall be ascertained, recovered and paid as provided by the forty-first section of the Act approved April Twenty-ninth, One thousand eight hundred and seventy-four (Pamphlet Laws 73) and the amendments and supplements thereto. The damages suffered in the State of New York or in the State of New Jersey shall be ascertained, recovered and paid as provided by any general or other act applying thereto in effect at the time when the development is authorized. The court or courts which have jurisdiction of the subject matter in the respective states shall have jurisdiction of the person of every party in interest for the purposes of notice, summons and hearing throughout all three signatory states.

Article XVI.

Nothing herein contained shall be construed to abridge any riparian rights under the laws of the several states to the use of water from the channel of the Delaware river or from any of its tributaries except upon payment of just compensation to be ascertained and adjudged by due process of law.

Article XVII.

Nothing contained in this compact shall operate to impair any vested right of diversion or use of the waters of the Delaware river which may exist or have become vested at any time prior to the ratification hereof, but the amount of water diverted under such vested right shall be charged against the allotment of the state under whose authority or jurisdiction said right became vested. In each of the signatory states rights to divert or use the waters of the Delaware river or its tributaries, together with property necessary to effect the same, though devoted to public use, may be taken for any other public use higher in the order of importance as set forth in Article III, provided that nothing in this article shall be construed to authorize the taking of vested rights or property without just compensation to be determined by due process of law governing such matters in the respective states.

Article XVIII.

Nothing in this compact shall be construed to prevent the institution or prosecution of any proceedings in any court of competent jurisdiction for the purpose of remedying or correcting by damages, injunctions, mandamus or other process civil or criminal any act of commission or omission in violation of the provisions of this compact, for the protection of any rights under it, for the enforcement of any of its provisions, or for the awarding and enforcement of payment of compensation for any injury which may be caused by the exercise of any right or privilege herein authorized.

Article XIX.

Nothing in any existing treaty between any two of the states signatory hereto shall be modified or changed or invalidated by anything herein contained except as any provision in any such existing treaty may be expressely repugnant to any provision of this compact, but nothing in any said existing treaty shall be construed to prevent the erection and maintenance of any dam across the channel of the Delaware river, as authorized or permitted under the provisions of this compact.

Article XX.

The governor of each of the signatory states is hereby directed to designate an appropriate state officer or employee and may appoint not more than two other persons all of whom shall serve, until their successors are designated or appointed, on a joint Commission to be known as the Tri-State Delaware River Commission. In voting on all matters which come before the Commission, each signatory state shall have one vote and no decision or approval shall be rendered by the said Commission except on the unanimous vote of the three signatory states. Every decision rendered by the Commission shall be accompanied by a certificate of the Commissioners to the effect that the said decision is for the best public interest and is in compliance with the provisions of this compact. The Commission in rendering every decision shall therein fully state the reasons on which its action in the premises was based.

The Commission shall meet annually on the first Wednesday in October, the first annual meeting to be held at Trenton, New Jersey, and subsequent annual meetings shall be held at such place or places as the Commission may determine. The powers and duties of the Commission, in addition to those hereinbefore set forth, shall be as follows:

(1) To make rules and regulations respecting the government of its organization and the conduct of its business.

(2) To appoint from among its members a Chairman, a Vice Chairman and a Secretary and to hold meetings at such times and such places as it may determine.

(3) To set up and require the keeping of a comprehensive system of stream flow and other measurements as may be necessary to determine:

(a) The amounts of water diverted and released under any provision of this compact.

(b) The maintenance of the required reserve flows below all points of development and diversion.

(c) All other facts and data requisite for determining that the provisions of this compact are at all times being complied with.

(4) To report annually to the governors for the information of the legislatures of the signatory states as to the developments and projects which have been begun and completed under the terms of this compact and as to such other matters as may come within its purview.

(5) To observe the operation of all developments and to issue such orders as may be necessary to require compliance with any of the provisions of this compact.

(6) To proceed with a study and investigation looking toward a complete and comprehensive development of all the water resources of the drainage area of the Delaware river and to report the results of such study and investigation to the governors of the signatory states for the information of the respective legislatures.

(7) To make a study of the possibilities for the development of water power along the channel of the Delaware river and to designate tentative locations and heights of dams along the said channel.

(8) The Commission or any member or any duly authorized officer, agent or representative shall have power to and is hereby authorized to enter without let or hindrance upon the lands and property upon which any or all projects and developments are being constructed, operated or maintained under any authorization provided by this compact. Each state throught its appropriate departments shall cooperate with the Commission as the said Commission may require in obtaining such data, information and records which may be necessary to enable said Commission to exercise its powers and duties.

(9) The attorney general of each signatory state or a deputy shall serve as the legal adviser of the commissioners representing that state.

(10) The Commission shall have the power to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of any papers, books, documents and records for any purpose that may be necessary to ascertain that the provisions of this compact are at all times complied with, and any member of the Commission shall have power to administer oaths to all witnesses who may be called before it. Subpoenas issued by the Commission shall be signed by one of the members thereof within the jurisdiction of the state from which he has been designated and may be served by any person of full age. The fees of witnesses required to attend before such Commission shall be Five Dollars ($5.00) for each day's attendance and ten cents ($0.10) for each mile of travel by the nearest generally traveled route in going to and from the place where the attendance of the witness is required, such fees to be paid when the witness is excused from further attendance, and the disbursements made in payment of his fees shall be audited and paid in the same manner provided for the payment of expenses of said Commission; provided, however, that no witness subpoenaed at the instance of parties other than such Commission shall be entitled to compensation therefrom for attendance and travel, unless the Commission shall certify that this testimony was material to the matter investigated and necessary or essential for the effectuation of this compact. If the person subpoenaed to attend before the Commission, or a member thereof, fails to obey the command of such subpoena without reasonable cause, or if a person in attendance before such Commission, or a member thereof, refuses, without lawful cause, to be examined or to answer a legal or pertinent question or to produce a book or paper or other document when ordered so to do by the Commission, or any member thereof, the Commission, or such member thereof, may apply to any court of general jurisdiction in the state or county wherein such testimony is taken or to be taken, and such court, or any judge or justice thereof, shall have power, upon proof, by affidavit, of the facts to make an order, returnable in not less than two days nor more than ten days, directing such person to show cause before the court, or justice thereof, who made the order, or any other justice or judge having jurisdiction, why he should not comply with the subpoena or order of the Commission. Upon the return of such order, the court or justice or judge before whom the matter shall come on for hearing shall examine such person under oath, whose testimony may be relevant, and such person shall be given an opportunity to be heard, and if the court or justice or judge shall determine that such person refuses without reasonable excuse to obey the command of such subpoena or to be examined or to answer a legal or pertinent question or produce a book, document or other paper, which he was ordered to produce, said court or justice or judge may order such person to comply forthwith with the subpoena or order of the Commission, and any failure to obey such order of the court or justice or judge may be punished by said court or justice or judge as a contempt of such court. No person shall be excused from testifying or producing any books, papers or other documents subject to the authorization of this article upon the ground that his testimony might tend to incriminate him or to subject him to a penalty or forfeiture. But no person shall be prosecuted, punished or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any act, transaction, matter or thing concerning which he shall, under oath, have testified or produced documentary evidence, and no testimony so given or produced shall be received against him upon any criminal or penal investigations or proceedings; provided, however, that no person so testifying shall be exempt from prosecution or punishment for any perjury committed by him in his testimony. Nothing herein contained is intended to give or shall be construed as in any manner giving to any corporation immunity of any kind.

(11) The appropriate department of each signatory state represented by the Commissioner designated under the provisions of this article shall, as the Commission may determine, furnish at the cost of the three signatory states in equal shares all such equipment, service and facilities as will enable the Commission to properly and efficiently exercise the powers and perform the duties defined in this article. All expenses of the Commission shall be paid, share and share alike, from funds provided by the signatory states, said funds in each state being made available to that department of the state which is represented by the officer or employee designated by the governor as a member of the said Commission and all said expenses shall be paid from said funds on the certification of the said designated state officer or employee or in such other manner as the laws of the signatory state may prescribe.

Article XXI.

Should any claim or controversy arise between any two or more of the states signatory to this compact with respect to the meaning or performance of any of the terms of this compact, or in case it should become desirable to modify any provision or all of this compact, then the governor of each state affected, upon the request of any one of them, shall each forthwith appoint a Commissioner empowered to jointly consider and adjust such claim or controversy or recommend such modification subject to ratification by the legislatures of the signatory states and, the Congress of the United States having consented thereto, such modification shall be in full force and effect.

Article XXII.

Should any part of this compact be held to be contrary to the Constitution of any signatory state or of the United States all other severable parts of this compact shall continue to be in full force and effect.

Article XXIII.

This compact may be determined at any time by concurrent legislative action of all the signatory states. In the event of the termination of this compact all rights and obligations which may have become established or vested under its provisions shall remain and continue unimpaired. Said termination shall be subject to such terms and conditions as may be agreed to by the signatory states.

Article XXIV.

This compact shall be submitted for adoption to the legislature of each of the signatory states at their several sessions beginning in the month of January, 1925; and upon adoption by the legislative act of each and all of said states, the Congress of the United States having consented thereto, it shall be in full force and effect.

In Witness Whereof, the Commissioners have signed this compact in triplicate originals, one of which shall be deposited with the Secretary of State of each of the signatory states.

Done at the City of New York, New York, this twenty-fourth day of January, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five.

To the General Assembly, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Session of 1925.

The Tax Commission of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania respectfully submits the following report:—

At the Legislative Session of 1923, the following joint resolution was duly enacted:

A Joint Resolution constituting a commission to examine the tax laws of the Commonwealth and of other States and countries, and to prepare and submit bills to carry into effect its recommendations; prescribing the powers and duties of said commission; and making an appropriation.

Section 1. Be it resolved, &c., That a tax commission of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is hereby constituted, consisting of seven citizens of the Commonwealth, two of whom are to be appointed by the Governor, two by the President pro tempore of the Senate, and three by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to examine the laws of this State and of other States and countries relating to taxation, to investigate systems and methods of taxation, particularly with regard to the best methods of equitably and effectually reaching all property which should be subjected to taxation, and avoiding conflicts and duplication of taxation on the same property, and to prepare the needed legislation to carry such methods into effect in this Commonwealth. The members of said tax commission shall serve without compensation, but their necessary traveling expenses and hotel bills, while actually attending to the business of the tax commission, shall be considered part of the expenses of said tax commission.

Section 2. The said tax commission is hereby authorized to sit at Harrisburg or elsewhere within the Commonwealth, to choose a chairman from among its own members, to employ a secretary and counsel, and such other assistants as may be needed, to take testimony, subpoena witnesses, and compel the production of books, documents, and papers, and otherwise have all the powers of a legislative committee.

Section 3. The said tax commission, on or before February first, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five (1925), shall report the results of its investigation to the General Assembly, together with such proposed legislative measures as it deems advisable to carry its recommendations into effect.

Section 4. The sum of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000), or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated for the defraying of the expense of said tax commission, to be paid, upon the certificate of the chairman of the said tax commission, by warrant of the Auditor General on the State Treasurer in the usual manner.

Approved—The 14th day of June, A. D. 1923, in the sum of fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000). I withhold my approval from the remainder of said appropriation because of insufficient revenue.

Gifford Pinchot.

In accordance with the terms of the foregoing resolution, the Commission was duly appointed as follows: Alexander R. Wheeler and Franklin S. Edmonds, by the Governor; James H. Reed and John P. Connelly, by the President pro tempore of the Senate; John P. Wood, Marion K. McKay and Archibald F. Jones, by the Speaker of the House.

Pursuant to the call of the Governor, the Commission met for the purpose of organization on March 17, 1924, in the executive chamber of the State Capitol, and duly organized by the election of Franklin S. Edmonds as Chairman, and Alton W. Lick as Secretary. Later, Henry W. Van Pelt was appointed Statistician to the Commission.

Meetings of the Commission.

The Commission met in executive session on April 24, 1924, in the Senate caucus room at the State Capitol when Leonard P. Fox, Research Director of the State Chamber of Commerce, and Clyde L. King, Secretary of the Commonwealth and Chief Budget Officer, testified. At this meeting it was decided to hold six public hearings in various cities of the Commonwealth, whereof due notice should be given to the newspapers, commercial, agricultural and real estate associations and other organized agencies, so that all citizens who had suggestions to bring before the Commission might have opportunity for hearing.

At the same time a public statement was issued, suggesting certain questions with reference to the tax situation of the Commonwealth, of which 10,000 copies were printed and distribution made to the newspapers, commercial associations, etc. The statement is as follows:

The Pennsylvania Tax Commission has held its first public hearing at Harrisburg. It has received a number of suggestions, both orally and by correspondence, the which the attention of the citizens of the Commonwealth is invited. There will be other public hearings at Williamsport, Erie, Scranton, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, the next hearings being held at Williamsport in the Council Chamber on Thursday, June 12th, at 3 P. M., and at Erie on June 19th and 20th.

Citizens of the Commonwealth who are interested in the following questions, or in any other questions relating to the tax system of the Commonwealth, are invited to appear at these hearings and to present their views.

Among the suggestions which the Commission has received up to the present time are the following:

1. Pennsylvania receives its state revenue from many sources, including seventeen special taxes. Should this plan be abandoned and a general tax law, such as tax on incomes or sales, or property, be substituted? Should there be a codification of the tax laws of Pennsylvania?

2. Is the present system of taxation in Pennsylvania unfair to the farmer and home owner?

3. Should the ten-mills and four-mills tax on banks be maintained in its present optional form, and also should state banks and trust companies be taxed at the same rate?

4. Is business paying its fair share of taxation when Federal, state, and local taxation are considered?

5. Should natural resources, such as coal, oil, natural gas, cement, etc., be taxed on the basis of annual output or as at present on the market value of the property?

6. Should Pennsylvania abandon the present system of taxation in favor of the graduated or progressive system?

7. (a) Should the license tax on heavy motor trucks be increased?

(b) Should any part of the receipts for motor licenses be distributed for highway purposes to the localities paying same?

8. Should public salaries and fees, paid by the Commonwealth and the subdivisions thereof, which are exempt from taxation under the Federal income tax, be paid for State purposes?

9. Should the real estate of public utilities be taxed for local purposes?

10. Should the present four-mills tax on mortgages be retained?

11. Should there be any changes in the existing transfer inheritance tax law of Pennsylvania?

The first public hearing was held in the Senate caucus room of the State Capitol building on May 21 and 22, 1924. The following witnesses appeared before the Commission: Charles A. Snyder, of Pottsville, State Treasurer; Allen B. Miller, of Susquehanna, representing the State Grange; John M. McSparran, of Lancaster, Master of the State Grange; Fred Brinkman, of Harrisburg, Secretary of the State Grange; Samuel S. Lewis, of York, Auditor General; and John H. Fertig, Assistant Director of th Legislative Reference Bureau.

The second public hearing was held in Williamsport, Pennsylvania, on June 12 and 13, 1924. Testimony wos offered by the following: John G. Reading, President of the Susquehanna Trust Company of Williamsport and Chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association; Robert D. Thorne, President of the Darling Valve Manufacturing Company of Williamsport; R. G. Brownell, President of the Central Pennsylvania Lumber Company, of Williamsport; H. A. Miller, of C. A. Reed Company, manufacturers of paper novelties; Brua C. Keefer, President of the Brua C. Keefer Manufacturing Company, of Williamsport; Fred W. Sprout, of Sprout, Waldron & Company, manufacturers of milling machinery, Muncy, Pa.; Lewis Piollet, of Wysox, and Roland M. Benjamin, of Towanda, representing Bradford County Grange; and J. Fred Katzmaier, Thomas M. Morgan and Henry Myers, representing the Mercantile Association of Williamsport.

The third public hearing was held at Erie, Pennsylvania, on June 19 and 20, 1924, and testimony was presented by the following: Thomas C. Durban, President of the Erie Motor Club; James Sherwin, of Erie; Dana Jones, Secretary of the Manufacturers Association of Erie; T. Rossiter, member of the Erie Real Estate Board; George L. Epp, President of the Retail Merchants Association; Mrs. Arthur Brevelier, President of the Woman's Club; Harper G. Smith, relator; G. W. Mahoney, representing the Wholesale Credit Association; J. S. Arbuckle, automobile dealer; E. A. Austin, accountant; J. A. Stadter, Tax Assessor of Cory; F. E. Westley, Tax Assessor of Cory; H. L. Moore, of Erie, representing the Perry Iron Company; May Rossiter, Clerk in the office of the Register of Wills of Erie County; P. J. Barber, agent for the New York Life Insurance Company; A. E. Sisson, former State Senator and Auditor General of the Commonwealth; Thomas Mehaffy, member of Erie Council and Director of Finance; R. S. Scobell, Secretary and Business Manager of Erie School District; and Captain Morrison, of Erie.

The fourth public hearing was held at Pittsburgh on September 24 and 25, 1924. Testimony was offered by the following: E. B. Coll, President of the Farmers Deposit Saving Bank; George J. Schad, Chairman of the Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes; M. B. Lesher, Assistant Solicitor of Allegheny County; Mr. Eades, Chief Property Assessor of the County Board; George S. Davidson, President of the Gulf Refining Company and member of the Special Committee on Taxes of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce; A. L. Humphrey, President of the Westinghouse Airbrake and President of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce; Hale Hill, representing Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation and formerly Chief of the Bureau of Corporations in the office of the Auditor General; Edward A. Woods, of the Equitable Life Insurance Company; A. W. Robertson, of the Pittsburgh Railways Company; C. L. S. Tingley, of Philadelphia, representing the American Electric Power Company; A. R. Meyers, of Scranton; Thomas Liggett, representing the Real Estate Association of Pennsylvania; A. W. Thompson, President of the Philadelphia Company; John G. Marshall, member of the Tax Law Revision Commission of 1919; Mrs. J. O. Miller, President of the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters; J. B. Shea, President of the Joseph Horne Company, a large department store corporation; Alfred Hurlbert, of Pittsburgh, representing natural gas companies; and Thomas McMahon, Chief Assessor of Pittsburgh.

The fifth public hearing of the Commission was held at Philadelphia on October 2 and 3, 1924. Testimony was offered by the following: Charles B. Hall, President of City Council; George H. Biles, Director of Public Works and formerly Highway Commissioner of the Commonwealth; Joseph P. Gaffney, City Solicitor of Philadelphia; Edwin R. Cox, Chairman of the Finance Committee of the City Council and formerly a member of the General Assembly; Charles E. Hires, representing the Board of Trade of Philadelphia; W. H. Loesche, Assistant Trust Officer of the Girard Turst Company; Robert Mayer, Trust Officer of the Provident Trust Company; William Smedley, Secretary of the Retail Merchants Association; Albert Foster and Harry Boyd, representing the Pennsylvania Shoe Retailers Association; Irving L. Wilson, and R. W. Tunis, of the Retail Merchants Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce; W. B. Starr, of the Retail Lumber Dealers Association; William J. Freihofer, Charles E. Gunsenhauser and J. H. Shoppe, of the Pennsylvania Bakers Association; Robert L. Montgomery of the Tri-State Wholesale Grocers Association; James Crawford, of the Grocers and Importers Exchange; Sampel B. Crowell, of the Retail Coal Merchants; A. G. Peterson, representing the Association of Manufacturers; and Thomas M. Hyndman, representing the Retail Merchants Association; Conyers Read, representing the Pennsylvania Textile Manufacturers, with Simon Miller and Millard D. Brown: Henry W. Moore, of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association; Thomas F. Watson, City Treasurer of Philadelphia; Simon Walter, member of Philadelphia City Council: Charles J. Hepburn, representing the Philadelphia Real Estate Board and the Pennsylvania Real Estate Board; W. Edwin Blair, representing the Philadelphia Real Estate Board; John G. Williams, President of the Philadelphia Real Estate Board; Richard Weglein, President of the Board of Mercantile Appraisers of Philadelphia County and former President of City Council; Benjamin H. Ludlow, member of General Assembly from Montgomery County and also member of the Local Tax Revision Commission of 1919; David N. Fell Jr., Chairman of the Board of Revision of Taxes; John L. Evans, of Lower Merion Township; Jonathan M. Steere, Trust Officer of the Girard Trust Company; Joseph K. Marshall, Chairman of the Committee on Legislation, Philadelphia Real Estate Board; Andrew McDonald, representing the Commissioners of Lower Merion Township; H. M. Lessig, President of the Pottstown School Board; and William J. Byrnes, President of the Montgomery County School Directors Association.

The sixth public hearing was held at Scranton on October 9 and 10, 1924, at which the following testified: Mr. Mattis, City Solicitor of Scranton; H. M. Siegel, of the Scranton Realty Board; Mrs. D. M. Rombach, representing the Century Club of Scranton; William F. Shean, of the Commercial Association of Scranton; J. H. Collins, representing the Commercial Association of Scranton; William S. Jenney, of New York, representing the Anthracite Coal Operators Association; Allen C. Dodson, representing the Independent Anthracite Coal Operators Association; James H. Torrey, representing the Hudson Coal Company; James A. Linen, Jr., Edgar A. Jones, J. W. Browning, E. R. Kreitner, R. J. Hubbard, representing the Scranton Clearing House Association and Fiduciaries Committee; Thomas Murphy, newspaper editor; Mark Edgar, Secretary of the Scranton Chamber of Commerce; John H. Jordon, Chairman of the Board of Assessors; H. L. Taylor, County Solicitor of Lackawanna County; Edwin A. Voltz and Edwin L. Partridge, representing the Lions Club of Scranton.

Since the conclusion of the public hearings, the Commission has held executive sessions at Harrisburg on October 20 and November 12, at Philadelphia on October 1 and December 1 and 2, and at Harrisburg on December 22 and 23, 1924, and January 13 and 14, 1925. At each of these sessions testimony was also taken on particular matters before the Commission. At Harrisburg testimony was offered by J. E. Wagner and Hubert Eicher, of the Department of Public Instruction, and S. E. Miller and Mrs. Elizabeth B. Kobler, members of the Taxpayers League of Harrisburg.

At Philadelphia testimony was taken of William H. Connell, Deputy Secretary of Highways. The following also testified: A. G. Thacher and A. C. Charles, counsel for the American Institute of Marine Underwriters; Hendon Chubb, Vice-President of the Federal Insurance Company of New Jersey; Walter M. Parsons, Vice-President, Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company of New York, representing marine underwriters; Bayard Henry, director and attorney, and G. C. Morris, Vice-President of the Insurance Company of North America. The following appeared before the Commission at the request of the Auditor General: Robert M. Boyle, J. Lee Patton and William M. Boenning, representing the Auditor General in the collection of inheritance taxes in the City of Philadelphia.

On December 22, 1924, the Commission held a conference at Harrisburg with representatives of the Tax Commission of Massachusetts, New York, Maryland and Kentucky for the purpose of considering inheritance taxes on the personal property of nonresident decedents. The object of this conference was to ascertain whether other representative states would unite with Pennsylvania in the effort to remedy the existing evils, caused by the multiplicity of states taxes on certain forms of inheritance. The conference united in a statement, a copy of which is attached to this report, marked Exhibit A.

Acknowledgments.

The Commission acknowledges the helpful co-operation which it has received from all of the officers of the Commonwealth upon whom it has called for information, including the Governor, Secretary of Commonwealth Auditor General, State Treasurer, Secretary of Internal Affairs, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Secretary of Highways and Secretary of Welfare. The Legislative Reference Bureau has prepared for the Commission a digest of the tax laws of the Commonwealth and all of the suggested legislation which accompanies this report. The chambers of commerce and trade associations in various parts of the Commonwealth have all contributed to the stock of information which has been presented to the Commission. Particular reference should be made to the Chambers of Commerce of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, where special committees were appointed for the purpose of considering the tax problem in this State.

Acknowledgment is also due to Oscar Leser, Tax Commissioner of Maryland; Henry F. Long, Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation of Massachusetts; Mark Graves, Tax Commissioner of New York; Stephen T. Cole and William E. Stevens, Deputy Tax Commissioners of New York; William B. Belknap, special representative of the Tax Commission of Kentucky; Thomas W. Page and A. E. Holcombe, President and Secretary of the National Tax Association; and Thomas N. Carver, of Harvard University.

The Commission has been at work for a period of but ten months, and in that time it has not been able to examine thoroughly the laws of other states and countries relating to taxes, and to investigate their systems and methods of taxation, as provided in the resolution of its appointment. Upon certain topics which were of importance to this Commonwealth, the Commission has called upon representatives of other states for suggestions and advice. The members of the Commission recognize, however, in presenting this report to the General Assembly, that it is not a complete study of the problem, which may only be had with more time and a larger appropriation.

The report of the Commission will be devoted to the following:

I. An account of the present tax system of Pennsylvania.
II. Some recommendations for immediate statutory changes in the existing tax system.
III. The financial problem of the future.
IV. A suggested plan for a permanent financial policy.

SECTION I.

AN ACCOUNT OF THE PRESENT TAX SYSTEM OF PENNSYLVANIA.

In this section of the report, we outline briefly each of the important existing taxes, with certain comments which have been presented to the Commission, together with certain problems suggested for which a more detailed study is required.

The existing tax system is the result of a series of taxing laws, which go back, in some cases, to the early days of the Commonwealth. There has been no general revision of the system from the beginning, but as the need for additional revenue became acute, new and additional taxes were levied upon certain kinds of business, associations, industries, or individual groups, in order to produce the necessary revenue.

In general, the main forms of revenue for the Commonwealth may be classified as follows:

A. Business Taxes.

1. Capital stock tax, dating originally from 1844 and now imposed by the Act of Assembly of July 22, 1913, upon all domestic and foreign corporations, joint stock associations, limited partnerships, and companies doing business in the State, at the rate of 5 mills upon the actual value of the capital stock employed in Pennsylvania; exempting, however, banks, trust companies, title insurance companies, building and loan associations, foreign insurance companies, (which are taxed in other ways), and all capital stock actually and exclusively invested in manufacturing and laundering, except in the manufacture of liquors (where the rate is 10 mills), and in any manufacturing companies having the right of eminent domain.

For the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, the capital stock tax, including the tax on trust company stock, yielded $18,333,086.

This is the major tax in the fiscal scheme of the Commonwealth, and is recognized by the financial authorities of the State as one of the most stable in its results.

Its advantages may be briefly summarized as follows:

(a) It is collected upon the basis of the annual report of the corporation, partnership or association.

(b) In general, it shows an increase in yield from year to year, corresponding to the increase in wealth and corporate business.

(c) The tax is paid with a fair degree of promptness, and business has accommodated itself to the payment of the tax.

Its disadvantages may be summarized as follows:

(a) The exemption of capital actually engaged in manufacturing and in laundering which, at several hearings, has been urged upon the Commission as unjust and inequitable; although defended by other witnesses whose arguments deserve consideration.

No question before the Commission has been argued on both sides with greater earnestness, but without further study the Commission is unable to agree on a recommendation on this aspect of the tax.

(b) The tax is based upon capital and, like all capital taxes, it bears with great inequality upon business of different earning capacity.

2. Corporate loans tax, dating originally from 1885, and now imposed by the Act of Assembly approved July 15, 1923, at the rate of 4 mills on each dollar of nominal value, upon all domestic and foreign corporations doing business in Pennsylvania, and all counties, cities, boroughs, townships, school districts, and incorporated districts of the Commonwealth; exempting, however, all bank notes and notes discounted by any bank, banking institutions, savings institution, or trust company, all building and loan associations, savings institutions having no capital stock, fire companies, firemen's relief associations, life or fire insurance associations having no capital stock, secret and beneficial societies, labor unions, labor union relief associations, and beneficial organizations paying sick or death benefits from funds received from voluntary contributions or assessments upon members.

For the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, this tax yielded $5,238,574 from business corporations, and in addition $1,613,415 was derived from counties, cities, boroughs, townships, school districts and incorporated districts of the Commonwealth.

Insofar as this tax relates to domestic and foreign corporations, the advantages which are cited above for the capital stock tax apply to it, and it may be fairly considered as a necessary complement of the capital stock tax. So long as the one is retained as a primary source of revenue for the Commonwealth, the other should also be continued. Both taxes have the same advantages and are subject to the same objections.

But this tax, as applied to the loans of counties, cities, boroughs, townships, school districts, and poor districts, is the subject of special objection. It is not good financing for one branch of the State Government to tax the necessary operations of another branch, which results in passing funds from one financial pocket into another with of course, the necesasry cost of collecting, transmitting and caring for such funds. In view of the special hardships of many of the smaller units of the State, including school districts, arising out of the recent expansion of highway and educational functions, and also in view of the fact that this tax results in a misconception of the total cost of local government, in that it must be added to the local taxes, though unavailable for local expenditure, the Commission feels that it is a proper subject for amendment at the present time, and has, therefore, included in its recommendations a bill to abolish this tax insofar as it relates to the subordinate govermental units of the State.

3. Corporation bonus on charters, dating originally from 1849, is a tax imposed by the Act of Assembly approved May 31, 1899, upon the authorized capital stock of domestic corporations, limited partnerships, and joint stock associations. and upon the amount of capital actually employed in the State by foreign companies, with the exemption, however, of building and loan associations and all foreign insurance companies. The rate is one-third of one per cent on the authorized capital, and the yield of this tax in the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, was $1,760,393.

The principal argument in favor of this tax is that it is easily collected at the time of incorporation, or subsequent issue, and in the case of foreign corporations at the time of registration in the Commonwealth.

No criticism has been expressed to the Commission as to either the form of this tax or the method of collection, and in general it is recognized by the taxing authorities of the various states that a bonus payment, in exchange for the privilege of doing business in the form of a corporation, is a proper method of taxation. The rate, however, has been the subject of serious criticism, in comparison with the rates in neighboring states, which are as follows:

New York	1/20 of one per cent.
Massachusetts	1/20 of one per cent.
Connecticut	1/10 of one per cent.
New Jersey	1/50 of one per cent.
Delaware	1/100 of one per cent.
Maryland	1/50 of one per cent.
Ohio	1/10 of one per cent.
West Virginia	$10.00 and an annual license tax levied on the amount of authorized capital stock.

Some of these states also collect an annual franchise tax.

It has been urged strongly that a decrease in the rate would result in the incorporation or registration of more corporations in Pennsylvania, and that it is probable that the increase in the number of corporations would compensate for a decrease in the rate.

The Commission believes that a reduction of the rate to one-tenth of one per cent would be desirable, and therefore has reported a bill to this end.

4. Gross receipts tax, dating originally from 1866, is a tax imposed by the Act of Assembly approved June 1, 1889, on railroad, pipe line, conduits, steamboat, canal, slack water, navigation, transportation, street passenger railway, telephone, telegraph, express, electric light, palace car and sleeping car companies and all other companies, joint stock associations, limited partnerships, domestic or foreign corporations engaged in the same business in the Commonwealth, at the rate of 8 mills on the dollar of gross receipts from the usual business of the utility, exempting receipts from interstate commerce.

For the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, this tax yielded $4,104,414.

The advantage of this tax is that it produces a comparatively certain revenue collected from relatively few tax-paying units, which revenue is increasing with the increase in the volume of public utility business.

The great disadvantage, which has been urged upon the Commission, arises from the fact that this tax has been imposed by the State in lieu of local taxation upon realty owned by the companies and employed in the exercise of their franchises. This has led to serious complaint in many localities, where the public utility business centers, because of the great inequality between such localities and other neighborhoods in the basis for taxation on realty. As a result, it has had a marked effect upon the attitude of some communities toward the expansion of the public utilities. Some managers of utility companies have suggested that it would be equitable to make their property subject to local tax as a fair compensation to the locality for the fire and police protection and other services and advantages received from the local government, and then to allow the utility companies a credit on this state tax of the amount thus paid locally.

This question involves several aspects of the problem of exemption of realty from taxation, considered later by the Commission.

There are, however, certain classes of public utilities which are not subject to this tax. If the tax is to be continued, it is obvious that it should be applied more generally, if not uniformly, to all public utilities. The Commission has, therefore, recommended a bill which would include motor transportation, water power companies and hydro-electric companies under the operation of this tax. In theory this is a tax on transportation and transmission companies, and hence motor transportation companies should be brought under the terms of the law. Water power and hydro-electric companies are in direct competition with the electric light companies, which are now under this tax, and therefore they should be included. It may be that further study will lead to the conclusion that, if this tax is to be retained, all public utilities, including water companies, steam heating companies, natural and manufactured gas companies, should likewise be included under the same terms.

5. Insurance premiums tax, dating originally from 1877, and now imposed by the Act of Assembly approved June 28, 1895, on domestic and foreign companies doing business in the State, at the rate of 8 mills on the gross premiums received by domestic companies from business within the State, and at the rate of 2 per cent on the gross premiums received by foreign insurance companies from business within the State, exempting domestic mutual insurance companies and various classes of income.

For the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, this tax yielded $309,514 from domestic insurance companies, and $3,716,975 from foreign insurance companies.

No general criticisms have been presented to the Commission with reference to this tax, except as relates to the use of the income from the foreign insurance companies, which by the Act of Assembly approved July 15, 1919, is returned to the local units where collected, and is used for the support of firemen's relief associations throughout the State, and also for the maintenance of volunteer fire companies.

It has been represented to the Commission that whatever public moneys are allotted to relief work by the General Assembly should be made the subject of specific appropriations, so that each application may be considered on its merits, and that it is poor fiscal policy to devote the proceeds of any particular tax to a specific purpose of this kind.

Two suggestions have been made with reference to the insurance taxes, to meet which the Commission has made certain recommendations.

First, under a recent decision of the Dauphin County Court, domestic insurance companies are not entitled to take credit for the premiums paid for re-insurance or premiums returned on cancelled policies in computing the basis of the tax, while foreign insurance companies are allowed such credits. This is an obvious inequality and the Commission therefore recommends that the Act be amended so as to bring both the domestic and foreign companies under the same rule.

Second, special attention has been directed to the problems of marine insurance, which is to a large extent a new field for the insurance companies of this Commonwealth. As the companies which engage in this business compete with the English and other foreign marine insurance companies, it is highly important that if any portion of this business is to be saved for America, competition should be based upon the same terms. The premiums for marine insurance are taxable in Pennsylvania upon the gross receipts, whereas in foreign countries the tax is based upon the net underwriting profits. In order to bring about equality in the competitive conditions, the Commission has reported a bill defining marine insurance and recommending a tax of 5 per cent upon net underwriting profits in lieu of a tax on gross premiums.

6. Bank stock tax. This is a tax of 10 mills on the par value, or 4 mills on the actual value, of the shares of capital stock of State and National banks, imposed by the Act of Assembly of July 15, 1897, yielding for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, $1,455,704.

In practice, the 4-mills tax is imposed on the book value of the share of stock (the sum of the paid-in capital, surplus, and undivided profits), or, if the bank so elects, the 10-mills tax is paid on the par value of the stock.

So far as the 4-mills feature of this tax is concerned, the same advantages and disadvantages, which already have been discussed with reference to the capital stock tax on corporations generally, apply to this tax.

Four hundred and forty-two banks of Pennsylvania pay the tax at the 10-mills rate. The average rate on book value, by this method of payment is 2.7 mills, and variation as between banks is from one-half to one mill to 5.9 mills. The majority of the banks selecting this method of payment, pay much less than 4 mills upon their actual capital.

The revenue derived in the fiscal year ending June 20, 1924, from the banks availing themselves of the 10-mills option was $634,725, whereas if all had paid at the uniform 4-mills rate, the total return would have been $949,903. The Commission has been unable to find any justification for this alternative form of taxation and therefore recommends that it be eliminated.

7. Title and trust companies stock tax, imposed by the Act of June 11, 1923, upon all trust companies and title insurance companies at the rate of 5 mills upon the book value of their shares of stock, ascertained by addidin gtogether paid-in capital, surplus and undivided profits.

For the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, this tax yielded $809,729. Owing to a recent change in the law relative to the time of settlement of the tax, this amount is only about half the normal annual yield.

This tax was framed at a time when the trust companies, under the laws of the Commonwealth, could engage in a variety of financial transactions which were withheld from the banks, and hence they were taxed at a higher rate than banks. Recent legislation, relating to banking institutions, has to some extent removed the distinction between banks and trust companies, and the time may come in the future when an approximation to uniformity in function should be followed by uniformity in taxation. At present, however, the Commission makes no recommendation on this tax.

8. Private banks gross receipts tax is a tax imposed by the Act of June 13, 1901, upon the gross receipts from commissions, discounts, abatements, allowances, etc., of private banks at the rate of 1 per cent, yielding for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, the sum of $43,858.

The discussion of the principles of business taxes, reserved for the section dealing with the proposed revision of the taxing system, includes a reference to this tax.

9. Notaries public gross receipts tax, imposed on all notaries public by the Act of Assembly approved April 14, 1840, and May 20, 1865, in Philadelphia, at the rate of 5 per cent on gross receipts, and in the remainder of the State at the rate of 50 per cent on gross receipts in excess of $1,500.

For the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, this tax yielded $8,304.

This tax antedates the constitution of 1874, and is imposed at special rates for different sections of the State. It is clearly inequitable, and its yield is so slight that it has no serious effect upon the fiscal system of the Commonwealth.

The Commission has, therefore, recommended its repeal.

10. Building and loan associations matured stock tax, impostd by the Act of Assembly approved June 22, 1897, at the rate of 4 mills upon every building and loan association, domestic and foreign, doing business within the State, on the fully paid and fully matured stock upon which annual, semi-annual, quarterly and monthly cash dividends or interest is paid.

In the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, this tax yitlded $43,740.

The Commission has heard no criticism of this tax, but believes that it is one of the minor taxes of the Commonwealth which might readily be repealed in the event of a general revision of the taxing system, on the general principle that the minor taxes cost more proportionately to collect and administer than major taxes.

11. Net earnings or income tax, imposed by the Act of Assembly of June 1, 1889, at the rate of 3 per cent on the net earnings of domestic and foreign incorporated companies and limited partnerships, exempting, however, all companies subject to tax under the other taxing laws of the Commonwealth.

For the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, the tax yielded $109,009. This tax was designed as a dragnet, to cover such corporations as might not be included in the other tax laws. In actual practice this tax is assessed only against incorporated savings institutions having no capital stock. Its yield is so slight that it may readily be disregarded in the event of any change in the general fiscal system of the Commonwealth, but the Commission regards it as based upon a sound principle, if applied to business generally.

12. Mercantile license taxes, imposed by the Act of Assembly approved May 2, 1899, and by other acts, upon wholesale and retail vendors and dealers in goods, wares, and merchandise, brokers, owners and lessors of buildings, tents and menageries used for theatrical, operatic and vaudeville performances, circuses, menageries, wild west shows, and motion pictures, auctioneers, shooting galleries, shuffle board rooms, billiard and pool rooms, bowling and tenpin alleys, persons, firms and corporations carrying on restaurants, eating houses, cafes and quick lunches, wholesale and retail liquor dealers, bottlers, brewers and distillers, and peddlers, exempting billiard and pool taxes and alleys connected with hospitals, asylums, and other institutions for the relief of insane and diseased, at various rates for various businesses, but for the most numerous classes at the rate of 1 mill per dollar on the wholt volume of business from retailers and onehalf mill per dollar on the whole volume of business of wholesalers.

For the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, these mercantile license taxes yielded $3,650,222, net, to the State, exclusive of certain costs of collection, such as advertising and fees.

This tax is, in principle, a sales tax, and consequently the arguments in favor of and against a sales tax may be fairly considered as applying to it, subject, however, to special objections to the methods of application of this Pennsylvania tax as follows:

(a) It is imposed upon selected groups or classes.

(b) It is based wholly upon the volume of sales for the preceding year, without taking into consideration the unequal profit-earning capacity of the various businesses.

(c) The high cost of collection under the existing law, which varies from 4.0 per cent in Northampton County to 14.9 per cent in Lackawanna County, and averages 8.6 per cent of the gross collections. These figures do not include an appraiser's fee of 50 cents and a treasurer's fee of 25 cents for each license, the inclusion of which would materially raise the percentages given. (See Exhibit F, page 124.) On brokers' licenses the appraiser's fee is $1.00 and the treasurer's fee is 75 cents for each license issued.

It is an unusual tax in the fiscal plan of the States of the Union, and has been the subject of great criticism before the Commission.

13. Stock transfer tax, imposed by the Act of Assembly approved June 4, 1915, on persons making sales and transfers of stock at the rate of 2 cents on each $100 face value and 2 cents per share on stock without par value.

For the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, this tax yielded $201,348.

This is one of the minor taxes of the Commonwealth, which may properly be repealed in tht event of a general revision of the system because the annoyance to the taxpayer outweighs the returns to the State.

14. Anthracite coal tax is a tax at the rate of one and one-half per cent upon the value of anthracite coal prepared for the market, imposed by the Act of Assembly, May 11, 1921, yielding for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, $6,741,761.

The arguments presented in favor of this tax are:

(a) The State should be compensated for the loss of its natural resources.

(b) A sales tax on the value of coal at the mine is easily computed and collected, and is, therefore, a cenvenient and economical form of tax.

(c) In asmuch as a large portion of the anthracite coal is used outside of the State of Pennsylvania, a proportion of this tax is paid by non-residents, who enjoy this special product of the Commonwealth.

In opposition to this tax, it has been urged:

(a) It has caused a marked addition to the price of anthracite coal, by more than the amount of the tax, because royalties are sometimes based upon a percentage of the selling price of coal at the mine; and when the amount of tax is added to this price, it results in an increase in the royalties, which is pyramided as a further addition to the price.

(b) The proceeds of this tax are used entirely by the Commonwealth, although the coal is produced within a certain limited area, the natural resurces of which are being exhausted without sufficient return to the immediate community.

(c) A sales tax imposed upon one commodity is inequitable and unfair to those who are concerned with that commodity, and especially when, as in this case, the tax is not imposed upon competing products.

The nature of this tax requires that reference should also be made to the practice under the existing law of assessing coal lands, containing unmined coal, for local purposes. This matter is further discussed in this report under the present system of local taxation (see page 30), so that the entire situation, with reference to anthracite coal, may be considered.

15. Emergency profits tax, imposed by the Act of Assembly approved June 28, 1923, on all corporations, joint stock associations, limited partnerships, and companies, exempting building and loan associations and insurance companies, and also exempting income derived from Federal and state bonds, from transportation, transmission and electric light business, from anthracite coal, from dividends and rentals, paid by companies paying the gross receipts tax, and from dividends from corporations paying this tax, and from dividends received from corporations paying this tax, imposed at the rate of one-half of one per cent of net income for the years 1923 and 1924. This tax is a new feature of the fiscal system of Pennsylvania, and was enacted to meet the financial emergency of 1923.

For the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, its yield was $30,461, but the bulk of the payments on profits earned in 1923 were made after May 31, 1924. The Auditor General estimates the yield for the fiscal year 1924-25 at $3,000.000 and for the following year at $2,125,000.

The advantages of this tax may be summarized as follows:

(a) It is based upon net profits. An overwhelming consensus of opinion indicates that for business taxes is the true measure of tax-paying ability.

(b) This form of tax has become an accepted feature of the fiscal program of such representative states as New York and Massachusetts, and is apparently imposed and collected with little dissatisfaction upon the part of the taxpayer.

Its disadvantages may be briefly summarized as follows:

(a) The receipts are variable, dependent upon the conditions of business. This could be obviated by basing the tax upon the average profits of a three-year period, a method which has elsewhere proved satisfactory.

(b) It requires an additional return or blank from the taxpayer. This objection would be obviated if this were the only general business tax, for it could then be based in large measure on the data used in the Federal return, and all other returns could be eliminated.

(c) The exemptions in the Pennsylvania law made necessary by the consideration which was given to special groups of businesses, which were already paying special taxes to the State, has prevented a universal application of the law, and hence a fair test of the principle.

In general, the Commission believes that the principle of this tax is correct and that it is fair and equitable, if it should be found practicable to apply it universally in lieu of other business taxation.

B. Inheritance Taxes.

These taxes are imposed by the Act of Assembly approved June 20, 1919, and later amendments, upon all transfers of property by inheritance, at the rate of 2 per cent upon direct heirs and 10 per cent upon collaterals.

For the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, this tax yielded from resident decedents the sum of $10,087,006, from non-resident decedents $868,755, and from collections under prior acts $605,606, a total of $11,561,367.

Probably no subject of taxation has given rise to more numerous complaints before the Commission than the inheritance taxes of the State.

The advantages of these taxes may be stated as follows:

1. They fall upon those who are receiving inheritances under state law, and hence it may be fairly urged that the State has a right to tax a transfer of property, which is made possible by state law.

2. They are paid out of decedents' estates, which are frequently an unexpected addition to the resources of the beneficiary.

3. They can be readily collected at the time of the settlement of the estate.

The disadvantages, which have been presented to the Commission, are as follows:

1. These taxes are imposed upon the transfer of capital, and are generally paid from capital. They are generally collected and expended by the State for current expenses. Any tax which is paid out of capital, and which is not expended for capital improvements, is bound in time to impoverish the community.

2. The inequity of the direct inheritance tax, particularly upon small estates.

3. The inequity of taxing at so high a rate as 10 per cent legacies for charitable and religious purposes.

4. The inequity of applying the higher rate of 10 per cent on legacies to dependent collaterals.

5. The gross injustice of the tax as applied to the personal property of non-resident decedents, which is producing an income for the State relatively slight in comparison with the burden which the tax by this State, and similar taxes by other states, is imposing upon the estates of decedents.

Multiple taxation of this sort on personal property is now almost universally condemned, and it probably only requires action by a few states to bring about its general abandonment. Pennsylvania might well take the lead in a reform which seems to have such general approval.

To this end, the Commission invited the tax commissioners of several states to a joint conference which was held at Harrisburg on December 22, 1924. This conference issued a public statement, copy of which is set forth on pages 59-61. In order to bring about this much-needed reform, the Commission recommends the repeal of the tax on the personal property of non-resident decedents, on the ground that the duplication in taxation, which has resulted from the legislation of this and other states on this subject, is morally unjustifiable, and due to the sincere conviction that the enactment of this recommendation into law will lead to favorable consideration of similar measures in other states.

C. Taxes and Fees Relating to Automobiles and Liquid Fuels.

1. Liquid fuel tax, imposed by the Act of Assembly approved June 15, 1923, upon all liquid fuels, except kerosene, gas oil and fuel oil, at the general rate of 1 cent per gallon, with an emergency tax of an additional cent per gallon, for the years 1924 and 1925.

Of this tax, one-half of one cent is returned to the county, where collected, for use in the construction and maintenance of roads, and for the payment of interest on roads. The remainder of the tax is retained by the State.

For the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924, the yield to the State from this tax was $4,733,215, and the yield to the counties was $1,910,904.

The Commission believes that this tax is regarded as equitable, and that its principle meets with general approval throughout the Commonwealth. A gasoline tax, in one form or another, is now in effect in thirty-six states of the Union, and there is reason to believe that some of the states, which have not yet imposed this form of tax, will do so in the near future.

A summary of the gasoline taxes in the States of the Union is appended to this report and marked Exhibit B.

2. Motor license fees, as set forth in the Act of Assembly approved June 14, 1923, form the most important of the special funds of the Commonwealth, yielding for one fiscal year, 1923-24, $21,126,477, including approximately $2,000,000 for title registration, an income which will not be repeated in succeeding years to the same extent. The receipts are not collected by the Auditor General, but by the Department of Highways, and are paid into the State Treasury and paid out under the authority of the Department of Highways, under the terms of the same Act of Assembly. The receipts must be used for highway purposes, but at present they are not subject to appropriation by the Legislature except as defined in the Act of Assembly governing the Highway Department.

With reference to motor licenses, two complaints have been presented to the Commission as follows:

(a) That the fees of the heavy motor trucks are low in comparison to the wear and tear of such trucks upon the highways. The Commission finds that the use of the motor truck has become increasingly commercialized, and that in many cases they are used in regular systems of transportation for goods and passengers in competition with the railroads. The railroads are not only obliged to construct and maintain a right-of-way, but have also to pay the State a tax on their gross receipts. The Commission feels, therefore, (1) that the motor license fees for heavy and solid-tire trucks should be increased; (2) if the tax on gross receipts of transportation companies is to continue as a portion of the fiscal system of the Commonwealth, then obviously motor transportation companies should be brought under its terms, or if the tax is to be altered or amended, then motor transportation companies should be brought under the same classification as other transportation companies and pay the same rate of tax, in addition to the license.

(b) The larger cities of the Commonwealth have presented most urgently the advisability of a division of motor license fees, in order to equalize conditions with the country districts where the state highways are constructed and maintained by the Commonwealth from the motor license fees. To meet this situation two plans have been suggested:

(1) That the State should pay the cities from motor license fees the cost of construction and maintenance of through state highways insofar as they run within the city limits, or else assume for itself the burden of construction and maintaining such state highways within the city limits.

(2) To set apart a certain proportion of receipts from motor license fees, as, for instance, 20 per cent, to be returned to the county of origin, but to be used exclusively for highway purposes.

On the other hand, the State Department of Highways has presented with equal urgency the fact that the state system, embracing over 10,000 miles, is now almost two-thirds completed, that plans have been formulated looking toward its completion, that the entire receipts from motor licenses are urgently needed for repairs, maintenance, replacements and engineering work, and that any decided decrease of revenue from this source must be replaced either by higher license fees or added appropriations in order to preserve the present investment.

It has also been urged by others that the state highway system should be regarded as a unit, constructed and maintained upon a uniform standard for the use of all who travel the state highways, and that its funds should not be diffused into a number of local units for highway finances, most of which units would receive sums too small for effective use.

As between the two alternatives for the relief of the cities suggested above, the Commission doubts whether it would be feasible to have two highway authorities, namely, those of the State and city, exercising jurisdiction over the same road at the same time.

For the present, the Commission feels that the second alternative, viz., the division of motor license funds, should not be made effective, at least until the state system of highways shall be fully completed.

The Commission also feels that the existing tendency in the country as a whole supports the idea that the automobile should pay for the expense of the improved highway system, and that, of all forms of taxing the automobile and its owners that have been devised, the gasoline tax is to be preferred on account of its simplicity and its direct relationship to weight, speed and mileage, which are the three elements that cause wear and tear upon improved highways.

While the State's share of the gasoline tax goes into the general fund at present, yet it may fairly be considered as expended for the highways, inasmuch as the general fund bears the interest and sinking fund charges on the highway bonds.

The Commission suggests that consideration be given to the idea that the State should increase its gasoline tax and at the same time proportionately decrease its motor license charges for automobiles of all classes, except heavy trucks. In this way the tax will bear a direct relationship to wear and tear upon the roads, and also to the taxpayer's enjoyment in the use of improved roads.

D. Miscellaneous License Fees.

The State receives a revenue from more than 40 different miscellaneous licenses, of which some are paid into the general fund, some are paid into the special fund for the exclusive use of the agencies issuing the licenses, and others are retained by the State's licensing agencies without being paid into the State Treasury at all. A list of these miscellaneous licenses, insofar as they have come to the attention of the Commission, is given below:

Accountants, certified public
Agriculture
Architects
Bank examinations
Bankers, private
Boiler inspectors
Boxing and wrestling
Brewers' licenses, State
Butter, renovated
Cold storage
Dentists
Dog
Egg opening
Elevator inspectors
Employment agencies
Engineers and surveyors
Ethyl alcohol
Feeding stuffs
Fertilizers
Fishing
Hunting
Investment business
Lime
Linseed oil
Mattresses and upholstering
Medical and allied professions
Midwives
Mine foremen
Money lenders
Motion picture reels
Nurses
Oleomargarine
Optometrists
Osteopaths
Pharmacists
Securities dealers
Soliciting for charities
Stallions and jacks
Transportation ticket agents
Undertakers
Veterinarians

In general, these forms of licenses may be classified as follows:

(a) Licenses which are essentially for regulatory purposes, the fees from which ought not to materially exceed the cost of administration (that is, examination or inspection, registration, issuance of certificates, etc.).

(b) Licenses which are for regulatory purposes, but which can probably be made to yield some funds for expenditure in the interest of the group from which the fee is received.

(c) Miscellaneous taxes or licenses which are not really needed for regulatory purposes, but which are retained as sources of petty revenue, and which could be dispensed with under a fiscal system of uniform business taxes.

The yield from such of these license fees as are paid into the State Treasury is given below for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1924.

Bank examinations	$225,122
Bankers, private	700
Boiler inspectors	11,808
Boxing and wrestling	17,490
Brewers' licenses, State	7,917
Cold storage	3,700
Dog	551,459
Egg opening	1,450
Elevator inspectors	3,118
Employment agencies	17,400
Engineers and surveyors	8,570
Feeding stuffs	60,505
Fertilizers	27,910
Fishing	220,128
Hunting	606,340
Lime	1,270
Mattresses and upholstering	32,436
Money lenders	12,700
Motion picture reels	91,712
Nurses	4,182
Oleomargarine	391,167
Securities dealers	127,990
Stallions and jacks	4,000
Transportation, ticket agents	15,200
Total	$2,444,274

The game and fish license fees are special funds used for the protection and propagation of game and fish throughout the Commonwealth. The dog license fees form a special fund used for the purpose of reimbursing farmers for loss of cattle by disease, livestock and poultry killed by dogs, and for the general administration of the Department of Agriculture.

The other license fees are used for a wide variety of purposes, chiefly for the payment of the expenses of the administrative departments which issue the license or collect the fees. On behalf of the system of special funds, it has been suggested by the executives of some of the departments that this system is necessary in order to provide funds for departmental emergencies, which may become urgent in the interval of upwards of eighteen months elapsing between sessions of the General Assembly, and that in order to make funds available for such emergencies, the amount thus realized should not be subject to special appropriation by the Legislature. It has also been urged on behalf of the system that it is necessary to maintain the special funds in order to secure the cooperation of the licensees.

The Commission feels that the plan of special funds in Pennsylvania is part of a growing system which ought not to be tolerated under modern fiscal conditions. It believes that the motor license fees should be employed exclusively for highway purposes, the game and fish license fees exclusively for the propogation and protection of game and fish, and the dog license fees exclusively for the promotion of animal husbandry. But it recommends that these and all other fees should be paid into the State Treasury and appropriated to their several purposes by the General Assembly

This is the only possible method whereby the Legislature can fulfill its function, as the true appropriating authority of the Commonwealth. It is inconceivable that a system which permits certain department heads to collect revenues and dispose of them in their own discretion, can grow up side by side with a system in which other department heads will have no funds except those provided by the General Assembly. We believe that the tendency of the existing system is to encourage each department head, who does not have control of a special fund to devise some new form of licensing whereby he can have a special fund, so that he may have finances uncontrolled by the Legislature. When it is recalled that these special funds, including the motor license fees, amounted to a $36,405,074 for the year ending May 31, 1924, or over one-third of the total revenues of the Commonwealth, the seriousness of the situation is at once apparent.

Regarding the existing system as vicious, the Commission recommends the enactment of legislation which will merge the special funds, while, at the same time, maintaining the trust character of the motor, game, fish and dog license funds, and possibly other funds, for the purposes for which they are designed.

E. Local Revenues.

The Commission recognizes the fundamental importance of local taxation in our taxing system. Despite the existing separation of revenues for state and local purposes, the local governments are subject to the control of State-made laws and derive a portion of their revenues from such sources as state aid. Therefore the unity of the whole problem of taxation is apparent. The local tax, which is in theory paid by every owner of tangible property, great or small, within the jurisdiction of the State, must be studied in its relation to those taxpayers who may or may not pay state taxes in addition, or who pay state taxes but no local taxes. In the absence of reliable data in this field, due to varying assessment practices, any study of the distribution of the tax burden must be called superficial, and require more time and further data for accurate conclusions.

The revenues of local governments in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania are derived from:

1. Taxation of realty, including improvements, as authorized by the Act of Assembly approved April 29, 1844, at rates fixed in each local community by some local authority. For instance, county commissioners have a county tax, city councils have the city tax, school boards have the school tax, the borough councils have the borough tax, commissioners of townships of the first class have the township tax, road supervisors have the road tax in townships of the second class.

The yield of these taxes in Pennsylvania for the fiscal year 1922 is given below:

RECEIPTS FROM PROPERTY TAXES IN PENNSYLVANIA: 1922.

[U. S. Census Bureau.]

Counties	$29,985,000
Incorporated places, over 2,500	79,673,000
Incorporated places, under 2,500	3,529,000
School districts	96,697,000
Townships	11,783,000
All other	3,308,000
Total	[1]$224,975,000

This is the form in which what is called the realty tax in other states is imposed in Pennsylvania. There are but four states in the Union which do not have a property tax for state purposes, namely, Pennsylvania, California, Delaware and North Carolina. Because it has no state tax on realty, the State Government has had little interest in the methods of assessing and collecting the realty tax for the benefit of the local governments. As a result, there has grown up a wide variety of methods of assessment and collection of local taxes, to which special attention was given by the Commission on Assessment and Collection of Local Taxes, appointed by Governor Sproul, whose report was submitted to the General Assembly in 1921 and again in 1923.

Wherever the Commission has taken testimony, it has found a keen interest in the provisions of this report. While the bills, which were drafted to make effective the report of the Sproul Commission, have thus far failed of enactment, it is believed that this has been, in large measure, due to the organized opposition of local assessors and collectors, who feel that in some way their positions and emoluments are threatened by the proposed Act. The Commission has no hesitation in expressing its complete lack of sympathy with this point of view. It has examined the provisions of the Marshall Bill, introduced at the Session of 1921, and the Ludlow Bill, introduced at the Session of 1923, and has little hesitation in declaring that they would provide an urgently needed reform, although it is probable that in sparsely settled districts the resulting economies may not be as great as anticipated. The Commission, therefore, recommends the enactment of a law embodying the principles set forth in the report of the Sproul Commission.

In special connection with local taxes, the Commission desires to direct attention to the following:

(a) The tremendous increase in the last decade in local taxes upon land, which can neither be evaded nor, in the case of unimproved land, easily shifted. In some cases it has been testified before the Commission that the same piece of farm land, without additional improvements, paid last year five times as much taxes as ten years before. If it had been possible to secure accurate and authentic data relating to this condition for the entire State, the Commission would have made a special study of this subject. Unfortunately, the variation in assessments is so great, the taxing districts are so diverse, and the taxing conditions in some cases so peculiar, that it would be impossible, without greater time and a larger appropriation than has been given for this work, to present any general conclusions on this phase of the subject. It may be stated, however, that the expanded state program for highways and public schools has resulted in a marked increase in the burden upon local government, and the local governments have, in part, met this burden by increasing the tax on realty. The Commission is unable to determine whether the increase in the burden of taxation, considering local, state and Federal, on realty is equal to or greater than the burden upon business, but it is convinced that the burden upon both ought not to be increased and should be decreased and equalized; and in decreasing the burden upon realty it is essential that some uniform basis of assessment be adopted so that accurate comparisons may be instituted.

(b) In considering realty taxation, due attention must be given to the increasing importance of exemptions. At the present time, the realty of public utility companies necessary for the exercise of their franchises, schools and other public buildings, churches, hospitals and buildings which are used for religious and charitable purposes, universities, colleges and private schools are exempt from local taxation.

According to data of the Bureau of Statistics and Information, Department of Internal Affairs, out of a total of $8,797,197,182 assessed value for purposes of taxation of realty in the counties of Pennsylvania, $1,034,605,967 or approximately 12 per cent was exempt in 1923. Morever, it is to be noted that in some districts the exempted realty is increasing very much more rapidly than the increase in the total assessment for taxation. The people of the Commonwealth must realize that, whenever a property is exempt from realty taxation, it increases the rate of taxation of every other piece of property in the same taxing district.

The Commission feels that this rapid increase in exempt realty deserves the serious attention of the General Assembly. We could recommend that the Act of July 17, 1919, as amended, be repealed; and we would further recommend, as a general policy, that exemptions be restricted to public property, and the improvements upon such property as is used for places of worship. This would involve a change in the law relating to assessment, so as to direct each assessor, insofar as this class of property is concerned, to assess improvements separately from land. It is believed that the adoption of this recommendation would restore to local taxation a large quantity of property, and at the same time it would not discourage churches from erecting upon their land more costly structures than they could afford to own if the buildings were taxed.

When it is considered that the quantity of land in any community is limited, so that every portion that is exempt necessarily increases the tax burden upon every non-exempt land owner, the reason for this recommendation is obvious.

This recommendation involves a change in the fiscal policy of the State with reference to the exemption of realty for religious, charitable, or welfare purposes. While the Commission has reported a bill to this end, yet it feels that this recommendation should not be enacted into law until after there has been mature consideration by the citizens of the Commonwealth. It would, therefore, suggest that no action be taken on the proposed bill at the Legislative Session of 1925.

(c) The Commission is impressed with the fact that a great improvement can be made in the financial condition of the local units if the taxpayers themselves will subject the cost of their government to closer scrutiny. In Exhibit F (Table 18), appended to this report, is a statement of the cost of collecting county taxes in about half of the counties of the State, indicating that the cost of collection runs from a minimum of 3.8 per cent to a maximum of 19.7 per cent. It needs no argument to reinforce the conclusion that the maximum is entirely too great and that the compensation of borough, township and ward collectors, which in some cases amounts to from $15,000 to $18,000 per year per collector, and that the compensation of collectors in third class cities, which in some cases amounts to $25,000 per year, are grossly excessive and extravagant.

Where taxpayers have presented a well-founded complaint to the Commission, requiring legislation for correction, the Commission has included a reference to such legislation in its report. This applies to the complaint of the taxpayers leagues of several cities, that the taxpayers should not justly be saddled with the cost of maintaining a number of ward tax collectors, when the entire revenue could be collected at one place. This condition would be remedied by the enactment of such a measure as the Marshall or Ludlow Bills above referred to. But there are many cases in which the remedy is in the hands of the taxpayers themselves, and there is abundant evidence from some cities and townships that the remedy is being applied to the locality without appeal for additional legislation. If the people of the local units would elect officials who would be vigilant in allowing only reasonable compensation for services, the expenses and the taxes could be immediately reduced. There is no law that can be devised which will insure an economical and efficient administration of government to a sleeping people.

(d) The methods of assessment of lands containing minerals and metals deserve serious study. During the past few years the assessments of coal lands have been materially increased, in a large number of localities, thereby leading to a well-founded complaint that assessment on the basis of market value ought not to be applied to lands containing unmined coal and other minerals, but that the assessment should be based upon a combination of the principles of market value and output. This question has been carefully considered in some of the western states where similar conditions exist and the Commission believes that the methods of these states should be carefully studied with reference to their applicability to Pennsylvania.

The same arguments apply with some force to other natural resources, including perhaps timber. The case of timber is complicated by the distinction between mature and unmarketable or growing timber. There is the question whether the latter should not properly be treated simply as a crop. The output or yield tax as applied to timber is open to the objections of irregularity of revenue and possible arbitrary regulation of the time when the timber should be cut. No matter what the method employed, so long as there is excessive taxation, the practice of forestry on private lands will be restrained.

Further study of the theoretical advantages and practical objections of taxing natural resources on the basis of output is recommended.

2. Tax of four mills on certain classes of personal property for county purposes. This tax is imposed by the Act of Assembly approved June 17, 1913, and includes as the subjects of taxation motor busses and other conveyances for the transportation of passengers, money at interest, mortgages, bonds and stock of corporations, which do not pay on capital stock in Pennsylvania, and other interest-bearing securities.

Sepcial attention has been directed in the various hearings of the Commission to the inequalities of this tax and the difficulties in assessment and collection. For instance a savings-fund account yielding 4 per cent interest is taxable at 4 mills, which is an income tax of 10 per cent. A deposit account in a trust company yielding 2 per cent interest is taxable at 4 mills, or an income tax of 20 per cent. A mortgage yielding 6 per cent interest is taxable at 4 mills, or an income tax of six and two-thirds per cent. A stock of a foreign corporation yielding 6 per cent dividend is taxable at 4 mills, or, again, an income of six and two-thirds per cent: while upon a stock yielding a return of 12 per cent, it is equivalent to an income tax of but three and one-third per cent. A stock of a foreign corporation, which does not pay dividends but has a market value, is taxable on its value at 4 mills, which is an income tax of infinity.

The total amount of county taxes levied on personal property for the year 1924, by counties, was as follows:

There has been a general attitude of indifference toward the personal property tax on the part of both tax-collecting authorities and the taxpayers, which has resulted in making it an unfair burden upon the honest taxpayer, who sincerely desires to discharge his obligations to the government. The Commission does not believe that $9,000,000 represents the total amount which is due the counties of the Commonwealth from this source. The testimony taken before the Commission indicates that in many localities comparatively little else is collected than the tax on mortgages and judgments of record and the tax upon trust estates returned by trustees.

It has been earnestly urged upon the Commission that this is an impractical tax. It forces upon the taxpayer, who has securities in the form of bonds or stocks, the burden of determining whether or not the corporations pay taxes in Pennsylvania before deciding whether to include them in his return. It is perhaps unnecessary to remark that in many cases of doubt the doubt is resolved against the tax. Moreover, the tax is inherently unjust in its relationship to income, as the illustrations given above substantiate. The poor man, who has nothing but a savings-fund account, is taxed at a rate in proportion to his income which is grossly unfair. Again, many of the taxing authorities of the Commonwealth, who have testified before the Commission, have declared that the inherent difficulties in the way of assessment and collection of this tax are so serious as to make quite hopeless an efficient assessment of anything like all of the property to which it is to apply.

Suggestions have been made for more drastic legislation to enforce the collection of this tax, such as the Acts of Assembly approved May 31, and July 11, 1923, but it is the opinion of those who have studied this question that even additional drastic legislation along this line would add comparatively little to the return.

The remedy is to be found not so much in new and more drastic legislation as in rigid and fearless enforcement of existing law. Obviously, the extent to which this tax is evaded increases the burden upon realty. Therefore, the evasion becomes a matter of serious concern to the farmer and small home-owner.

The Commission has been much impressed, also, by its study of the development of the tax systems of other commonwealths, whose conditions are similar to those of Pennsylvania. The experience in several of the states is that, with the growth of investments in stocks, bonds and other intangable securities, it has become impossible to reach these for purposes of taxation, except through an income tax.

In Pennsylvania, the system is further complicated by the legislation of 1913, which remitted this tax to the county governments, and at the same time made the assessment of personal property a basis for the borrowing power of local government. There can be no doubt but that there are many millions of loans which have been borrowed against this assessment.

It has also been strongly urged to the Commission that the personal property tax on mortgages should be replaced by a mortgage registration tax such as prevails in New York and other states, where the rate is 5 mills on the principal of the mortgage collected at the time of recording, and where the expenses of assessment and collection is less in proportion to the amount collected than any other tax.

In view of the many complexities surrounding this phase of taxation, the Commission recommends as follows:

(a) That the Act of June 17, 1913, should be immediately amended so as to simplify so far as possible the assessment and collection of the 4 mills tax. A bill to this end is reported in the appendix.

(b) That serious consideration should be given to the plan set forth in the fourth section of this report of abolishing the personal property tax, and replacing it with a low flat-rate income tax. If it should be decided to repeal the personal property tax, it is obvious that some other method must be devised of raising the necessary revenue. In the limited time which the Commission has had, it has not been able to complete its inquiry into this phase of the subject and therefore feels that no final action upon the proposed plan should be urged until the legislative session of 1927. Without recording any conclusions, therefore, the Commission believes that this plan in all of its aspects merits sufficient consideration at this time to take the preliminary constitutional steps, so that if the plan is favorably received by the citizens of this State, the constitutional amendments which it makes necessary may be submitted to the citizen body at the election of 1927 or 1928.

3. Miscellaneous taxes, such as occupation taxes, poll taxes, per capita school tax, and the tax on horses and neat cattle.

With reference to all of the above taxes, it has been urged upon the Commission that they have outlived their usefulness in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, that they are difficult to assess and expensive to collect, and that, insofar as they are added to other taxes which the taxpayer is called upon to pay, it would be better for him and for the Commonwealth if he paid his other taxes at a slightly higher rate, and thus were relieved from the annoyance of a multitude of assessments and collections.

However, in many of the local units, now hard-pressed for funds, these taxes assist in broadening the basis of taxation, and hence they can only be repealed as a part of a general revision of the fiscal system. Moreover, the Commission recognizes the danger of exempting any considerable portion of the population from some contribution to the State. No recommendations are now made for immediate enactment with reference to these miscellaneous taxes.

Comment on the Existing Tax System in Pennsylvania.

In considering a fiscal policy for the Commonwealth, the Commission has had in mind the ordinary expenditures for the existing functions of government as defined by present legislation. For ordinary purposes it believes that the Commonwealth will require for the next biennium approximately $100,000,000 per year, and that this amount will probably be provided by the existing taxes and license fees; and that the local governmental units of the State will probably require about $300,000,000 per year, which is being provided by the existing fiscal machinery. If there should be any marked expansion of the functions of government, either by the Commonwealth or the local governmental units, a larger amount will be necessary. For instance, if the Old Age Pension Law, the constitutionality of which is now pending in the Supreme Court, shall be declared constitutional, its administration will require a marked increase in revenue, or if there should be any marked increase authorized by the Legislature in the welfare program of the State, it is probable that additional revenues must be provided. Taxes and expenditures go hand in hand. In ordinary budget-making, the latter are first determined. The situation in the Commonwealth is sufficiently acute to justify the conclusion that practically all of the revenue provided by the existing permanent taxes is needed if the present program it to be maintained.

In connection with expenditures, the Commission finds that there has been a tremendous increase in the cost of government, both state and local. The National Industrial Conference Board in a recent study has reported that during the years 1921-1923, inclusive, state and local taxes have increased nearly fifteen per cent, while Federal taxes have decreased twenty-seven per cent, and that state and local funded indebtedness has increased more rapidly than the decrease in the national debt. This increase in the cost of government is to be attributed to three factors.

(a) The rise in prices and the cost of living during the past ten years.

(b) The insistent demand of the public that certain functions which the State has assumed shall be better performed, such as highways and public schools.

(c) The continued expansion of the program of government through taking over activities which formerly were left to private resources.

The Commission has no criticism to make of a development of a program made necessary by the conditions of modern life, but it urges most strongly that, until business and commercial life in America have recovered from the staggering influence of the World War, there ought to be as little expansion of the governmental program as is possible, and that during a period of tax readjustment there should be no expansion whatever of the governmental program unless the revenue for such expansion is clearly in sight.

Moreover, the Commission feels that increasing attention should be given by our legislative bodies to the stoppage of waste and avoidance of duplication of function, the abolition of unnecessary offices and, wherever possible, to combination of functions so as to bring about a decreasing cost, This is not a subject upon which the Commission at this time can recommend specific legislation. It is a unit, however, in feeling that at a time when citizens remove from the Commonwealth to avoid the burden of state, local and excessive inheritance taxation, it is necessary that everyone having a part in the government should exercise the strictest economy until a recovery from present conditions may be had.

Admitting that the revenue from existing taxes is probably sufficient for the performance of the present functions of government, the question then arises as to whether the existing system is equitable and fair.

The tax system of Pennsylvania can scarcely be called a "system," but is rather an outgrowth of emergencies based upon numerous laws seeking a revenue from a multiplicity of subjects. In spite of its origin and defects, however, it has produced a stabilized revenue without any great difficulties of collection, and without a realty tax, except for local purposes, although with much inequality of incidence and excessive cost in administration.

Within recent years, however, this system has proved inadequate, because the expansion of government costs has proceeded more rapidly than the normal increase from our wide variety of taxes. This has led to special taxes, of which six have been enacted by the last three legislatures, and this experience suggests that it is quite probable that in the future, if the present plan continues, more and more special taxes will be enacted to meet increasing costs. The principle of diversity in taxes may be well advocated up to a certain point, but in Pennsylvania, it appears, diversity and classification have been carried to an extreme. However adequate the system may have been in the past, at the present time, with Pennsylvania spending more money each for highways and public schools than it spent for all the functions of government twenty years ago, we believe that the system must be termed inadequate.

Its advantages are:

1. The state revenue is collected indirectly, and in but few cases—if we except the inheritance taxes and the tax on anthracite coal—is the taxpayer aware that he is paying a tax to the Commonwealth.
2. It is paid in large measure by corporations, and these large units are enabled, in some measure, to shift the taxes to the consumer.

The disadvantages are:

1. The system has grown up upon the principle of taxing certain classes of business or industry. Some businesses pay several taxes, others pay none.
2. The exempted classes, because of their exemption, are the subject of ill-will from other groups in the community, which is bad from the point of view of public morale.
3. Business is sometimes organized upon such a basis as will result in minimum taxation, and thus may lead to a faulty and inefficient organization.

Tax Exemptions in Pennsylvania.

As illustrations of these evils we here append a list of exemptions from the general tax laws of the State, for the purpose of directing attention to the fact that any system of taxation based on special taxes must necessarily have large holes in the net, through which some will escape, besides distributing the burden of taxation very unequally by reason of the variety of rates and methods of application which have no common denominator of comparability.

I. Local Taxation.

A. Real Property:
1. Places of worship, burial grounds not used or held for profit, hospitals, institutions of learning, benevolence or charity, with the grounds thereto annexed, necessary for occupancy and enjoyment of the same, founded, endowed and maintained by public or private charity.
2. School houses, court houses, jails, poor houses, and all other public property used for public purposes with the ground annexed thereto, and necessary for the occupancy and enjoyment of the same.
3. All property of the Commonwealth and of the United States.
4. Playgrounds with the equipment and grounds necessary for the occupancy and enjoyment of the same, founded, endowed and maintained by public or private charity.
5. Buildings and grounds owned and occupied by a free, public, nonsectarian library.
6. Public museums and art galleries maintained by charity.
7. Real estate of public service companies necessary to the exercise of their franchises.
8. Real property owned by one or more institutions of purely pubilc charity, used and occupied partly by such owner and partly by other institutions of purely public charity, and necessary for the occupancy and enjoyment of such institutions.

B. County Four-Mills Tax:
1. Corporations, limited partnerships and joint stock associations paying the capital stock tax are exempted from further tax on mortgages, bonds and other securities owned by the corporations.
2. Public loans of the Commonwealth and of the United States.
3. Scrip, bonds, certificates, and evidences of indebtedness of private corporations, counties, cities, boroughs, townships, school distrcts, and incorporated districts taxable for state purposes.
4. Shares of stock in banks, corporations, and limited partnerships liable to a tax on its shares or capital stock for state purposes, or relieved from the payment of a tax on its shares or capital stock for state purposes.
5. Steam and street passenger railway cars.
6. Building and loan associations, savings institutions having no capital stock, fire companies, firemen's relief associations, life or fire insurance companies having no capital stock, secret and beneficial societies, labor unions and their relief associations, all beneficial organizations paying sick or death benefits from funds received from voluntary contributions or assessments.

II. State Taxation.

A. Capital Stock Tax:
1. So much of the capital stock of manufacturing and laundering companies as is actually invested in manufacturing or laundering within the State, except in the manufacture of liquors, or in manufacturing companies enjoying the right of eminent domain.
2. Manufacturers of denatured alcohol for industrial purposes.
3. Real estate corporations whose capital stock is invested in exchange halls or exhibition halls.
4. Banks, savings institutions, title insurance or trust companies, building and loan associations, and foreign insurance companies.

B. Corporate Loans Tax:
1. Certain bonds issued by municipalities for the purpose of acquiring water plants or systems.
2. Bank notes or notes discounted or negotiated by banks.
3. Building and loan associations and savings institutions having no capital stock
4. Fire companies, firemen's relief associations, life or fire insurance corporations having no capital stock, secret or beneficial societies, labor unions and their relief associations, and all beneficial organizations paying sick or death benefits from voluntary contributions or assessments of members.

C. Bonus Taxes:
1. Building and loan associations.
2. Foreign insurance companies.

D. Stock Stamp Tax:
1. Stock of building and loan associations.

E. Inheritance Tax:
1. Bequests and devises in trust, the income therefrom to care for the family burial lot.
2. Building, ground, books, curios, pictures, statutary, and other works of art transferred to municipalities, corporations and unincorporated bodies for the sole use of the public by way of free exhibition.

F. Insurance Premiums Tax:
1. Domestic insurance companies doing business upon the mutual plan without capital stock, and mutual beneficial associations.

Illustrations of Present Inequities.

To illustrate the inchoate condition of the present state and local system of taxation, and the inequitable results which it produces, a few contracts are presented from the many examples that might be cited.

A. A corporation engaged in mercantile business pays these taxes:
1. On the real estate it owns or occupies, at the local rates for county, municipal and school purposes.
2. On the actual value of its capital stock at the rate of 5 mills.
3. On borrowed money represented by bonds, debentures or certificates held by residents of Pennsylvania, at the rate of 4 mills.
4. On net profits at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent.
5. A mercantile license tax based on the amount of gross sales.

In contrast, an individual or partnership engaged in a mercantile business of precisely the same kind and size, employing the same amount of capital and earning an identical profit pays:
1. The tax on the real estate owned or occupied.
2. A mercantile license tax.

Both the corporate and unincorporate business receive precisely the same protection and service from the instrumentalities of government. The corporate enterprise pays five taxes where the unincorporated business pays but two.

It is true, the incorporated company received a charter from the State, but for that it paid a tax at the rate of one-third of one per cent upon its capitalization, which should compensate the Commonwealth for any advantage which the mere fact of incorporation confers, apart from privileges which are inherent in the nature of the business as distinct from incorporation.

B. An electric light company chartered as such pays a tax of 8 mills on its gross receipts. A company chartered as a water power company, if engaged also in the electric light business, pays no tax upon the gross receipts of the electric business.

C. As pointed out elsewhere in this report, there are instances where a State bank may pay the State as little as one-twentieth of one per cent upon its capital fund, whereas a trust company engaged in precisely the same kind of business, earning the same rate of profit and enjoying no privilege in which the bank can not participate, pays the State a tax of one-half of one per cent upon its capital fund, which would be ten times as much as that paid by the bank upon an equal amount of capital fund.

D. A manufacturing plant in Philadelphia pays local taxes upon the real estate only of the plant. Elsewhere in the State an exactly similar plant pays local taxes upon the machinery and equipment as a part of the real estate.

E. In Pittsburgh, railroads pay city taxes upon their real estate (other than right of way). In most other municipalities such real estate is exempt from local taxes.

F. In general, subject to some minor exceptions, public utilities (gas, water, power, electric, telephone, telegraph, railroad and street railway) pay no local taxes upon their real estate, although receiving the same police, fire, sewerage, highway, sanitary and other protection and services as other real estate in the same community. The public utilities do pay large amounts in taxes to the State, but municipalities which render greater service to them than the State receive no contribution toward the maintenance of those services.

G. A dependent sister, who has kept the house for an unmarried brother and helped him accumulate the estate he leaves at death, upon receiving a legacy from the brother, must give one-tenth of it to the State. An independent son inheriting a like amount from the father contributes one-fiftieth to the State. Upon an inheritance of $10,000 the dependent sister, who may have made the accumulation possible, pays $1,000. Upon an inheritance of the same amount ($10,000) the son who is not dependent, being abundantly able to earn his own living by reason of expenditures made by the father for education, etc., has to pay but $200 in taxes.

H. Insurance companies are taxed upon the amount of premium receipts. Foreign companies are allowed to deduct from the gross amount of premiums such sums as have been returned to policy holders upon surrender of unexpired policies, and also such sums as are paid to other insurance companies for reinsurance. Domestic (Pennsylvania) insurance companies are not permitted these deductions. Consequently they pay upon gross premium receipts while their competitors, foreign companies, pay only on the net premiums actually received.

J. In the old City of Pittsburgh the real estate (other than right of way) of railway companies is assessed for taxation, but in the County of Allegheny, of which Pittsburgh is a part, such real estate is non-taxable for county purposes. Per contra, the county of Allegheny can tax the machinery and equipment of manufacturing plants but the City of Pittsburgh can not. These differences make necessary two separate assessments of property in the City of Pittsburgh, one for purposes of municipal taxation, the other for county taxation.

Many other examples of the confused and inequitable application of taxation in Pennsylvania can be adduced, but enough has been said to indicate the need for thoroughgoing revision.

Because of the foregoing considerations, the Commission herewith recommends the enactment of certain legislation, a summary of which will be found in Section II of this report, for the purpose of improving the existing system. It is believed that all of this legislation may fairly be recommended for consideration to the General Assembly of Pennsylvania at the Session of 1925, involving as it does no fundamental change of system, but merely improvements in the existing law.

SECTION II.

SOME RECOMMENDATIONS FOR IMMEDIATE STATUTORY CHANGES IN THE EXISTING TAX SYSTEM.

In this section of the report we give a brief summary of the legislation prepared at the request of the Commission for the purpose of immediately remedying some of the inequalities of taxation. The text of the various bills and joint resolutions proposed by the Commission appears as Exhibit C of this report. This legislation, if enacted, would not establish a permanent policy of taxation for the State, but the Commission believes it would abolish many existing ills.

1. Corporate loans tax. The Commission recommends an amendment to Section 17, Act of June 17, 1913, P. L. 507, as amended, which imposes this tax. The purpose of the amendment is to discontinue the collection of the four mill loans tax on bonds and other forms of indebtedness issued by counties, cities, boroughs, townships, school districts and incorporated districts. The proposed amendment is included with other amendments to the Personal Property Tax Act of 1913, later referred to. (Draft of Bill, No. 1, Section 2, page 67.)

2. Corporation bonus on charters. The Commission recommends a decrease in the bonus tax on the capital stock of corporations, limited partnerships and joint stock associations from one-third of one per cent upon the authorized capital to one-tenth of one per cent. The Commission has prepared an amendment to the Act of May 3, 1899, P. L. 189, to accomplish this purpose. (Draft of Bill, No. 2, page 69.)

3. Gross receipts tax. The Commission recommends an amendment to Section 23, Act of June 1, 1889, P. L. 420, which imposes this tax. The amendment provides for the collection of this tax from persons, individuals, companies, joint stock associations, and limited partnerships engaged in freight, passenger, oil and motor transportation, and also from water-power and hydro-electric companies. (Draft of Bill, No. 3, page 71.)
